Violence in Norwalk is rising, and officials need to act

COMMENTARY: Violent shootings have made Norwalk unsafe, and it's time for the City Council to act.

By Raul Samaniego
Contributor

NORWALK – In a month where we have seen numerous violent episodes including the wounding of a resident in south Norwalk, the homicide of a man near Excelsior Drive and Pioneer Boulevard, and numerous shooting episodes within our city's boundaries, I felt compelled to address the joint special meeting of the Norwalk City Council along with interim city manager James Parker, public safety director Carlos Ramos, Los Angeles County Sheriff's Captain Jim Tatreau and liaison Lt. Mike Inge.

This was done during the public comment portion of the public forum. I was the sole speaker.

Here is the body of that address:

Good evening. I am addressing you tonight as a resident of the City of Norwalk. Many of you and I have sat together in formal and informal situations. Some topics have been deemed "on the record," some have been deemed "off."

We've shared ideas, thoughts and scenarios.

We've laughed, we've sighed, and we've rubbed our heads for the same reasons. Some of us share even closer ties. We've gone to the same high school, community college and even the same university.

We in Norwalk are dealing with continuing violence including the murder, wounding and senseless shootings in just the last seven days.

The Council recently took measures to direct the city in "another direction." However, we cannot rest. We need action now.

I am speaking to the entire city council. This is not the time to await a consensus vote or see what the tendency of your fellow elected officials are.

Additionally, you, interim city manager James Parker, in your expanded role as a public servant, are tasked with the moving forward expeditiously regarding this public safety concern.

People are dying on the streets of Norwalk. It makes no difference if they carry a label, a look or nothing discerning at all.

Will it take a stray bullet going into a house, then into a sleeping child or adult to have you take a reactive stance? Be proactive.

I am not an observer anymore. I am now a witness (again) in these crimes against my community, our community. Your community.

Norwalk is not a war zone, yet the sounds of war and it aftermath are now present.

Those sitting in front, like me, are residents. Those sitting besides me, may be visitors or employees. We are all a team.

As a team:

If we do not have the resources, get them.

If we do not have the resolve, find it.

If we cannot find the will, step aside.

For those of you who have never had a loaded weapon pointed at you or who have not heard the sound of a bullet spinning over your head, I hope you never do.

However, I am not one to offer concerns without suggestions.

Bring back the community-based Sheriff teams. If they exist now, bring them out of their seemingly covert existence. They are needed now.

Find resources. Here is the Homeland Security website on Grants available: <https://www.dhs.gov/how-do-i/find-and-apply-grants>

While we are a predominately Hispanic community with immigrant based roots, we no longer have a resident base with just one language defined as "other than English." We need advocates who can reach out to our Philippine, Chinese and other emerging languages in our communities. All Americans don't speak just English as their primary language.

Like some of you who have joined me walking door to door to address resident concerns, add teams of outreach members who actually visit residents when they are home, specifically on Saturdays or Sundays.

Redirect current resources from whatever funds are available.

Redefine our Public Safety Department to what it is, a public city hall ambassador. I do not want our senior aged or young people who are not law enforcement placed in a situation which clearly now dictates an increase in law enforcement personnel is required. Boots on the ground if that is the language you understand.

Find, allocate, and create funds for safety equipment rebates including: outside lighting, surveillance systems, removal of cover (Large vehicles, overgrown shrubbery).

Upgrade street lighting in those areas deemed too dark.

Confirm and implement the technology for the location of cell phone 911 callers.

This real or perceived delay in responding to emergency calls is unacceptable in this era of smart technology.

Granted, I may be in a position where I can contact any elected official directly or public servant through the bureaucracy of city hall "gate keepers," I assure you, the safety of the residents and visitors of Norwalk is at my highest concern.

Don't ignore those bug bites -- virus risk is real, health officials say

PUBLIC HEALTH: 17 new cases of West Nile virus were reported in Los Angeles County last week.

LOS ANGELES – On Monday, Supervisor Janice Hahn and the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health held a press conference to provide an update on increases in cases of West Nile virus, and the continued risk of Zika virus in Los Angeles County.

Public Health will conduct a countywide mosquito-borne disease public health campaign, titled "It's Not Just A Bite" to inform residents about the continued risk of West Nile virus and Zika virus infections and to promote actions people can take to protect themselves and their communities from mosquito-borne diseases.

"We can't take it for granted that a mosquito bite is just an annoying itch, because it can make you sick," said Hahn. "It is imperative that we inform our residents about steps that we all can take to really make a difference and prevent mosquito-borne diseases."

"Starting today, Public Health will deploy 100 teams across the county to deliver packets to over 20,000 local businesses, community buildings, houses of worship and schools with health education materials and easy steps everyone can take to prevent bites," said Barbara Ferrer, PhD, Director of Los Angeles County Department of Public Health.

