Maserati in talks to open Downey lot

If negotiations are successful, the dealership will be operated by Champion, which owns the Dodger/Chrysler dealership.

It's anticipated Maserati will seek economic assistance from the city of Downey.

By Eric Pierce Editor

DOWNEY - Maserati, the Italian maker of luxury automobiles, is in negotiations to open a new car dealership in

If negotiations are successful, the dealership would open at 9715 Firestone Blvd. and share space with Champion Chrysler/Dodge.

Champion and Maserati have already signed a letter of intent to establish the dealership.

On Tuesday, the City Council voted to approve memorandum of understanding with Champion that authorizes them to temporarily use their lot space to sell Maserati vehicles.

"Attracting a Maserati dealership to the city of Downey is a tremendous undertaking for Champion and the city, Community Development Director Aldo Schindler wrote in a report to the City Council. "Constructing and establishing the dealership will be just as monumental."

As negotiations progress, it's possible Maserati will "seek partnership opportunities with the city, in the form of economic development assistance," Schindler said.

"The execution of this MOU is the first step in bringing a Maserati dealership to the city of Downey," Schindler added.

With the MOU's approval, Champion can begin selling Maserati vehicles immediately it works to design, construct and open a permanent dealership.

The Downey Maserati dealership could draw customers from the South Bay, Long Beach, and north Orange County, officials

The nearest Maserati dealership to Downey is currently in Puente Hills, 17 miles away.

Maserati currently operates about 17 dealerships in California but is looking to expand in this state "to take advantage of California's car culture," said Schindler.

The Great Recession took a drastic toll on the local automobile industry a decade ago when Downey lost its Ford, Lincoln and Cadillac dealerships, all in 2009.

Since then, Downey has added a Hyundai dealership and Champion Dodge/Chrysler/Fiat.

Giant RV received $504,000 in tax incentives to open at the former Gemco site at Florence Avenue and Studebaker Road, and Downey provided $2.25 million in financial assistance to help Downey Nissan expand to its new, larger location.

Man arrested for drive-by shooting

NORWALK – One person was arrested after a drive-by shooting in Norwalk on Tuesday.

The victim survived the shooting and walked to Coast Plaza Hospital at about noon for treatment. Hospital staff called the sheriff's department.

The victim told detectives he was approached by a man driving a white Scion sedan. The suspect allegedly asked the vicim, "Where are you from?" before firing.

Detectives recognized the car's description from a previous incident and ultimately arrested 33-year-old Keelloon Samuel Douglas on charges of attempted murder.

He is currently being held on $1 million bail.

Morrison Elementary named a top school for underserved kids

The Norwalk campus was honored for helping its low-income minority students achieve high scores in math and English.

The school earned a second recognition for creating clubs and programs that promote civic learning.

NORWALK – Norwalk's Morrison Elementary was listed in a recent ranking as one of L.A. County's top schools for low-income and disadvantaged students.

The school was one of 279 campuses recognized by Innovate Public Schools in its first annual report of "Top Los Angeles Public Schools for Underserved Students.

Morrison was also recognized by L.A. County for its efforts to engage students in civic learning.

Innovate Public Schools compiled its list of top schools in collaboration with the University of Southern California Sol Price Center for Social Innovation and Rossier School of Education Center for Education Policy, Equity and Governance.

Morrison Elementary made the list based on its strong results in English and/or math proficiency for low-income African American and Latino students in 2017-18.

After 56 years of marriage, couple dies hours apart

After Will Webb was placed in a hospice, his wife requested that she be placed there too. They both died March 6.

DETROIT – A Michigan couple who rarely spent a day apart after 56 years of marriage died on the same day in the hospital.

Judy and Will Webb of Southgate, Michigan, both 77, were holding hands before they died in a hospice center on March 6, their daughter, MaryBeth Webb, told ABC Detroit affiliate

They first connected at the age of 14, according to WXYZ. When Will Webb enlisted in the U.S. military, Judy Webb would write letters to him, their daughter said.

