Jesse Luera, former mayor and school board member, has died

NORWALK – Jesse Luera, a former three-time mayor of Norwalk, died Wednesday at age 85. A cause of death was not given.

Luera served on the Norwalk City Council for 17 years, including three terms as mayor.

He sat on the Norwalk-La Mirada Unified School District Board of Education from 1975 to 1994, when he was elected to the City Council.

In addition to serving as a council member, Luera was a Norwalk employee as well, holding the position of Director of Social Services for 19 years.

“Our hearts and prayers go out to the Luera family,” the city of Norwalk said in a statement.

Condolences for Luera poured in online.

“I will always remember the crazy fun times I shared with this amazing man and his family,” said journalist Randy Economy. “Talk about somebody who really was not afraid of taking on the political establishment and who had a heart so large and full of love for his community.”

“I was not only an employee of his but was friends of his family,” said

Cathy Galvan. “I lost touch with his daughter through the years but I pray for strength for his family. He always was so welcoming when we ran into each other.”

After 54 years, Bell Gardens restaurant Taco Quickie closes

By Alex Dominguez
Staff Writer

BELL GARDENS – After almost 55 years in business, two local business owners have decided to close-up shop at their popular Bell Gardens fast-food restaurant.

Since the 1960’s, Downey residents Russell and Mary Jones have presided over a humble fast food restaurant chain known as Taco Quickie and Quickie Dog.

The restaurant’s roots have some surprising ties.

“Mom and dad originally pitched their wagon when they came out to California with a guy that had a crazy idea for fast-food Mexican restaurants,” said Pamela Jones-Tintle, daughter of the restaurant owners. “That was Glen Bell, of Taco Bell fame.”

Bell’s first attempt at the fast-food Mexican chain idea may be familiar to Downey residents.

“The original restaurant that they all tried was El Taco, which is in Downey,” said Jones-Tintle. “Mr. Bell had some other partners, was going at it and just didn’t feel the love for it...[Bell] sold out and opted to start over, and his next adventure was Taco Bell.”

Bell’s endeavors also included Plaza Guadalajara in Downey, which the Bell’s became involved with.

“My parents originally had Mr. Bell work with them to have the hamburger stand in Plaza Guadalajara,” said Jones-Tintle.

This would set the stage for Taco Quickie, which came to be in 1963 after the husband and wife decided to try and venture out on their own.

The name came from a play-on-words stemming from Mary’s maiden name; a decision made after it was decided that “Taco Jones” didn’t have a “true ring” to it.

“My mom’s maiden name is Cuicchi,” said Jones-Tintle. “So they opted to go Taco Quickie.”

Taco Quickie would operate several locations in different cities during its time of operation. In its later years, the restaurant’s loyal customers have come to the sole remaining Bell Gardens location to enjoy their hot dogs, burritos, tacos, and “Chili Beefers.”

Fans of Taco Quickie in Bell Gardens wait in line at this weekend’s closing. The restaurant closed Sunday following the retirement of Downey residents Russell and Mary Jones.

“A lot of folks that grew up in Bell Gardens in particular have a very strong loyalty for Taco Quickie and Quickie Dog,” said Jones-Tintle.

On Sept. 29, Taco Quickie announced via its official Facebook page that the final day for the restaurant would be Oct. 8.

The announcement of closure drew a strong local community reaction, with many coming out and waiting as long as an hour to enjoy Taco Quickie’s food one last time.

“[There’s been] a lot of well-wishes, surprise, sadness, and celebration,” said Jones-Tintle. “Everyone has been really wonderful coming out to say goodbye one last time as well as have their favorite menu item.”

Now, the Jones’ look forward to a retirement full of fond memories, while holding strong the integrity of Taco Quickie’s legacy.

“They’re going to enjoy the wonderful life that Downey provides,” said Jones-Tintle. “The intellectual property – the Taco Quickie / Quickie Dog name, logos, recipes, all of that – will stay with the family...we’re just letting go of the property and the building.”

