► Utilizing a $70,000 grant, the City Council on Tuesday approved a preliminary version of a homeless action plan.

Council members, however, are still struggling to identify the root causes of Norwalk’s homeless population.

By Raul Samaniego Contributor

NORWALK – The restructured Norwalk City Council, by a unanimous 5-0 vote on Tuesday, approved a draft version of a plan to prevent and combat homelessness in Norwalk.

Last December, LeSar Development Consultants was hired as part of a $70,000 grant Norwalk received to “create a homeless plan.”

After four meetings with staff, community members, and other city stakeholders, the results of those efforts and other ideas were presented to the council Tuesday.

While most of the council chambers was void of Norwalk residential observers, the report was straightforward and professionally presented by LeSar Senior Associate, Kris Kuntz.

He highlighted the following goals of the draft plan:

- 1) Better understand the population and impacts and educate the community.
- 2) Improve coordination of housing and services among city and key stakeholders.
- 3) Explore the creation of immediate short-term solutions.
- 4) Develop new strategies to increase income through employment and public benefits attainment.
- 5) Create new supportive and affordable housing opportunities.

After a failed attempt by then mayor Luigi Vernola to bring an emergency homeless shelter to the vacant California Youth Authority property on Bloomfield Avenue, the city reached out to seek a remedy for not only Norwalk’s growing homeless population, but perhaps a regional solution as well.

As each goal was described by Kuntz, feedback from the council was provided.

Councilman Vernola stated, “Residents don’t want a homeless shelter or a bridge to permanent housing next to them.”

This was made very clear during last November’s community forum held at Dolland Elementary School, ironically just a couple blocks south of the CYA property.

At Tuesday’s meeting, Vernola took a blaming attitude in citing that, “The state created [homelessness] and it’s [now] our problem.”

He also added, “The sheriffs won’t respond (to homeless issue calls).”

Reached Wednesday, Norwalk Sheriff Station Captain Jim Tatreau responded with, “There’s not a call that goes unanswered.”

“We team with the Norwalk Public Safety Department on calls deemed public nuisance that may take time,” the captain explained.

Regarding any non-responsive issue, Captain Tatreau asked for specifics.

In certain areas of Norwalk, the question may be what takes precedence in residents’ concerns, homelessness or gang activity.

With a seemingly more empathetic tone, New Vice Mayor Margarita Rios asked about “ID cards” for some of the homeless. That was in reference to the idea that some people (not just homeless) have problems with obtaining valid forms of identification and perhaps social security cards. These are critical in securing assistance at all levels.

Earlier, Rios reminded the sparse crowd and her colleagues, “It’s not a crime to be homeless.”

On that note, Councilman Tony Ayala asked the question, “What is crime?”

In what may have been the pink elephant in the room, Councilman Leonard Shryock asked the question, “Why are Norwalk homeless where they are?”, adding, “I was startled by the amount of youth homelessness.”

With his final words, Vernola added, “I’m not really negative on the homeless. It’s going to take some drastic action.”

With the conclusion of the report, Mayor Jennifer Perez added that the report was, “A very fluid plan. A living document.”

It was then approved by the council 5-0 with a June 30 deadline to submit the final plan to the county for consideration for a piece of the estimated $350 million to be generated by Proposition H homeless funding.

One of those in the audience was a homeless woman who declined to give her name. She has been homeless for many years and took exception to Vernola’s frame of reference citing, “He (Vernola) doesn’t have an understanding of the true mentally ill out there.”

It was help from social workers who enabled her to obtain federal aid through SSI that allows for her to reside in a RV in the Norwalk area, she said.

She made mention of a former “shower voucher,” program which enabled individuals to obtain a shower at the Norwalk Arts and Sports Complex.

Reached by phone, Deputy City Manager Kevin Gano could not recall such a program but said he’d “look into it.”

To view the complete proposed homeless plan for Norwalk, visit the Norwalk website at norwalk.org and select agendas in the search and press “Special Council meeting,” April 10.

work on behalf of immigrants and its commitment to environmental justice. In addition to these high-priority policy areas, the plan invests in new facilities, infrastructure repair and improvements in monitoring and remediating storm water pollution, including in the Santa Monica Bay.

