Norwalk High Stadium takes shape

The brand new all-turf stadium and sports complex is due for completion by the end of the year.

By John Sherrard Contributor

NORWALK - Norwalk High School, founded in 1956, will be the home of a new stadium and sports complex later this year.

The project is beginning to take shape with field buildings coming out of the ground, light standards in place and even the football scoreboard is standing in the north end zone.

The project is a funding that was passed by Norwalk residents in a 2014 vote and is a $375 million Education Bond Measure.

The Norwalk high Sports Complex, which began in October of 2019, are expected to be completed in late December of this year or early January of 2021. They will consist of a new stadium, baseball and softball fields, soccer fields, tennis courts and a field house and concession stand.

Last year, John Glenn high finished a new sports complex, also under the Measure G Bond.

"It's going to be really great for the students and what a great opportunity for the school for many, many years to come," Norwalk-La Mirada Unified School District Facilities Planning and Construction Director Edith Florence said. "It will be an all-turf facility."

In addition, the baseball and softball fields will have lights.

Along with Director Florence, Facilities Coordinator Lorenzo Kohn will also oversee the project.

AWI Builders, Inc. is the General Contractor and the Construction Manager is the Cumming Corporation.

"I'm excited and very happy for the kids," said Norwalk Athletic Director David Snyder, who is an alumnus of the school. "I go by there about once a week."

"Before school was stopped in March, the students were watching the progress from the beginning and were excited.

"The excitement has kind of been pushed back because of no school now. It's kind of taken away from the glory of the new stadium"

A huge factor for all of the teams that will use the facility is the real "home game" feel.

"I'm looking forward to not having to transport all the athletes to other facilities for 'home games,'" Snyder added. "It will be nice to have home

Cerritos College partners with Downey Space Center

NORWALK - Cerritos College's Teacher TRAC program, in partnership with the Columbia Memorial Space Center, received $274,583 in grants from the National Science Foundation for its new BE-STELLAR program to prepare underserved college students to become STEM educators.

California's teacher shortage is acute, especially in high school STEM areas. There is also a widening diversity gap, a disconnect between faculty and student demographics.

To address these issues, Cerritos College has partnered with the space center to build pathways to STEM teaching careers through the new BE-STELLAR program. BE-STELLAR offers mentoring and experiential learning to future STEM teachers through paid internships at the Space Center and STEM faculty mentorships.

While developed primarily for Latinx students in order to address the regional diversity gap, the program is open to all Cerritos College students.

"We are excited for this opportunity to partner with Cerritos College to help empower students in becoming exceptional educators who will one day continue to shape the world of STEM education," said Downey Mayor Blanca Pacheco. "Our Columbia Memorial Space Center thrives in providing innovative learning opportunities for all students, while strengthening pathways to careers in science, technology, engineering and math."

"This grant will help our aspiring educators," said Dr. Jose Fierro, president/superintendent, Cerritos College. "In our service area, the teacher-student demographic gap is most severe for the Latinx population. The grant and our new BE-STELLAR program will help prepare more qualified STEM educators, increase student achievement in K-12 math and science, and improve career opportunities for minority students in our area."

The award-winning Teacher TRAC program celebrated its 20th year of preparing students to become highly qualified K-12 teachers this year. The program has provided more than 2,000 students with a seamless transition to earning a bachelor's degree and teaching credential at universities including California State University, Long Beach. To date Teacher TRAC has trained more than 800 teachers who work across Southern California and nationally, and has regional partnerships with five districts and 44 schools.

Cerritos College was aided in the preparation of this grant by Kickstarter, a technical assistance program that prepares and positions community college Hispanic-serving institutions to compete successfully for federal funds with focus on student recruitment and retention in STEM fields.