Average price for Norwalk unit reaches $1,370

REAL ESTATE: Norwalk has the third fastest-rising rent in L.A. Metro, behind only Burbank and West Covina, according to a study.

By Eric Pierce
Editor

NORWALK – Norwalk rental rates grew by 14.2% in the last year, behind only Burbank and West Covina, according to figures released Tuesday.

The Zumper Los Angeles Metro Report analyzed active listings in September across 19 metro cities to show the most and least expensive cities and cities with the fastest growing rents.

The California state median was $1,699 last month.

The average rental price for a 1-bedroom in Norwalk is $1,370, just behind Downey ($1,400) and ahead of Whittier ($1,280) and Bellflower ($1,270).

West Covina rent had the largest yearly growth rate in the metro, up 15.4%. Burbank followed closely behind as second with rent climbing 15.3% since this time last year. Norwalk was third with rent up 14.2%.

Santa Monica rent grew to $3,350 last month, holding onto its position as the most expensive in the metro. Pasadena, substantially less expensive than Santa Monica, ranked as the second most expensive city with rent at $2,190.

Palmdale rent, though the fastest growing in the metro last month, remained the most affordable by far at $760.

Pomona followed suit as the second least priciest city with rent at $1,260. Bellflower barely inched out Pomona with rent at $1,270.

Downey votes to regulate recreational marijuana

MARIJUANA: City Council limits personal cultivation to six plants with a required permit.

By Eric Pierce
Editor

DOWNEY – The City Council on Tuesday unanimously passed sweeping regulations related to recreational marijuana use in Downey, including limiting personal cultivation to six plants and an outright ban on commercial dispensaries.

California voters approved Proposition 64 last November, which legalized recreational marijuana for adults ages 21 and older.

The law, however, allows cities and counties to enact and enforce “reasonable” regulations to regulate the indoor cultivation of marijuana for non-medical use.

Downey’s new ordinance allows the cultivation of up to six plants per household. A city permit is required, along with “inspections and approvals.”

Outdoor marijuana plants are prohibited under the ordinance, as are commercial dispensaries and marijuana delivery services.

The final vote was a 4-0 decision, with Councilman Rick Rodriguez absent.

Shared Stories: A Brother Bill Remembers

Mervin Chantland was the ninth of 11 children born to his parents. The following is Mervin’s recording of what an older brother told him of family stories and life in the Midwest farmland. Ballpoint pens were treasured Christmas gifts, but the boys also played some dangerous games. Shared Stories is a weekly column featuring articles by participants in a writing class at the Norwalk Senior Center. Bonnie Mansell is the instructor for this free class offered through the Cerritos College Adult Education Program. Curated by Carol Kearns

By Mervin Chantland

When Dad and Uncle Bert lived on a farm near Battle Lake, Minnesota, they had all of their friends over for a party. They had purchased a keg of beer and were having fun.

There was a gang of boys at Battle Lake that decided that they were tough enough to bust the beer party. They possibly had been drinking too and decided to bust Dad and Bert’s party. They came to the party and started trouble.

I was told a guy named Geo Anderson was the leader. Dad got into it with him. After the fight they washed Anderson off in the stock tank and the water turned red from all of the blood. Dad was left-handed and very fast with his fists.

The others at the party told my dad that he had better not go to Battle Lake as they were sure that Anderson and his brothers would be waiting to get even. Dad said he decided he was going to town and get it settled, as this was his home. He met Anderson in town, they talked and became good friends.

He told my dad, “You hit where you don’t look.” That was because Dad was left-handed and very fast.

Mom’s brother, who we always called Uncle Carl, had a tavern and store at Mahatowa, Minnesota, in the late 1930’s. I can remember at Christmas time that we would get a large box of candy from Uncle Carl. He would go in his store and fill a box with candy bars and send it to us. We were very thankful as we got very few treats, especially candy bars.

