Norwalk brings back military banner program

Jami Trinidad: I don't think it should be a priority. Certainly not above schools, services to families and children, support for the homeless population, addressing poverty, housing... the list can go on and on.

We should support our troops with healthcare (including mental health), substance abuse programs, job training, housing, education, etc; not with banners, plaques, memorials, and other empty gestures.

Violet Valencia: No, it's definitely not a priority but it is the least we can do to show our appreciation to the men and women that risk their lives for this country.

Adan Tellez: There are better things to spend this money on. The parks play areas need upgrading with decent play areas. It seems like a person with no kids chose the play equipment.

Stephen Wood: Good for Norwalk. That's the proud thing to do.

Shared Stories: What does happiness mean?

Agustin Duran has been a Spanish-language journalist in the United States for many years. Here he reflects on a question that we all grapple with – what is happiness? Shared Stories is a weekly column featuring articles by participants in a writing class at the Norwalk Senior Center. Bonnie Mansell is the instructor for this free class offered through the Cerritos College Adult Education Program. Curated by Carol Kearns

By Agustin Duran

I was 23 years old when I decided to abandon my mother, my father, and my siblings. I wanted to run away from my house and all those family reunions that we had almost every other weekend. My main purpose was to find happiness, improve my English, travel, and visit another country for the first time.

I wanted to find a good job that would allow me to buy all the things that my parents couldn't afford. But 25 years later, I am still looking for that idea of happiness that I now believe only existed in my mind.

Back in 1979 when I was 10 years old, I think I was a happy kid, but I can't really say it because I don't remember even thinking about it. I grew up with my mom, dad, three brothers, and three sisters in a small house outside of Mexico City. We did not have many material possessions, but my parents always made sure we had food on the table and a roof over our head.

To be honest, at that age I didn't care too much about everything and I didn't know much either. My biggest concern was playing soccer on the street with my friends. My dream was to become a professional soccer player and earn enough money to buy a big house and have a lot of toys and possessions, like the beautiful people in TV commercials with big smiles on their faces who seemed to have everything.

During the first 10 years of my life, the population in Mexico grew so fast that in the decade of the 80's, it became known as the largest populated city in the world. During that time, most of the families had an average of five to seven children and usually the father went out to work while the mother took care of their kids.

There weren't many opportunities in the urban areas because society was growing rapidly. Many people went out to live in the suburbs. In many cases, they lived without having the basic services at all, but people manage to survive.

Even though the community we lived in was considered one of the low-income areas, we didn't mind because at that time we didn't associate having money with being happy. It wasn't until the 70's, when the television became the main source of entertainment for most people, that we realized how poor we were.

During my teenage years I always complained to myself about the conditions we lived in because I could not have what I wanted. Nevertheless, I remember my older brothers telling me that I was the lucky one in the family because I hadn't suffered at all. By the time I was born, our house already had power, running water, and a full bathroom.

One of the questions I disliked the most was when people would ask, "What are you going to be when you grow up?" Most likely it bothered me because I didn't know what to answer.

I recall being next to two of my older sisters when a teacher asked the oldest one the same question. Her response was, "A journalist."

My other sister gave the same answer. So, when it was my turn I also said I wanted to be a journalist even though I didn't know what it was. After that, every time someone asked me, I always gave the same response.

By the time I was 20, I was already on my way to becoming a journalist, although I was still very ignorant about the injustices and inequalities that prevail in most societies. However, I believe that the busy trend of life doesn't allow us to see the whole picture of the problem and in many ways, people remain busy trying to find their own happiness, fulfilling their material needs.

According to Socrates, the Greek philosopher, "Happiness flows not from physical or external conditions such as wealth and power, but from living a life that's right for your soul. If you don't know what's good for your soul, then you will be misled into pursuing happiness based on what's conventional or easy."

Right after I finished college, I came to the United States looking for a stable job that would allow me to have a better life. Ironically, I left my house, my family and friends - all those things that during my first 23 years of existence made my life easier, and I would even say happy, without even realizing it.

I promised my family that I would go back in a couple of years speaking English, so I could get a better job and with some money in my pocket, so we would live happily ever after. Twenty-five years later, I never went back to live there and most of my family has never come to visit me.