DACA decision “step in the right direction,” college says

ABC Unified applauds Supreme Court DACA ruling

NORWALK - On June 18, 2020, the Supreme Court ruled to shield nearly 700,000 Dreamers through the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program. Dreamers/AB 540 students will be protected from deportation and allowed to continue their pursuit of higher education, serve in the military, and seek employment opportunities, among other areas. The Supreme Court overruled the Trump Administration’s plan to immediately end DACA, which would have terminated the eight-year-old program established during the Obama years.

On June 15, 2020, the high court also ruled to protect the employment rights of LGBTQIA+ workers under the 1964 Civil Rights Act (under Title VII). The law forbids employment discrimination based on race, religion, national origin, or sex. The ruling also forbids employers from denying healthcare to LGBTQIA+ employees. Currently, only 21 states and the District of Columbia provide full, explicit legal protections for LGBTQIA+ people based on gender identity and sexual orientation, including California.

The Cerritos College Board of Trustees issued the following statement:

“The Supreme Court’s historic decision to protect Dreamers/AB 540 students and LGBTQIA+ employees is a step in the right direction toward civil rights; diversity, inclusion, and equity. The Board celebrates these unprecedented rulings as powerful examples of hope that one day we will get to a place where systemic discrimination on the basis of immigration status, race, religion, sexual orientation, gender, gender identity, or ability, is no longer tolerated. As a college, we must continue to do our part to disrupt all forms of systemic racism and discrimination at every level,” said Marisa Perez, president, Cerritos College Board of Trustees.

“As a career educator, I support systems to provide all children access to free public education. The Supreme Court’s decision supports the ideals of equity and opportunity that run so deep in our school district.”

THE PET SPOT

JUNE 26th IS TAKE YOUR DOG TO WORK DAY

Let's get ready for the 4th of July!

Many dogs are afraid of loud noises and especially terrified of fireworks. With the Fourth of July coming up soon, it is good to keep in mind four main points to prepare for the celebratory pyrotechnics—keep dogs inside, create a calming environment, keep them away from fireworks, update identification. Here are few additional tips that we hope will help calm your dogs.

- Make sure your dog has somewhere they feel safe such as a covered crate or room in your house—or even in a closet or under your bed.
- ID. Update all of your dog’s contact info. Double check ID tags and microchip information in case they manage to escape. Also make sure you have a current photo of your dog.
- Exercise. Give your dog plenty of exercise during the day. So that they are tired and safely inside when fireworks begin.
- Tasty Treats. Use food dispensing toys, like Kongs or edible bones for your dog to keep occupied and distracted.
- CBD. Try a new CBD (cannabidiol) oil or treat for your fearful dog. Make sure you start with a low dosage. Hemp-based products can be a natural alternative to over-the-counter medicines, pharmaceuticals for animal anxiety and stress.
- Play music! Music is a helpful way to calm your dog and can also help muffle the sounds of fireworks. Or keep the TV or radio on so that sound might distract your dog from all the noise.
- Thundershirt. Many people swear by the power of the Thundershirt – a wrap around vest your dog wears that is said to instantly calm them down.
- Keep the curtains closed and shut the windows during fireworks to minimize sound.
- Stay with your dog. Your presence can be calming, a good petting session or massage can help as well.

George Floyd changed my mind

By Mona Charen

For many years, I was skeptical about accusations of racism in the criminal justice system. Yes, I knew that blacks comprised only about 12% of the population yet represented 33% of the prison population. But that data alone did not prove that police are racists or that courts are tougher on blacks than others. The relevant criterion is not the percentage of the population, but the percentage of the criminal population, and when you consider the higher rates of offending among African Americans, the seemingly disproportionate rates of incarceration make sense.

Well, some countered, if you look at who winds up on death row, you can see the racism at work. Less than half of murder victims in the U.S. are white, yet a 2003 study found that 80% of inmates on death row had killed white people. I wasn't convinced. It might be evidence of racism, or it could be that when people kill others of their same race, they are more likely to know them. These could be crimes of passion and therefore less likely to draw the death penalty. According to the Bureau of Justice Statistics, between 2001 and 2005, nearly 78% of blacks were murdered by other blacks, and nearly 70% of whites were killed by other whites.