Cousin Alfred Chantland built a seed-cleaning plant in Badger. Al had Dad dynamite a stump right in town, not half a block from the Co-op gas station. Boy, that shook them up. Al never forgot that and had many good laughs over it.

While we lived on the Bradley place, I remember we had an old bike. I would ride on the cross bar and Lawrence on the back, and Kermit would peddle. One time they had just graded the big hill by our school. The school was on top of the hill, so it was downhill right out of the school yard.

That hill doesn’t seem so steep today, but from the handle bars of a bike, it looked pretty steep. We were heading down that hill. I was sitting on the front, Kermit was peddling, and Lawrence was on the back. It had just rained and the newly-graded hill was slick as grease. We didn’t get hurt, but I remember sliding head first down that hill on my stomach. Kermit and Lawrence were right behind.

We used to walk across a field to school, barefooted. There was a big briar patch, and I would tip toe through them and try not to get stuck. Lawrence said just run through real fast, and I did. We made it. I can’t remember if it hurt or not, but I never did it again.

By 1938 sister Kay worked in Fort Dodge and sister Florence worked somewhere also. One year they got us all boxing gloves for Christmas. We would go out to the barn and have it out. Somehow we kept it friendly. We never became fighters, but had a lot of fun. I can remember having them gloves on for years.

One year they got us ice skates, and boy was that fun. As one of us grew out of one pair, we grew into the next pair. I think Kay gave us about four pair that Christmas. We would go to Larson Lake and go skating. The lake was about a half mile west of our school. One time Grodon Frette and others went to the lake with us and we would play hockey and have a great time.

In 1941 we got a new H Farmall tractor. Boy, that was something. I can remember drawing pictures of it. It was red and new; it even had rubber tires, a starter, and lights. Wow, that was a jewel to us kids!

In the fall of 1946, when I attended junior high school at Fort Dodge, the first ballpoint pen came on the market. It was called the Reynolds Rocket. It came in different colored aluminum and had a tip cover that would slide down and cover the point.

A lot of kids in junior high had these pens and I wanted one for Christmas. Dad did get me a Reynolds Rocket. Can you imagine your child today wanting a ballpoint pen for Christmas? That pen was all I got that year but it was what I wanted and I was very happy to get it.

One time, about 1948, Eldon Hovey had a big old barn rope about 30 feet long. We had the back section from an old horse-drawn bob sled, about five feet wide and made of heavy wood and metal runners (aka sledge). We put a board across it and sat on it while Eldon pulled us down the snow-packed gravel road. We would steer it with our feet and had a good time, but the rope kept breaking and finally was too short to use.

We went to our house to find something else to pull the sled with. What we found was a large spring about four feet long and two inches across – like a garage-door spring but much heavier. We put that spring between the pick-up truck and sledge in place of the rope.

Boy, this was great fun. The sledge would hit a snowdrift and stop, and when the spring stretched a bit, the sledge would break loose from the snow and give us quite a ride.

The day we were doing this, the weather was not cold and the snow was heavy and wet. Eldon was pulling Lawrence and I down the lane at our place when the sledge went into a wet snowdrift. I can still see the spring stretching out. Eldon didn’t see it and kept on going. I yelled at Lawrence to jump off. I jumped off and he didn’t.

The spring stretched out until it was a straight piece of wire. The sledge went out of that snowbank like a bullet. Lawrence went flying, but as usual, didn’t get hurt.

It was 1949 when Elden Hovey discovered that he could weld a cap on the end of a pipe and drill a hole for the fuse. He would put black powder in it and tamp paper and a slug of some kind in it to make a cannon. At that time farmers could buy black powder at the hardware store for farm use. We had a lot of fun with that cannon, shootings into the air.

‘Young Frankenstein’ opens next week

CERRITOS – The Cerritos Center for the Performing Arts (CCPA) kicks off the 2017-18 Broadway Performance Partner Series with the award-winning 3-D Theatricals’ “Young Frankenstein.”