At the age of 30, I was already living in Los Angeles. I was lucky enough to have a small business, a career, and a house of my own. By then, I asked myself if I was finally happy. My answer was NOT really. Even though I had a beautiful wife and a great son, my thoughts about my family in Mexico never left me.

Nevertheless, it wasn't just the need for my family in Mexico. By the time I reached 40, I was more aware about the injustices and inequalities that exist in almost every single society, including in the richest country in the world. So it was impossible for me to pretend that one day I would find happiness when there is so much pain and suffering all around caused by Mother Nature and by us humans.

Now I am 48 and have concluded that the idea of happiness associated with material possessions, achievements, and pleasures is very relative. I am certain those factors can provide some level of satisfaction, but regarding happiness, real happiness, I'm not sure exactly what that means.

The best thing I can do is try to enjoy the moment I am living now, not in the future, not in the past, but today. Value every day the people and things around me and never stop living without a purpose.

County brings back crash assemblies for teens

LOS ANGELES – In an effort to make roads safer and to get teens to drive safer, County Supervisors Janice Hahn and Sheila Kuehl are providing grants to bring the award-winning In One Instant Teen Safe Driving Program free-of-charge to their districts’ schools.

In One Instant attempts to reach teens on an emotional level, showing them that they have immense power over their own driving decisions and life choices. It also motivates them to promote safe driving behaviors throughout their communities.

The program is designed to be peer-driven. Teens are encouraged to become In One Instant Student Leaders, receiving oversight from a designated school staff member as well as guidance by the In One Instant team.

School administrators can also implement In One Instant, while involving students in its presentation.

The program kicks off with the one period long In One Instant Video Assembly. It opens with an award-winning short film that tells the stories of teen car crash victims. The video culminates with an montage celebrating the priceless value of life, with the ballad “I Was Here” performed by Beyoncé.

The program leaders will often book a guest speaker (such as a crash survivor or first responder) and create a campus exhibit of a demolished car embellished with “teen roadside memorials.” The program’s written guides offer follow-up activities to spur teens to promote the safe-driving choices that are essential for saving lives on the roads.

Students, administrators, and parents can start the process of bringing the program to their schools and communities, by emailing info@inoneinstant.org.

Reminder: During an earthquake, drop and take cover

LOS ANGELES – The recent 3.6 magnitude earthquake that struck near Westwood at 11:20 p.m. on Monday and 7.1 magnitude earthquake near Raboso, Mexico on Tuesday prompted a reminder from Los Angeles County authorities that a catastrophic earthquake could occur at any time.

The County of Los Angeles Chief Executive Office, Office of Emergency Management (OEM) wants to remind all County residents and businesses to take the necessary steps now to prepare for earthquakes and other hazards and threats.

The following are some preparedness tips on what to do during an earthquake, provided by the Office of Emergency Management:

■ If you experience shaking, the recommended actions are to drop under a piece of furniture. Take cover under the piece of furniture by protecting your head and neck with one arm/hand. Hold on to the piece of furniture’s leg to keep it from shifting or uncovering you until the shaking completely stops.

Never run out of buildings during an earthquake as most people are injured by falling debris as they try to exit buildings during the shaking.

■ If you experience shaking and are in a wheelchair or walker, lock your wheels; cover your head and neck area with a pillow or some type of object that will deflect the debris from falling on to you.

■ When you are in public places, be aware of your surroundings and identify your safe spaces.

■ To receive emergency notifications, register your cellular telephone and landlines at Alert LA County, go to lacounty.gov/emergency/alert-la.

Also, Los Angeles County residents, renters, and business owners, including persons with disabilities and others with access and functional needs, may call 211 LA County at any time for emergency preparedness information.

Whittier High alumnus returns to inspire students

WHITTIER – William C. Gordon may have graduated from Whittier High School more than 60 years ago, but the philanthropist, attorney and author has never forgotten the school that provided him refuge as a teen nor his commitment to upholding what it means to be a Cardinal with CLASS.