"They just became friends and have been together ever since," MaryBeth Webb said.

Later, Will Webb worked nights as a printer and Judy Webb worked days at a local hospital. She would stay up late to wait for him to get home every night.

MaryBeth Webb said her parents are the reason her family is tight-knit.

"We just had a lot of fun -- a lot of good times," MaryBeth

The couple rarely spent a day apart before their health started to decline late last year, their daughter said.

In December, Judy Webb's health began to suffer following a medical procedure that "basically didn't go well," MaryBeth Webb told The News-Herald. She suffered from an infection that almost killed her on New Year's Eve and was then transported to Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit, where she remained on a ventilator, their daughter told the Southgate-based newspaper.

The next day, Will Webb collapsed from exhaustion, The News-Herald reported.

"My dad - seeing her like that - it was too much for him," MaryBeth Webb told the newspaper. "From that point on, everything that happened to her happened to him in a different place."

When Judy Webb spiked a fever, so did her husband. When she began to suffer from congestion, he got pneumonia, and their health failures continued to parallel each other's until they died, their daughter said.

After Will Webb was put into hospice care, his wife requested that she be placed there too.

On the day they died, their beds had been pushed together and they were holding hands, MaryBeth Webb told WXYZ. Will Webb died at 2 a.m., and Judy Webb died just hours later, their daughter said.

She continued, "When my dad died, my mom just kind of - she wasn't responsive at all, verbally -- but you could see her pick up her hand and she was rubbing my dad's hand like, 'I'll be there soon.'"

MaryBeth Webb said her parents "didn't want to live without each other," describing their relationship as "a great love story."

"I'm happy that they went together and don't have to suffer losing each other, but it's still hard," MaryBeth Webb told The News-Herald.

The couple leaves behind three daughters, five grandchildren and four greatgrandchildren, according to their obituary.

Police search for man who slashed victims in South Gate, Lynwood

The man targeted three people in unprovoked attacks Wednesday, police said.

SOUTH GATE - Police are seeking a man on a bicycle who slashed the faces of two women and a man during a seemingly random rampage in South Gate and Lynwood on Wednesday, officials said.

The series of three unprovoked attacks began shortly before 11 a.m., according to South Gate Police Department and Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department officials.

The man rode his bicycle past a woman along Firestone Boulevard, near Hunt Avenue, South Gate police said in a written statement.

"The suspect slashed the victim's face with something sharp," the statement said.

The bicycle-riding attacker then showed up minutes later in the area of San Luis Avenue and Abbot Road, just under 2 miles away, Los Angeles County sheriff's Sgt. Chris Creta said. The second attack was reported at 10:51 a.m.

As in the first assault, a woman was slashed in the face, the sergeant said.

A third attack took place about six minutes later, just under a mile away, at Imperial Highway and Long Beach Boulevard.

The attacker approached a man and slashed him in the face before fleeing, according to Creta.

The man and woman attacked in Lynwood were both taken to hospitals with relatively superficial injuries that were not considered life threatening, Creta said. They described the weapon used as an "unknown metal object," he added.

In both Lynwood slashings, "The suspect did not talk, nor give any warning regarding his intent," Creta said.

No motive was known.

Police described the attacker as a Latino man of about 30 years old, about 5 feet 6 inches tall, with a dark complexion. He wore dark clothing and rode a mountainstyle bicycle with oversize tires. The bike appeared to have a white sticker on its left, front fork.

Anyone with information can reach the South Gate Police Department at 323-563-5436, or the Sheriff's Century Station at 323-568-4800. Tips may also be submitted anonymously to L.A. Regional Crime Stoppers at 800-222-8477.

Flight student killed in Compton plane crash is identified

Lukas Swidinski, a Long Beach resident, was killed in an accident at Compton Airport.