Tickets, which start at $40, are available at the CCPA Ticket Office and cerritoscenter.com or by calling (562) 916-8500.

“Young Frankenstein” will run at the CCPA on Friday, Oct. 20 and 27 at p.m.; Saturday, Oct. 21 and 28 at 2 and 8 p.m.; Sunday, Oct. 22 and 29 at 2 p.m.; and Thursday, Oct. 26, at 7:30 p.m.

Based on Mel Brooks’ and Gene Wilder’s 1974 re-imagining of the Mary Shelley classic, the stage version of “Young Frankenstein” features director David Lamoureux, musical director Corey Hirsch, and choreographer Daniel Smith.

The film received two Academy Award nominations, including one for the script. It was also nominated for a Writer’s Guild of America Award for “Best Adapted Screenplay.”

“Young Frankenstein” won The Hugo Award for “Best Dramatic Presentation” and The Nebula Award, given by The Science Fiction & Fantasy Writers of America, for “Best Dramatic Writing.” It was chosen for preservation in the Library of Congress National Film Registry. The stage version has been nominated for the Tony Award, Drama League Award, Drama Desk Award, and Grammy Award. It won the Outer Critics Award for “Best Musical.”

The tale focuses on young Dr. Frankenstein’s (that’s Fronkensteen) attempts to complete his grandfather’s masterwork and bring a corpse to life. With his oddly shaped and endearing helper Igor (that’s Eye-gor), his curvaceous lab assistant Inga, and in spite of his incredibly self-involved madcap fiancée Elizabeth, Frankenstein succeeds in creating a monster – but not without scary and quite often hysterical – complications.

The show’s raucous score includes “The Transylvania Mania,” “He Vas My Boyfriend,” and Irving Berlin’s “Putting on the Ritz.”

For the 2017-18 CCPA Season, 3-D Theatricals will also present Broadway classics “Million Dollar Quartet,” “Parade” and “Mamma Mia.”

Your boss shouldn’t get to have religious objections to your healthcare

By Martha Burk

When Obamacare — aka, the Affordable Care Act — became law in 2010, it mandated coverage of birth control without co-payments.

Some employers didn’t like the rule, and Hobby Lobby hated it so much that the company filed a lawsuit to stop it. Company owners said they didn’t believe in contraception and claimed that covering it for female employees violated their religious freedom.

Understand, the Obama administration went to great lengths to exempt churches and church-related institutions from the rule, while still guaranteeing their female employees the right to birth control if they wanted it.

Then the Supreme Court stepped in, siding with Hobby Lobby and ruling that “closely held” corporations with religious objections could join religious employers in excluding birth control from their insurance plans.

Now the Trump administration has gone a giant step further. They’re now allowing any and all businesses, including publicly traded ones, to also cite “religious or moral objections” in denying their employees contraception coverage.

Wait a minute.

Corporations not only have religious freedom but now moral principles, too? I didn’t even know they went to church, and I’m pretty sure I’ve never seen one get down on its knees and pray.

On the other hand, I know women — who are actual people — have religious freedom under the Constitution, too. What about their right not to be forced to bow to their employers’ religious beliefs or highly suspect “moral” principles?

Massachusetts, California, and the ACLU have filed lawsuits to stop the rollback. Good luck. Besides Hobby Lobby, the conservative majority in the Supreme Court ruled years ago in the Citizens United case that corporations have constitutional rights, and they’ve consistently ruled in favor of their corporate buddies over women in employment discrimination cases.

On top of that, six of the nine justices are male, and most of them of rather conservative religious persuasions. The odds look to be stacked against women.

Expanding so-called corporate citizen rights deeper into health care could ultimately affect everybody, not just women.