The recommended budget is the first step in a process that will stretch across the next several months and will include public hearings and budget deliberations. Adoption of the budget is expected in late June.

A strange day in Norwalk for this journalist

By Raul Samaniego

Strange things are abuzz in Norwalk.

Last Wednesday, my phone was buzzing from calls starting at 6:30 AM. You see, something happened in Norwalk politics that no one seems to remember happening for at least the last twenty years, but has probably been longer.

Leonard Shryock got screwed!

By that I mean, as Vice Mayor of the city of Norwalk, it was always a gimmee, a sure thing, a guaranteed win.

In many administrations of our 110,000 urban setting, the Vice Mayor, Mayor Pro Tem or Assistant to Mr. Vernola was always selected to move into the key mayoral spot on the council.

First, however, I apologize to Mr. Shryock.

Monday and Tuesday were filled with much anticipated events at city hall.

Monday, April 2, saw the city council approve a solid waste proposal by CR&R of Stanton worth tens of millions of dollars. That had been a long process.

I had my notes and photos of the evening at the ready and I rushed up to get some moments after the close of comments. All the council members were standing around seemingly with that “Ask me for a comment,” but it was Mr. Shryock whom I approached.

In fact, it was Mr. Shryock who put forth the motion to accept the proposal by CR&R with the council following with a unanimous vote of five to zero approving the motion.

Afterwards, I tried to get some comments from Mr. Vernola, but my new video setup was not ready so we agreed to speak later, perhaps Tuesday.

After thirty minutes or so, City Manager Jesus Gomez gave an exclusive interview on the process of the Solid waste agreement and the move forward. I was happy with his accessibility.

My story on the outcome was on page 8, but it was published. I thought it was news enough for the first page.

After all, I write the stories, the Editor receives them, proofreads and adds/removes any pertinent/non-pertinent information. He also titles all my pieces. A fair deal.

Now, usually, I review my story ideas with the Editor over the weekend so he has an idea of what I’m working on. I also ask if there is anything that he has heard that I may cover.

Most of the time, this is a few text messages and nothing more.

One of his texts to me was what I thought if Jennifer Perez was selected as Mayor. My reply, “She certainly has the votes.”

I thought nothing more of that message stream.

Hence my apology to Mr. Shryock.

Walking into the Council Chamber Tuesday evening about 5:55, I acknowledged the usual folks, shook some hands and turned to a few taps on my shoulder.

One of those taps was Mr. Lee Mitchell. You know, of the All City Band and Excelsior High School fame.

I simply asked, “What are you doing here?”

His response was surprising. Something to the effect of being there for Leonard. I asked him what he meant and he said that Leonard was probably going to be selected Mayor.

I felt bad. I shared that there may be a different scenario playing out. Mr. Mitchell looked confused. He took his seat with the rest of the standing room only audience.

After the accolades for Mr. Vernola were completed, it was Luigi who in fact nominated Ms. Perez as Mayor with Leonard Shryock voting “No,” for her nomination.

Perez’s two contemporaries, Tony Ayala and Margarita Rios, supported their first-year colleague in her ascension to the center seat of the chamber.

After a quick nomination for Vice Mayor, Norwalk became an all-female Mayor/Vice Mayoral entity. I wasn’t unhappy with that outcome.

As a matter of fact, I was the first to publicly congratulate Ms. Perez with a handshake after I took the usual photo shots of her taking her place at the throne of Norwalk politics.

It was her father, Robert “Bob” Arthur, who took his place in the same place in 1993, twenty five years prior.

Looking around, I couldn’t find Mr. Mitchell. He had left the building.

Afterwards, I caught up to Mr. Shryock as we walked outside towards the parking lot. I was surprised when he said he was going home.

I even told him sternly that he needed to be there (the reception). You know, politically and all that. He replied that he had told his wife he was coming straight home.

Myself, I was headed to the reception tent for a cola and a taste of the taxpayer provided eats.

I apologize Mr. Shryock. I didn’t know what had just happened. The tradition had been broken.

It was at the reception that a strange story started to manifest itself.