"Vector control districts have been knocking doors, educating residents, and working tirelessly to eliminate mosquito breeding sites, but we can't do it alone," Truc Dever, General Manager, Greater Los Angeles County Vector Control District. "Mosquito-borne disease prevention is about shared responsibility, and we all must take action now to eliminate standing water where mosquitoes can breed in our own yards and use approved insect repellents when mosquitoes are present.

Together, we can make LA County mosquito-free and free of mosquito-borne diseases."

"You can decrease the risk of mosquito-borne diseases by regularly using mosquito repellents containing EPA-registered ingredients such as DEET and wearing long-sleeved shirts and long pants when you are outdoors," said Jeffrey Gunzenhauser, MD, MPH, Interim Health Officer for Los Angeles County.

Last week, 17 new cases of West Nile virus were reported in Los Angeles County, including three deaths among elderly patients who died due to neuro-invasive West Nile virus infection. The total number of West Nile virus cases and deaths in Los Angeles County this year is 98 cases and six deaths.

To date, no Zika virus infections have been acquired locally in Los Angeles County. However, the Aedes mosquito that can carry and spread Zika is present in some areas of the county posing a risk that infection could occur here.

Shryock went on to say that it was former city manager Mike Egan who made him aware of the video on Sept 6. Two days earlier, the council in a closed-door meeting voted 3-2 to sever its relationship with Egan.

On Sept. 12, council members officially voted 4-0 to fire Egan as city manager.

Asked for an interview Sept. 18 on the steps of City Hall, human resources director Cathy Thompson stated, "I don't want to talk to the press right now." No further comment was given.

The video, received via an anonymous source along with a USB drive and letter, described "How a group of Recreation Leaders and Public Safety Officers have created a culture and atmosphere of reckless behavior..."

The letter states that, "...a former councilman removed the qualification of needing a college degree to be supervisor."

The letter refers to Rosie Lozoya, who was hired as a Recreation Supervisor despite lacking a bachelor's degree, a requirement for the job, according to the city's official job posting.

Monica Horton-Frey: The constant sound of fireworks in the neighborhood during any month of the year has left my ears so numb that when you hear them, you don't even think about it being a gunshot. We heard that sound last night and thought it was fireworks.

Our City leaders are not doing enough to curb the increasing violence in our community, which is unacceptable. This is very sad; may he rest in peace.

Downey faces lawsuit after blocking apartment residents from street parking

PARKING: Responding to complaints, City Council restricted overnight parking on Shellyfield Road to street residents only.

By Eric Pierce
Editor

DOWNEY – The battle between Downey homeowners and renters over available street parking intensified this week after a property management company promised to sue the City of Downey over its use of preferential parking districts.

The City Council voted in 2015 and again Sept. 12 to create a preferential parking district on Shellyfield Road, between Cecilia and Muller streets, which limited overnight street parking to residents living on Shellyfield.

The district was created in response to a petition from Shellyfield residents, who complained that renters from local apartment buildings were taking up all available street parking.

L'Abri Management Inc., a property management company that operates the nearby 149-unit Stonewood Village apartment complex, said the parking district was "prejudice against renters and for homeowners."

"We had hoped the City would give some consideration to renters in the Cecilia, Shellyfield and Clancy neighborhoods," Ron Kolar, president of L'Abri, wrote in a letter to Downey council members.

"Unfortunately this is not the case. So this is why it is necessary to file a lawsuit."

L'Abri also promised to file a court injunction "to keep the City from creating any additional preferential parking district benefitting homeowners at the expense of renters."

One resident of Shellyfield, Oscar Checa, said homeowners are not prejudiced against renters. "What we don't agree with is renters living on others streets coming to park on Shellyfield," he said.

"Most of the cars that did not live there would come and leave trash, beer bottles on the street or your lawn," he said. "On trash pickup day they would move your trash cans in front of your driveway so they can park there and you can't get out of your own driveway in the morning or would park so close to the trash cans that the truck could not pick them up."

City Council members discussed the potential litigation in closed session Tuesday.

Excursion to Norton Simon Museum

Shared Stories: Life at the Sawmill

After World War II, Belle Fluhart’s young family lived near the sawmill where her husband worked. Conditions were primitive, but she made the place a home. Shared Stories is a weekly column featuring articles by participants in a writing class at the Norwalk Senior Center. Bonnie Mansell is the instructor for this free class offered through the Cerritos College Adult Education Program. Curated by Carol Kearns

By Belle Fluhart

I had the ability to take whatever situation I found myself in, do whatever I could to improve it, and be happy and content. I was able to pass this on to George and Jimmy. We were a real cute little family. Always smiling, always happy.

Everyone liked us except Uncle Bert and George’s father, Selden. Selden loved George and Jimmy, but he never called me anything but “George’s wife.”

We were living in the redwoods in Northern California. We were out in the woods. REALLY out in the woods.