COMPTON – Coroner's officials have released the identity of a 40-year-old flight student who died in a fiery crash between two airplanes on the tarmac of Compton-Woodley Airport earlier this month.

Lukas Michael Swidinski of Long Beach was pronounced dead at the scene of the crash, which took place about 7 p.m. on March 13, Los Angeles County Department of Medical ExaminerCoroner Lt. Nani Cholakians said.

Identification was delayed as coroner's officials sought relatives of the victim.

He was in a single-engine Cessna 152 airplane sitting on a runway after landing when another single-engine plane, a North American T-28, approached from behind and landed on top of it, according to witnesses.

Swidinski was killed in the crash, while the flight instructor in the Cessna was hospitalized in critical condition.

The pilot and solo occupant of the T-28 was not hurt in the crash, officials said.

The Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board are investigating the crash.

Students blame campus brawl on racial tensions

A fist fight involving a dozen freshmen was partly blamed on racial conflict on campus.

PARAMOUNT – A fight among a dozen students at Paramount High School's West Campus on Tuesday involved some remarks that were "racial in nature" but that were "not indicative of a heightened racial tension at the school," the school district superintendent said Wednesday.

In a statement posted on the Paramount Unified School District's website, Superintendent Ruth Perez said the fight involved ninth-graders on the campus in the 14400 block of Downey Avenue.

"School staff, security and law enforcement responded immediately," Perez said. "No students were seriously injured. Any reports to the contrary are false. The students responsible for this fight have been identified, and will face consequences in accordance with district policy and state law."

Cell phone video of the confrontation was circulated on social media. NBC4 reported it was the second fight this week on the campus.

Perez said teachers, counselors, social workers and administrators were working together "to remind the students of the behavioral expectations that we have as well as the consequences."

Administrators said racial comments were made as the fight took place, but denied the school has an ongoing racial issue.

"I thought this was going to be a safe environment because it's Paramount, but when the first fight happened, I was kind of getting worried that it was going to happen again. My prediction was right. It did happen again," one student said.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

Breathing is such a natural and innate reflex that most of us don't give it a second thought. It is, however, a struggle for the 27 million Americans (onethird of whom are children) suffering from asthma.

Every year, asthma causes 1.7 million visits to doctor's offices, 1.3 million emergency room visits, some 400,000 hospitalizations, and more than 3,500 deaths. The estimated annual cost due to loss of productivity comes to about $56 billion.

Asthma is a life-threatening, incurable, chronic inflammation of the lung airways. An asthma attack starts with a bronchospasm (a tightening of muscles around the airways). The lining of the airways become swollen or inflamed and thicker mucous is produced. The bronchospasm, inflammation, and mucous production all lead to wheezing, coughing, and shortness of breath. Other symptoms include rapid breathing, chest tightness or pressure, difficulty talking, feelings of anxiety and panic, a pale and sweaty face, and in severe attacks, blue lips and fingernails from lack of oxygen. There are many triggers for asthma attacks:

·Allergies play a major role. Common allergens include ragweed, pollen, mold, animal dander, and dust mites. 80% of children with asthma also suffer from allergies.

·Environmental allergens trigger asthma attacks. They include cigarette and other types of smoke, chemical fumes, strong odors, and extreme weather.

·Exercise can induce an asthma attack, even in people who don't otherwise experience asthma. Those with exerciseinduced asthma are likely more sensitive to changes in the temperature and humidity of the air. When at rest, we breathe through our nose, which warms, humidifies, and cleanses the air we inhale. When we exercise, we breathe faster and through our mouths, so that the air that enters our lungs is colder, drier, and not cleansed.

·Respiratory infections affect the lungs and may inflame and narrow the airways, triggering an asthma attack.

Asthma is an inherited disease. If one parent has asthma, there is a 30% chance that the child will as well, and the odds rise to 70% if both parents have asthma. It is more common among boys than girls. It is a lifelong condition. Although some feel that they grow out of their childhood asthma, it is, in fact, a chronic ailment. One in five children go into remission by age 19, but later in life asthma may well reappear.