I get tapped all the time these days. Someone always has their unsolicited two-cents about everything. I listen, sometimes, the paper trail starts with these taps or at least something that raises my eyebrow a bit.

At Monday’s Solid Waste selection special meeting, I was handed a couple pages of Election contribution forms of Mayor Jennifer Perez and Council Member Tony Ayala. Both listed $2,000-dollar contribution by... CR&R solid Waste Company of Stanton.

I have not requested official copies from the Norwalk City Clerk’s office, But I will Thursday.

As I sat enjoying my taxpayer catered meal, the unsubstantiated story emerged. I relayed the weak lead to the editor and said I’d look into if there was back-story later. That piece of mind lasted about nine hours.

I lost sleep that night. Why had Leonard been screwed. What had he done or failed to do in his tenure as a council member, past Mayor and his just ended year as vice Mayor?

Sure, I was at odds sometimes with his verbal reasoning while addressing. Staff or disagreeing with his peers on the council.

Wednesday morning, my inquiries began at 6:30 AM with my first text to my Editor regarding the direction of the two stories I was writing, the Solid Waste agreement and the new Mayor and Vice Mayor stories.

I finished the Solid Waste story early and had transmitted for consideration. I next started work on the Mayoral/Vice Mayoral piece and was pretty much finished by 1:00 or so.

It was then that my phone began ringing off the hook with returned calls from various City of Norwalk staff members, contacts and a few people with experience directly with the Brown Act of 2003.

The reference material was provided by the California State Attorney General’s office. It wasn’t new information for one of the council members had provided me with a copy a while ago.

The Brown Act is more of a guideline for elected officials in California on how to hold open, public accessible meetings regarding most items to be voted on.

I say guideline for no entity has ever been convicted of breaking the rules of the open meeting policy.

That’s probably good news for the Norwalk City Council members.

The Brown Act is supposed to assure the people that open and public accessibility is available at all public discussions pertaining to items on meeting agendas.

When did the discussions regarding Ms. Perez’s Council-voted selection occur?

According to Ms. Perez, she had discussions with her “peers” and the decision to “go in a different direction,” had been decided.

The last person to go in a different direction was former Norwalk City Manager, Mike Egan, who was fired by the City Council in November 2017.

Another Director Level Manager to “Go in another direction,” was former director of public safety, Carlos Ramos who suddenly retired 24 hours after meeting with now city manager, Jesus Gomez.

Sure, it’s all coincidental (not really, Mike Egan was %&! Canned specifically for that reason).

Any more “New directional,” moves at Norwalk City Hall, may make the White House look like a stable institution.

There’s a lot more to the back story. This is my opinion based upon responses from City staff, the Mayor herself, and twenty years unabridged history.

Mr. Shryock, I apologize for my insensitivity. Nobody ever likes to politically bend over and take one for the team.

Trump succeeds at preserving his ignorance

By Steve Chapman

Presidents can tap a fount of information unlike any in the world. A corps of foreign service officers, multiple intelligence agencies and thousands of federal bureaucrats exist to learn all they can about crucial matters and convey it upward. The White House can also call on professors, think tanks, advocacy groups and corporations. If the president can’t find the answer to a question, it’s probably because no one can.

Being able to get all the best information gives the person occupying the Oval Office a unique perspective. How many times have you heard someone defend a president’s decision by saying he knows many things we don’t and must have sound reasons?

But that theory doesn’t apply to Donald Trump. He is the rare president who doesn’t know things we don’t know. He has access to facts that others lack, but they are wasted on him.

He can’t be bothered to read his top-secret daily intelligence briefing (or anything else) because he’s too distracted by “Fox & Friends” — which is where he got the idea that a caravan of dangerous migrants was about to storm our southern border. Trying to load his brain with verified data is like trying to pound a wooden peg through a steel plate.

Trump, like every president, came into office facing a steep learning curve. “As he governs, he is realizing that the campaign talk doesn’t fit neatly into governing and he needs a different approach, one that gets results,” his friend and Newsmax Media chief executive Christopher Ruddy said.