Gordon, a 1955 graduate, returned on Sept. 8 to his alma mater and the library where he set out his future path, to provide more than 800 students the inspiration to overcome obstacles, succeed and give back to the community – just as he did.

“My roots are deep in the community, and this library changed my life,” Gordon said.

Over the course of the morning, Gordon shared his tale of growing up in a single-parent home, being a shoe shiner in downtown Los Angeles as a child, speaking more “Spanglish” than English and finding refuge in the Whittier High library to avoid neighborhood gang members.

“When I was 14 years old, I was in this library when I realized that I needed to make a change – I decided that if I wanted to do well in life, I had to do well in school, and I began to study,” he said.

Gordon’s audience: Students in Guided Study support and special education classes, English learners or those who simply need motivation.

Gordon described how he worked to become an exceptional student in college prep courses and participated in extracurricular activities, becoming a senator and Associated Student Body president during his senior year. He was also awarded the Cardinal Key, Whittier High’s most prized graduation award for students who embody citizenship, leadership, achievement, self-respect and service to the community (CLASS).

In recent years, the Whittier High alumnus has donated dozens of books and more than $230,000 to the school to fund technology upgrades, campus murals and renovate the library with new furniture, paint and an Alumni Hall of Fame showcase. The facility was dedicated the William C. Gordon Library in 2015.

“His story is empowering because a lot of people didn’t believe in him and I feel like he speaks to a lot of us who feel that way,” Whittier High School Junior Jeanette Peña said. “Willie Gordon is such an inspiration and contributor to the community. He stayed true to his roots and continues to give back to Whittier High School. He is the definition of Cardinal CLASS.”

After graduating high school, Gordon earned a bachelor’s degree in English from UC Berkeley. He joined the Army and later obtained a law degree from UC Hastings College of Law in San Francisco, becoming a civil litigator and community activist for Latinos with work-related injuries.

At age 60, Gordon began writing mystery novels; he has since published seven books.

Over the past several years, Gordon has held joint educational events and fundraisers for Whittier High School and Whittier College; donated a cart with 40 iPads to his alma mater, Los Nietos Middle School; and donated funds to enhance the learning center in Santa Fe Springs. In 2009, he was inducted into Whittier High’s Alumni Association Hall of Fame.

During the visit, Gordon participated in Whittier High’s Back to School assembly, where he was given a standing ovation and formally thanked for his generous donations.

Sports Recap: GGG-Canelo fight to draw thanks to controversial scorecard

■ SPORTS: Judge Adalaide Byrd scored the fight 118-110 in Canelo's favor, when most had GGG winning.

By William Odis-Martin
Contributor

Arguably the "Fight of the Year" ended in a controversial draw last Saturday as Gennady "Triple G" Golovkin seemed to dominate the majority of the championship fight against Saul "Canelo" Alvarez by landing nearly 50 more punches.

Judge Adalaide Byrd's questionable scorecard was extremely lopsided in Canelo Alvarez's favor, scoring the bout 118-100, though Canelo only decisively won four rounds on my card. Judge Dave Moretti scored the fight 115-113, while Don Tello scored it 114 a piece.

HBO's Harold Lederman said after the the results were announced, "118-110 for Canelo? No that did not happen. That is fiction, unfortunately." Lederman scored the fight eight rounds to four in Triple G's favor.

Golovkin controlled the center of the ring throughout the fight. Triple G worked the jabs and relentlessly pressed the fight. Golovkin nearly landed twice as many jabs as Canelo 108-55.

Canelo was successful in landing some impressive power counterpunches but none seemed to faze the champ. Canelo landed great body shots while Triple G seemed to respect the counter punching prowess of the Mexican because he practically avoided any attempt at attacking the body. Golovkin only landed eight punches to the body the whole fight.

Canelo looked weaker than Golovkin since he moved up two weight classes to face the best natural middleweight fighter in the world, but Triple G looked slow. Golovkin was most effective when he managed to cut the ring off and corner Alvarez on the ropes.

Besides the lopsided scorecard that screams corruption, boxing fans cannot be upset by what they saw in the ring last Saturday night in Las Vegas. It was a great fight overall but proves that if you leave it up to the judges, anything can happen.