Christian Scientists are opposed to all kinds of medical treatment, including for diabetes, cancer, and meningitis. Jehovah’s Witnesses don’t believe in blood transfusions. There are undoubtedly other religious taboos on medical procedures.

Enterprising businesses that want to save money could cite “religious freedom” to exclude virtually any medical treatment from their insurance plans. Surgery, antibiotics, immunizations — you name it.

Where will it end? We don’t know. Even if the lawsuits are ultimately successful, a decision could take years.

All I know is that I don’t want my neighborhood corporate citizen making my health care decisions.

Martha Burk is the director of the Corporate Accountability Project for the National Council of Women’s Organizations (NCWO) and the author of the book “Your Voice, Your Vote.”

Tax cuts for the rich, paid for with your healthcare

By LeeAnn Hall

When Republican leaders tried to repeal health care in the spring and summer, many Americans raised the alarm and made a ruckus. We asked hard questions, looked at the independent analyses, held town halls, told our health care stories, and took to the streets.

Because of that overwhelming opposition, plans to slash health care to pay for corporate tax breaks failed. Republican leaders haven’t given up. In fact, they’ve already begun voting on a scheme to slash taxes for corporations and multi-millionaires — paid for by cuts to health care.

Now the plan to raid our health care is buried in the GOP tax scheme and budget process. Here’s how they’re putting it into place.

On October 5, the House of Representatives passed a budget resolution that cuts $1.5 trillion from Medicaid and other health programs, capping and starving Medicaid.

On top of that, the budget also slices almost $500 billion from Medicare — and proposes turning it into a privatized voucher program and raising the eligibility age to 67.

The Senate budget proposal is just as bad. It would cut Medicaid, Medicare, and the financial assistance people get to buy insurance through the Affordable Care Act exchanges.

For the better part of 30 years, I’ve been organizing people and communities to win quality, affordable health care for all. These cuts will hurt all of us, especially people who need health care the most: seniors, people with disabilities, children.

The payoff? Our elected representatives get to dole out tax breaks to their big-money donors and corporate friends.

Don’t expect House Speaker Paul Ryan, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, and the others behind this scheme to be honest about it. They’re saying their tax cut plan for corporations and multi-millionaires will help ordinary people.

Their idea of who ordinary people are is pretty strange.

The richest 1 percent of Americans will reap 80 percent of the tax cuts, the non-partisan Tax Policy center calculates, while taxes for many moderate and low-income people would go up. The richest 5 percent of Americans will gain income from these tax cuts — but the rest of us will lose income once those cuts are paid for.

The rich get richer and the rest of us lose income, health care, and other essential services like housing, food, and education. (And don’t think they won’t come for Social Security next.)

We’ll wind up with what Republican leaders wanted from health care repeal: tens of millions of people thrown off their health care to clear the way for more than $1 trillion in tax breaks for the mega-rich.

All this comes at a time of soaring corporate profits — with prescription drug corporations continuing to rake in exorbitant profits by price-gouging patients on lifesaving medications.

Instead of requiring Medicare to negotiate lower prices with drug corporations — which would mean huge savings for the public — Republican leaders in Congress want us to pay for corporate tax cuts with our health care.

What part of “no” didn’t they understand?

LeeAnn Hall is the co-director of People’s Action and a member of the executive committee of Health Care for America Now.

Trump and North Korea

Dear Editor:

Looks like President Trump is ready to get the U.S. into a war with North Korea. He told Secretary of State Rex Tillerson to stop wasting his time trying to negotiate.

Defense Secretary James Mattis says that “the Army must stand ready to take military action in North Korea should diplomatic efforts fail.” What is the rush? If we start a war with North Korea, China, which has a defense treaty with them, will go to war against us. I think Russia would also be drawn in against us.

Not only would hundreds of millions of people die, we would probably lose the war.

Anita Rivero Downey

GOP tax proposal would hurt middle class

Dear Editor:

First, I believe this deceptive “tax reform” being proposed by Republicans is counter-productive and is only meant to serve the rich and the donors.