We had no water, no electricity, and no plumbing. The three of us, my husband George, my five-year-old son Jimmy, and I were living in a 9’ X 12’ tent by the sawmill. George had dug a moat around the bottom of the tent so that the almost daily rain would run off and down the hill.

I was doing the cooking for my little family, plus George’s father, and his Uncle Bert. The cook stove was a big black cast iron range, fueled by wood, sitting on the ground with a makeshift wood canopy to shed the rain.

As long as I was cooking for everyone Uncle Bert bought the groceries. He never took me to the store, just had me make a list. Uncle Bert’s attitude toward a woman was that she was a work-horse, not entitled to any appreciation, no matter what she did.

A neighbor stopped by to tell me that there was a makeshift, one-room cabin nearby that was only a little better than the tent. He was a tall man taking huge strides. I didn’t care how “little better” it was, I was running to keep up with him.

We arrived at the structure. It was board and batten on the outside, with nothing on the inside, a roughhewn door, with no porch or steps. And, horror of horrors – no window!!

But to say I was thrilled was an understatement. I had brought with me a room-sized rug, our beds, an oil heater, and a travel-trailer-size propane range. I could make a real nice little home for us here. George set about building a table to set against the wall and a bench.

I sent George to fill my 13-gallon propane tank and fuel oil for the heater.

I told George, “I cannot live without a window.” He came in with a wind-wing out of an old wrecked car, and said, “Where do you want your window?”

I said, “Right here where I’ll be fixing supper. I can see you walking up from the mill.” He immediately cut a hole for it and I had a window.

Uncle Bert didn’t see why I wanted a propane range when there was plenty of firewood.

Like the song, “Mama Don’t Allow,” I felt, “I don’t care what Uncle Bert don’t allow, I’m gonna have my propane range any old how.”

I had a Pillsbury recipe for “No Knead Bread” and was dying to try it. I measured my little oven, side to side, front to back, and top to bottom. There were two shelves in it.

At the one and only store, 15 or 20 miles away, I bought two very small loaf pans – about the size of a ½ slice of bread. These would be good for Jimmy’s sandwiches. I also bought two round pans for rolls and two rectangular pans for coffee cakes. With careful planning, these six pans could bake a double recipe of the bread.

George had the stove set up, and as soon as George and Jimmy were out of my way, I started my bread. When they came home, the bread was out of the oven cooling and smelling “heavenly.”

From then on, I baked bread at least once a week. If I was not able to bake, and had to buy a loaf of bread, both Gorge and Jimmy acted as if I didn’t love them anymore.

My only close neighbor, who lived up on the hill, came and offered to take my now six-year-old Jimmy the 12 miles over the hill to the bridge, where the school bus picked up the students and dropped them off in the afternoon.

She said there may be a time when she could not pick them up. Would I be able to go for them? I said, “Sure.” I had never driven alone, but what’s so hard about that?

Later on, the other mothers marveled that the first time I had driven alone, I knew what to do when I came up behind a slow-moving logging truck. I had shifted down and crept up the hill behind it.

I had learned something else that first time driving alone. I had introduced myself to the other mothers and said that Jimmy Fluhart is my son.

Two of the mothers said in unison, “You’re the one who bakes that bread that is so good that all of our kids are trying to take something good enough to trade him out of his sandwiches.”

I didn’t say anything in front of the other mothers, but when we got home, I told Jimmy that, “I strive every day to provide you with a well-balanced lunch, but if you are going to trade away your sandwiches, I’ll just stop baking bread and you’ll get baker’s bread.”

He said, “I’m sorry, Mommy, I didn’t think about it, but you’re right. I won’t ever trade away what you send in my lunch.”

I said, “That’s good, Jimmy,” and tried even harder to always bake. When I did and Jimmy came home, he would come dancing across the yard saying, “My mommy’s making brea-ed, my mommy’s making brea-ed.”

When I baked more often, I tried to give some to my neighbor who took Jimmy to the school bus. I was always rewarded with some eggs and/or something from her garden.

I was always excited when she included some tomatoes. I told her. “There are two things that money can’t buy. One is true love. The other is a home-grown tomato.” After that she always included tomatoes in her care package.

I had meant the bread as a gift in appreciation of her kindness to me. But I was always so happy to receive her care package.

PROBATE

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF SHIRLEY ANN WALLACE aka SHIRLEY WALLACE, SHIRLEY McDONALD
Case No. 17STPB06974

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of SHIRLEY ANN WALLACE aka SHIRLEY WALLACE, a decedent, A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Lorenzo M. Wallace in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Lorenzo M. Wallace be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on Oct. 17, 2017 at 8:30 AM in Dept. No. 5 located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 10/20/17 at 8:30AM in Dept. 11 located at 111 N. HILL ST., LOS ANGELES, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property.

You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder, you may be liable for the sale. YOU MAY BE RESPONSIBLE FOR PAYING OFF ALL LIENS senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. You consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse.