Treatment for asthma focuses on prevention and control of the symptoms:

·Use a peak flow meter to detect the narrowing of airways even before symptoms appear. This can provide time to adjust medications or take other steps before symptoms get worse.

·Identify allergen triggers, and avoid them.

·Become familiar with available rescue medicines or maintenance medicines, such as bronchodilators and antiinflammatories.

·Develop an emergency plan for severe attacks. If you are having an asthma attack and have already used your rescue medicines, quickly see your doctor or head for the nearest emergency room. Delays can be fatal.

Fortunately, treatments for asthma have grown more effective through the years. Although we continue to see deaths, many can be avoidable with proper treatment and care. If you are an asthmatic, it is critical that you have a close and ongoing relationship with your doctor.

Don't rename of the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum

BY JANICE HAHN

Football fans entering Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum this fall are likely to see something nobody will want to cheer.

USC, which was given control of the stadium by the Coliseum Commission in 2013, sold stadium naming rights for $69 million last year. The change is scheduled to kick in this August.

The new name? United Airlines Memorial Coliseum.

But maybe it's not too late.

The name change was announced by USC's last president, C.L. Max Nikias, in 2018. Now the school has a new president, Carol L. Folt, who has a chance to rebuild some trust by revisiting the deal.

Unlike other modern sports venues, Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum is not just a stadium — it is a war memorial. Removing "Los Angeles" and replacing it with a corporate sponsor insults the memories of those the Coliseum was intended to honor.

The civic visionaries who fought for the structure, including the Chandler family which then owned the Los Angeles Times, dedicated the stadium to the doughboys from Los Angeles who marched off to the fields of Europe in 1917 and 1918 – many of whom never came home from the "war to end all wars.

An April 1921 Times story about the signing of a Coliseum contract by city and county officials declared "Million-Dollar Structure to be City's War Memorial."

That promise was broadened in 1968, during the divisive Vietnam War, when my father, Supervisor Kenny Hahn, rededicated the stadium to all Americans — not just Angelenos — who served in World War I. But he would never have dreamed that the city's name would be removed from the memorial altogether - nor would he have allowed it.

The Coliseum has been the home field for some of L.A.'s greatest sports teams — the USC Trojans, UCLA Bruins, Los Angeles Rams and Los Angeles Dodgers. The city hosted two summer Olympic Games there, in 1932 and 1984, and is now planning to use it in a third in 2028.

The Coliseum's name is cemented in Los Angeles history. Its concrete bowl has resonated with the voices of Pope John Paul II celebrating Mass; John F. Kennedy accepting the 1960 Democratic presidential nomination; evangelist Billy Graham issuing a massive altar call; and Nelson Mandela rallying Angelenos to end apartheid.

Coliseum's dedicatory purpose. We've never messed with its name, which resides in the National Register of Historic Places. Until now. There's still time, however, to revisit the issue and balance the

Throughout it all, Los Angeles has never broken faith with the demands of history with the needs of fundraising to renovate the The 2013 deal giving USC control of the stadium and authorization to sell naming rights was shortsighted. The Coliseum Commission, of which I am now president, has been trying for months to work with USC on a compromise. Now, with the selection of Folt, USC has an opportunity to generate some needed goodwill with L.A. residents by preserving the history and legacy of the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

USC should consider a reasonable alternative, such as renaming the field the "United Airlines Field at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum." This would still give the airline commercial exposure while maintaining the historic name of the stadium structure.

Corporate sponsorship dollars are necessary for a sorely needed upgrade of a beloved stadium. But we simply can't allow the temptation of collecting them to denigrate the memories of veterans who served in World War I and the Angelenos who wanted to honor them.

Janice Hahn represents the 4th Supervisorial District on the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors, which includes Downey. She is president of the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum Commission.