Tax reform is really doublespeak for tax cuts. Just like Social Security “reform”, Medicare “reform”, and Welfare “reform”, it’s Republican establishment 101. President Trump ran a campaign based on helping the “little guy” and the “forgotten man”, but how do tax cuts for the rich help them?

It’s a classic example of trickle-down economics, championed by our oh so beloved Ronald Reagan. This failed economic theory has been discredited time and time again, most recently in Kansas, which is now in an economic mess thanks to Governor Sam Brownback and his wild experimentation with the trickle-down system. Income inequality has been increasing since the 1980s, the working class has eroded, and now the middle class is feeling the brunt.

There have been news reports stating that the Republican donors are upset that the party was not able to repeal Obamacare, their “investment” went nowhere. So now the GOP party leaders have turned their attention to tax cuts. Donald Trump made the flimsy promises, the GOP establishment never committed to them, and Trump never meant to help the working class.

My point is, this deception needs to end. Tax cuts don’t help the working class. Sure, he’ll throw you a bone by pardoning criminals such as Sheriff Joe Arpaio and dictating what is and isn’t free speech to NFL players, but it is abundantly clear that the President still has a businessman mentality and is acting in the best interests of corporations, and not the people.

Americans have responsibilities that come with freedom and liberty

By Lee H. Hamilton

I’ve been reminded recently of the old cowboy song, Home on the Range. You know the line, “Where never is heard a discouraging word”? That is not the United States right now. It feels like pretty much everywhere I turn, all I hear is discouragement.

Our institutions of government are paralyzed. We face serious national problems with no effective response in sight — or even, in some cases, an acknowledgement that a problem exists. We’re fighting over racism, identity, security and culture. Our political system appears dysfunctional and occasionally on the verge of breakdown.

All of this is serious. But the question we have to confront is not, “What’s going wrong?” It’s, “How do we respond?” Or, at the risk of seeming hopelessly out of step with the national mood, “How do we set about making a great country still greater?”

As always, the answer to our problems does not lie in efforts to tinker with the structures we’ve erected or the systems we’ve created. It lies in us — in the American people. Whatever our political beliefs, we share some characteristics that I think give us cause for hope.

I’ve always thought that Carl Schurz, a German-born U.S. senator from Missouri, summed up something basic about the American character when he said, on the floor of the Senate in 1872, “My country right or wrong; when right, to keep her right; when wrong, to put her right.”

Americans respect the ideals of this country. They’re devoted to those ideals — freedom, liberty, justice for all — and they want the nation to live up to them. They believe in fighting oppression and expanding opportunity, in the rule of law and making progress on Americans’ pursuit of happiness. They believe in the words of the Constitution’s preamble, “To strive for a more perfect union.”

We do not give up, and we always hold out hope that the country is fixable. Even when we believe the nation is falling short of its ideals, we’re moved not by malice or hatred, but because we want to make the United States stronger and fairer.

Americans in overwhelming numbers believe in and respect what this country stands for, appreciate the differences and the diversity that are our hallmark, and recognize those differences and diversity as a strength. This creates a remarkable degree of unity on broad goals. There is widespread acceptance of the notions that people here should have access to good health care, that we need to be good stewards of the environment, that everyone should have a fair shot at success, that voting should not be burdensome.

Americans believe in a strong national defense, that the U.S. ought to play a benign role in the world, that people of all kinds are welcome to engage in the political process, that civil liberties ought to be staunchly defended, and that we all deserve equality before the law. Our differences arise over the means of achieving those goals.

All of us also recognize that this nation has its faults — some of them deep-seated and stubborn. We believe that America can do better. But there is a broad streak of pragmatism in this country. Because of its size, diversity and complexity, it’s hard to get things done, and Americans understand this and often approach the country’s problems with sleeves rolled up.