Early on, Trump occasionally exhibited an awareness of his limits. After he urged Chinese President Xi Jinping to force North Korea into line, Xi explained to him the relationship between the two countries. “After listening for 10 minutes,” said Trump, “I realized it’s not so easy.” During the debate on repealing the Affordable Care Act, he marveled, “Nobody knew that health care could be so complicated.”

But unlike his predecessors, he has seen no urgent need to climb the learning curve. Years ago, he developed his fundamental opinions without knowing much, and he maintains them the same way.

Trump does not treat his ignorance as a flaw to be fixed. He treats it as a precious jewel to be protected. Far from handicapping him, it furnishes a rich supply of half-baked excuses for following his whims, and he strives mightily to preserve it.

His penchant for nonsense, misinformation and falsehoods is as strong as ever. Anytime he has to talk about the substance of policy, he makes it plain that he doesn’t know what he’s talking about.

He also doesn’t care. In a meeting with Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau, he insisted that the U.S. has a trade deficit with Canada. He later boasted, “I didn’t even know. ... I had no idea.”

And why wouldn’t Trump make things up to support his claims? He always got away with it before. When the boss (or father or host) is rich, opinionated and overbearing, few people are going to make a habit of correcting him.

Trump, like every low-information gasbag, seizes stray bits of information — or invents them — to bolster what he believes. He has no interest in learning anything else.

Those who want to educate him do it at their peril. National security adviser H.R. McMaster got on his nerves by acting as though Trump had some use for information. Reported Politico, “The president at one point gestured toward the general in the midst of a lengthy briefing and said to others in the room, ‘Look at this guy, he’s so serious!’”

Secretary of State Rex Tillerson, after joining with other top officials in a determined but futile effort to make Trump understand the Iranian nuclear deal, concluded that his boss was a “moron.” Like McMaster, he’s gone.

It’s become clear that Trump has decided he knows all he needs to know and can dispense with subordinates who challenge him. Trade adviser Peter Navarro captured the secret of pleasing the president when he explained that his job is to supply Trump with “the underlying analytics that confirm his intuition.”

But even as he remains impervious to learning, Trump imagines that he’s mastered everything he needs to know. “Some worried aides,” reported The New York Times, “say privately that Mr. Trump does not understand the job the way he believes he does” and “fear he will become even less inclined to take advice.”

No surprise there. Ignorance is not a bug in the Trump operating system. It’s not even a feature. It is the operating system.

PROBATE

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF HAI HO PHAM

Case No. 18STPB02595

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of HAI HO PHAM
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Thu Luu Hoang Mai Cao in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Thu Luu Hoang Mai Cao be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on April 17, 2018 at 10:30 AM in Dept. No. 5 located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call or visit the Internet Web site, using the file number assigned to this case 17-005519. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. www.homesearch.com 800-758-8052 or Aztec Foreclosure Corporation (877) 257-0717 www.aztectrustee.com NPP0329168 To: NORWALK PATRIOT 03/30/2018, 04/06/2018, 04/13/2018

Penny brothers hosting football camp Saturday at Excelsior Stadium

NORWALK – Rashaad Penny is projected to be taken in this year’s NFL draft sometime in the second or third round. The Norwalk native could be the steal of the draft. Anytime a franchise can manage to snag a running back with his skill set in the middle rounds, it is a steal.

Penny took the college football world by storm his senior season leading the Aztecs of San Diego State as their featured back. It was the only season Penny had to carry the workload and ended up finishing in the Top 5 Heisman finalists. He was marinating on the bench until this season when he stole the show.

Some of the biggest benefits of Penny’s lack of collegiate experience is he always stood out with his dominate performances while on the field and his relatively fresh legs after a four year college career.

This Saturday Penny will return to Norwalk as he will be joining his brother, Elijahha Penny, who plays for the Arizona Cardinals to co-host the free, one-day football camp at Excelsior Stadium.

Children between the ages of 5 to 11 are invited to join the Penny brothers this Saturday from 9:30-11:30 and then from 11:30-1:30 they will be working with kids aged 12 to 17.

Elijahha Penny, running back for the Arizona Cardinals, will host a free football clinic for kids Saturday at Excelsior Stadium. He’ll be joined by his brother, Rashaad Penny.