New Zealand's new gun law is a non-solution

BY STEVE CHAPMAN

American supporters of gun control are aflame with admiration for New Zealand, whose government needed only six days after a mass shooting to enact a strict new gun law. "See. It's not that hard," tweeted Sen. Chris Murphy, D-Conn. "This is what leadership looks like,' marveled Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, D-N.Y.

It was notable that Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern pushed through a ban on so-called assault weapons with so little opposition. Also notable were the claims about what it will achieve. "Every semi-automatic weapon used in the terrorist attack on Friday will be banned in this country," she said. The result will be "to make our community safer.'

But the assumption that the restrictions will save the country from mass shootings or other gun violence is unfounded. The guns deemed acceptable by the government, which will remain available, would be fully adequate to wreak the sort of carnage that occurred in Christchurch.

Ardern went beyond what the United States legislated under the assault weapons ban of 1994. The New Zealand law affects all semiautomatic rifles (except the small .22-caliber), shotguns and pistols, not just those that resemble military weapons. It forbids large magazines, as the U.S. law did, but also any gun that can accept a detachable magazine holding more than five cartridges. The idea is to prevent rapid shooting of many rounds.

This set of changes may sound as though it would make a huge difference. A rifle that can discharge 30 bullets in rapid sequence is certainly useful for anyone who wants to shoot as many people as possible in a short

But mass shooters don't kill a lot of people because they find weapons suitable to the task. They find weapons suitable to the task because they want to kill a lot of people. The crucial question is: If these guns were no longer available, could a determined killer find good substitutes? The answer is yes.

The obvious adaptation would be to carry several magazines, which can be switched out in seconds during a shooting spree. Another option is to take more than one gun, as mass shooters

Killers could also resort to different weapons and ammunition. A shotgun capable of holding five rounds could be loaded with buckshot shells, packed with the equivalent of nine .33-caliber pellets apiece - 45 deadly projectiles. Had the Christchurch shooter chosen this option, he might have killed even more people in even less time.

Let's not forget handguns. A 2018 study of 23 mass shootings in the U.S. in the Journal of the American College of Surgeons found that one-third of the fatalities were inflicted with pistols. The horrific 2007 Virginia Tech shootings, which killed 32 plus the shooter, were done entirely with handguns.

Nor will slowing a shooter down necessarily make a difference. In Christchurch, the killer entered a mosque, laid down a barrage, and returned to his vehicle before going back to do more shooting. Most mass shooters don't fire as rapidly as possible, because they don't need

There is another reason the ban won't work: The existing guns that it outlaws will not evaporate. The government will require owners to turn them in for compensation. But there are 250,000 gun owners in New Zealand, with at least 1.2 million firearms. Though most will comply, the ones with criminal intentions will not.

Much is made of the experience in Australia, which outlawed all semi-automatic rifles and shotguns in the wake of a mass shooting — and has had only one mass shooting since. But mass shootings there were rare prior to the ban. Gun homicides did fall after it went into effect — but they had been declining before, and other types of homicide also declined, suggesting that the ban was not a

The New Zealand law has little chance of impeding a future killer from emulating the mosque shooter. Even if it did, it would have little relevance to Americans. The U.S. has far more guns per capita than New Zealand does, including at least 8.5 million

"assault rifles." That doesn't include millions of other semiautomatic guns with detachable magazines.

A ban similar to the 1994 version would leave these guns in private hands. An effort to force them to be turned in, of course, would be politically and logistically impossible.

After the gruesome Christchurch massacre, the government of New Zealand offered a response that was prompt, decisive and bold. Anyone who thinks it is a solution, though, should be advised: Don't get your hopes up.

Will consumers drive Facebook out of business?

BY SCOTT RASMUSSEM

It's no secret that firms such as Facebook, Google, Amazon and Apple have extraordinary levels of power and influence. For example, most voters (55 percent) believe that Facebook has too much power. To some in the political world, this is a problem that only government intervention can

But, that's not the way the public sees it.