Again and again in times of adversity, we see Americans of all backgrounds and political perspectives pitching in to help out. Americans believe in the values of hard work, the importance of family, self-sufficiency, community engagement and involvement. For the most part, they do not approve of people who incessantly and harshly criticize the country.

This is why, however dire things appear in Washington, I continue to believe that we have it within us to set the country back on a productive track. We know that in order for us to progress we all have to give something back — that with freedom and liberty comes responsibility. And when we see others stand up for the nation’s ideals and act to broaden opportunity for others, it sends, as Robert Kennedy said, “a ripple of hope” through the community that, in time, becomes an unstoppable current of change.

Well, these aren’t your normal miners. They’re hedge fund managers, digging for gold in Wall Street. Indeed, if you divided Mercer’s pay in his “bad year” among 1,000 real miners doing honest work, each would consider it a fabulous year.

Nonetheless, hedge funds are almost literally gold mines, although they require no heavy lifting by the soft-handed, Gucci-wearing managers who work them. These gold diggers are basically nothing but speculators, drawing billions of dollars from the über-rich by promising that they’ll deliver fabulous profits.

But the scam is that Mercer and his fellow diggers get paid whether they deliver or not.

Their cushy set up, known as 2 and 20, works like this.

Right off the top, they take 2 percent of the money put up by each wealthy client, which hedge fund whizzes like Mercer keep even if the investments they make are losers. Then, if their speculative bets do pay off, they pocket 20 percent of all profits.

Finally, hedge fund lobbyists have rigged our nation’s tax code so these Wall Street miners pay a fraction of the tax rate that real mine workers pay.

Last year, the 25 best paid hedge fund operators totaled a staggering $11 billion in personal pay — even though nearly half of them performed poorly. Meanwhile, Donald Trump, who promised last year to close that special hedge-fund tax break, has mysteriously omitted that vow from the “tax reform” framework the White House released this fall.

Guess who was one of Trump’s most generous funders last year? Bob Mercer.

PROBATE

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: SAMUEL J. LEWIS
CASE NO. 17SPB08550
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the WILL or estate, or both of SAMUEL J. LEWIS.
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by CINDY A. JARVIS in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that CINDY A. JARVIS be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The WILL and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act with limited authority. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval.

Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 10/20/17 at 8:30AM in Dept. 11 located at 111 N. HILL ST., LOS ANGELES, CA 90012

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Rancho hospital named an ‘innovation center’ by governor

DOWNEY – A bill that would designate Rancho Los Amigos National Rehabilitation Center as a ‘rehabilitation innovation center’ has been signed by the Governor.

Authored by Assemblywoman Cristina Garcia (D-Bell Gardens), AB 1411 originated from constituents through her yearly ‘There Ought to Be a Law’ contest.

Assembly Bill 1411 designates the Rancho Los Amigos National Rehabilitation Center as a ‘rehabilitation innovation center’.

The designation recognizes an inpatient rehabilitation research center that has particular expertise in treating patients with the most complex rehabilitation needs.

“Rancho Los Amigos is one of the most premiere facilities in the country, provides care to approximately 4,000 inpatients and 71,000 outpatients annually, making it one of the largest rehabilitation centers in the nation,” said Garcia.

“At a time when healthcare for working Americans is in a perilous position, 85% of this center’s patients are on MediCal and it’s the only public rehabilitation facility in Southern California.”

As the only rehabilitation hospital in Los Angeles County’s Department of Health Services, the center serves a unique and vital role in patient recovery, rehabilitation and reintegration.

The hospital specializes in brain, neurology, orthopedic, pediatric, spine injury, and stroke rehabilitation. Each year, the hospital provides care to approximately 4,000 inpatients and 71,000 outpatients, making it one of the largest rehabilitation centers in the nation.

“This designation will help ensure that Rancho continues to provide the highest level of care to the residents of Southern California,” said Jorge Orozco, CEO of Rancho Los Amigos.