I scored it 115-113, and I have no idea what Adalaide Byrd was watching during the fight but it wasn't the same fight millions tuned into from around the world. I would like to see a toxicology report or have her take a lie detector examination that she judged this bout fairly to her best of her ability.

ESPN boxing commentator Teddy Atlas called out the entire sport of boxing following the night in an justifiable yet borderline irate rant saying, "The environment and landscape of the sport is set up for corruption."

Atlas points out that this faulty result is not an isolated incident. He blames the fact that promoters are allowed to hand select judges. The frustration overflows from him because this is a tale that he knows too well from dedicating his life to the sport for over the last 50 years.

Byrd has judged 115 title fights prior to the Triple G vs Canelo match, which makes one think what other fights did she tarnish with questionable scorecards.

On the undercard local talent, Joseph "JoJo" Diaz Jr. defeated Rafael Rivera in a 12 round Featherweight fight with a unanimous decision. Diaz remained undefeated, improving to 25 victories with 13 coming by knockout. Diaz officially fights out of South El Monte but resides in Downey.

RAMS: The Rams' ineffective front seven got dominated at the line of scrimmage last Sunday, allowing three Washington Redskins running backs to each rush for nearly 70 yards a piece in the 27-20 loss at home.

Although the (1-1) Rams were able to make some crucial adjustments at the half to slow down the three-headed rushing attack of the Skins, it was too little too late.

Even with the highly anticipated return of star defensive lineman Aaron Donald, the LA defense looked outmatched in the trenches.

Pro bowl running back, Todd Gurley, carried the Rams offense with his two touchdowns and managed to keep the game relatively close.

Gurley rushed for 88 yards and a touchdown, and caught three passes for 48 yards and a touchdown.

In one of the most impressive highlights of his young career, Gurley hurdled a Skins defender en route to the end zone to complete the dazzling 18-yard receiving touchdown in the 3rd Quarter, reducing the Rams' deficit to just a field goal.

In the 4th, kicker Greg Zuerlein booted an equalizing 40-yard field goal with a little more than 7 minutes remaining. Plenty of time for Kirk Cousins and company to mount a methodical drive down the field that resulted in a 11 yard touchdown toss to Ryan Grant for his only reception of the game.

Unfortunately, most of the emerging headlines this week were focused around the attendance of the Coliseum-- or lack thereof. Of course, anyone familiar with LA sports knows that for the most part, the city is plagued with fair-weather fandom.

It will take a couple consecutive playoff runs before the seats begin to fill and team loyalty manifests. What do you expect from a city that was neglected by the league for generations.

The Rams will have a short week to prepare for a winless 49ers team that is still looking for an identity under new coach Kyle Shanahan and quarterback Brian Hoyer. The lackluster 49ers will also be looking for its first touchdown of the post-Kaepernick era.

CHARGERS: The Chargers remain winless, falling to 0-2 on the season, after losing to the (1-0) Miami Dolphins last Sunday at the StubHub Center, 19-17.

Philip Rivers has looked as sharp as ever in his 14th season, completing 53-of-72 passes on the year for a completion percentage of 73.6%.

Rivers found Gates in the endzone for the 112th time in their hall-of-fame careers, placing Gates in first alltime above Huntington Beach legend Tony Gonzalez for most TDs by a TE.

Chargers running back, Melvin Gordon had another forgettable performance, though he was able to find pay dirt. On his nine carries, Gordon amounted a pitiful 13 yards in the game. He finished averaging less than a yard and a half per carry.

The Chargers are now ranked 31st out of the league's 32 teams in rushing yards per game.

Gordon has just 67 yards rushing this season on 27 attempts. He has been more effective catching passes out of the backfield. The Chargers 2015 first round pick has caught 12 passes for 90 yards and a touchdown through the first two games of the season.

Chargers wide receiver, Keenan Allen proved to be Rivers' most dependable playmaker. Allen finished the game with 100 yards, hauling in 9-of-10 passes.

This Sunday will be another uphill climb for the Bolts as the undefeated Kansas City Chiefs come to town. The Chiefs have one of the most balanced teams in the league, led by head coach Andy Reid, and are ranked second in ESPN's Power Rankings.