There is very little public support for breaking up the tech companies or having the federal government regulate the platforms. That reluctance comes partly from the reasonable fear that giving such power to federal bureaucrats would make things worse rather than better.

Additionally, voters clearly recognize that consumer choice and marketplace competition exert more control over large companies than any government agency could impose. Looking out over the next 25 years, 87 percent of voters believe Facebook will have to deal with significant competition that challenges its dominance. In fact, a majority (52 percent) believe it is likely the social media giant will actually go out of business during that time.

Facebook is perceived to be in more trouble than the other tech giants, but voters overwhelmingly expect that Google, Amazon and Apple will also face significant competition over the coming quarter of a century. However, most believe those companies will survive. Just 26 percent believe Apple will go out of business; 23 percent say the same about Google; and 20 percent think Amazon will disappear.

Still, even though most believe these companies are expected to survive, the serious competition they face will hold them accountable.

This reality is often missed by people who look at the world as it is and can't believe anything will change without political action. The current debate over tech companies is simply the latest version in an ongoing saga.

In 1967, General Motors sold 49 percent of all cars purchased in the United States. John Kenneth Galbraith, a political economist, wrote that GM's position was so dominant that it could no longer be constrained by either consumers or competitors. Galbraith, who served in four presidential administrations, believed that the auto firms would never compete with each other because they shared a common interest in soaking the consumer by raising prices.

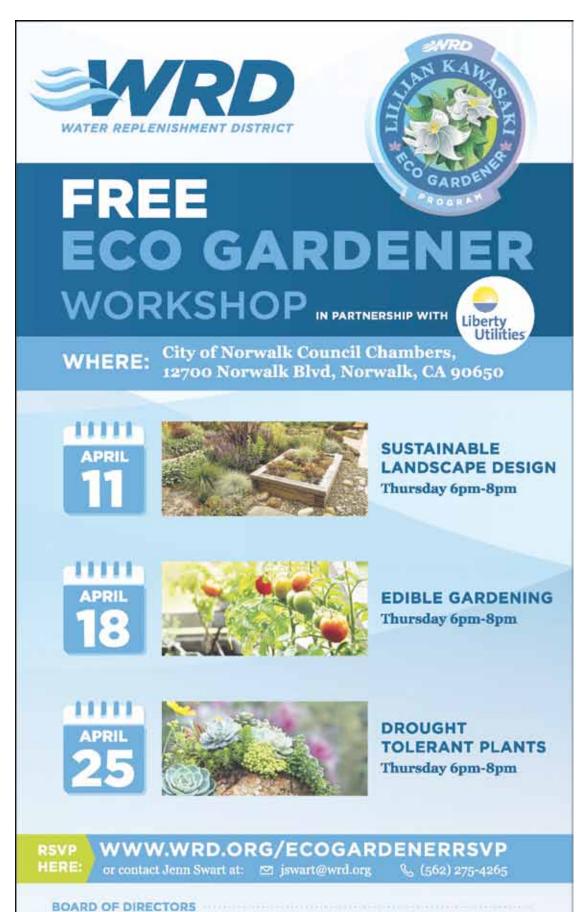

Eleven years later, Galbraith repeated his claim that no other auto company would be foolish enough to take on GM.

Why?

"Everyone knows that the survivor of such a contest would not be the aggressor but General Motors." The auto giant's market share was still a remarkable 46 percent at that point. It never again reached such lofty heights. In fact, GM's share of the market declined for 29 of the next 36 years, eventually leading it into bankruptcy and a government bailout. It went from selling 46 percent of all cars in 1978 to 35 percent a decade later, 29 percent a decade after that, and just 17 percent in 2014.

It's difficult to picture how large and seemingly invincible companies will someday fail. Still, as voters recognize, it's likely that many of today's tech giants will suffer the fate of General Motors. That's the way a dynamic economy is supposed to work. And, it's a system that puts power in the hands of the people rather than the politicians.