“It also ensures that the cutting edge research that Rancho conducts will continue to benefit patients in need regardless of ability to pay, and will ultimately help shape the future of rehabilitation in this country.”

A video of just one of the innovative treatment’s the center has created can be found online. In it, nodes connected directly to a paraplegic man’s brain control a robotic arm enabling him to drink a beer for the first time by himself since his accident.

“Their innovative care and ability to heal thousands of people every year not only provide a beckon of hope for patients in need but they’re also a fantastic example of the services and advancements burgeoning in this region,” added Garcia.

Rams, Chargers Week 5 recap

RAMS: The Rams were the highest scoring team in the NFL through the first four weeks of the season, averaging a little over 35 points per game, but that was until they were shutout in the second half by Seattle Seahawks defense last Sunday. The Rams lost 16-10, falling to second in the NFC West.

Los Angeles was able to move the ball but failed to finish drives with points on the board. Goff had trouble with his accuracy at times, completing just 22-of-47 passes for 288 yards. His 47 pass attempts were 11 more than his previous most this year.. He finished his worst performance of the season averaging slightly over six yards per pass, two interceptions and no touchdowns.

Pete Carroll just out coached the much younger Sean McVay, who is less than half his age. Carroll is 66-years-old and had been coaching for over 12 years by the time McVay was born in 1986. Carroll and his Seahawks were able to make some crucial halftime adjustments that visibly tilted the game in their favor, both offensively and defensively.

The Seahawks forced four fumbles and recovered three of them. They held Gurley to just 43 yards on 14 carries and made sure he didn’t break open any big runs. 11 yards was his longest rush.

Tavon Austin managed to find paydirt on a 27-yard touchdown run, but was otherwise completely irrelevant offensively once again. Austin fumbled twice even though he only touched the ball 11 times including his kick returns.

Sammy Watkins might as well have stayed in the locker room. He was targeted four times but was unable to haul in a single reception. Watkins has been targeted only six times over the last two weeks. He has one reception for 17 yards during that span.

The (3-2) Rams will face the (3-2) Jacksonville Jaguars this Sunday who are coming off an impressive defensive victory over “Big” Ben Roethlisberger and the Pittsburgh Steelers. The Jaguars are led by rookie standout Leonard Fournette who has displayed his powerful, fearless style of running the football all season. Fournette is averaging 93 yards and a touchdown per game and is going to be looking to punish the Rams secondary after bursting out the backfield.

CHARGERS: The Los Angeles Chargers snapped a 9-game losing streak last Sunday defeating the decrepit New York Giants, 27-22. That embarrassing streak which extended from last year’s five game skid and continuing four games into the start of this year was not even the most important thing that was snapped on Sunday.

Odell Beckham Jr.’s season ending ankle injury that sent chills around the league stole the spotlight and headlines. Beckham, who has been a human highlight reel ever since entering the league in 2014, was seen sobbing as he was carted off the field gripping his shin.

The Giants have been struggling to formulate any type of offense well before Odell went down with a fractured ankle. Even with one of the most dynamic wide receivers in the league, Eli and the Giants have been uninspiring all season.

The Giants suffered a myriad of injuries on Sunday. New York placed wide receiver, Brandon Marshall, on season ending injury reserve on Tuesday following the loss to Los Angeles. Dwayne Harris is also out for the season with a foot injury and Sterling Shepard will be nursing an ankle injury. By the end of the game, Manning was left with only one healthy wideout.

Melvin Gordon willed the team to victory on the offensive side of the ball. Gordon was honored with the AFC Offensive Player of the Week, becoming the first Charger to win the award in consecutive seasons since LaDainian Tomlinson did it in 2005-2006 seasons.

Gordon ran for 105 yards and added another 58 yards receiving and two touchdowns. His 163 yards from scrimmage against New York was his best performance this season.

The (1-4) Chargers will face a fading (2-3) Oakland Raiders team that has been decimated with injuries during their three game losing streak.