I thought Michael Brown's death at the hands of a cop in Ferguson was tragic, but the Obama Department of Justice investigation found that the forensic evidence supported the officer's version of events.

My views have changed though, bit by bit, over the past half-decade. Was it the sheer accumulation of cases? Eric Garner was choked to death. Yes, he was resisting arrest, but for what? For selling "loosies" — untaxed cigarettes. Freddie Gray, 25, was taken into custody in Baltimore. Handcuffed but not belted to his seat, police took him for what they called a "rough ride." Somehow, he snapped his spine in the police van. He lapsed into a coma and died a week later.

Walter Scott was stopped for a defective taillight. After initial questioning and a quick scuffle, Scott fled the officer (perhaps fearful because he owed back child support). Officer Michael Slager shot Scott in the back, killing him. He filed a police report saying that Scott had grabbed his Taser, but a bystander video showed that after the shooting, Officer Slager ran back to the site of the initial scrap, picked something up and dropped it next to Scott's body.

Laquan McDonald was a 17-year-old with PCP in his system and a knife in his hand. But contrary to the police report suggesting that McDonald was shot after lunging at police, the autopsy showed that he was hit 16 times, nine of them in the back.

Ahmaud Arbery was out jogging and was tracked and trapped by a two-car posse that included a former law enforcement officer. The last words Arbery heard before he died were "f--- n---."

And, of course, there's the depraved murder of George Floyd, crushed to death under the knee of a pitiless cop while three others stood by.

I know there are videos of whites being shot by police. And as John McWhorter argues, it's likely that we haven't seen those videos because they don't fit the narrative of racist white cops.

And yet, I think of the testimony of black men that they are routinely pulled over and hassled for "driving while black." Is that their imagination? Can we dismiss Neil DeGrasse Tyson, who recalls a meeting at which one man after another recounted his experiences of being stopped by police, only to reveal that it was a conference of black physicists? What about Senator Tim Scott? He was stopped seven times in one year driving in his own neighborhood.

There's data about those traffic stops. A study looked at 95 million traffic stops by 56 different police agencies between 2011 and 2018. They found that blacks were far more likely than whites to be pulled over — but the disparity declined at night, when it's harder to detect the race of the driver.

A study published by the National Bureau of Economic Research in February 2020 looked at responses to 2 million 911 calls in two cities. It found that white officers were five times as likely to use force, including deadly force, in minority neighborhoods than African American officers.

There's a lot more where that came from.

Some conservatives object that African American men are far more likely to die at the hands of other African American men than at the hands of police and demand to know where the outrage is about deaths in Chicago. But criminals are criminals. The police, by contrast, are hired, trained and armed by all of us. They are sworn to protect and to serve. There is no equivalence between the acts of Derek Chauvin and a Chicago gang member.

I've long believed that police have a difficult job and deal with the worst of the worst on a daily basis. I'm grateful for their protection. And there's a lot of crying wolf in the race business. See Smollett, Jussie. But I've come to believe that mistreatment of African Americans is not a myth and is not uncommon. I'm glad that so many Americans are signaling their dismay at these outcomes. People's minds can change. Mine did.

Tulsa showed us a path to November

By Froma Harrop

What didn't happen in Tulsa last weekend was gratifying and a relief. The protests against racism were overwhelmingly orderly. President Donald Trump's rally also proceeded without serious incident and, notably, without much of an audience.

And this didn't happen for lack of provocation. Trying to whip up excitement for his revived rally schedule, Trump started the weekend with a bloodcurdling threat against protesters should they step out of line. Oklahomans, he opined, would not treat protesters in Tulsa with the same delicacy allegedly afforded those in liberal New York, Seattle and Minneapolis. The tweet doubled the offense by lumping protesters with "anarchists, agitators, looters or lowlives."

To further stir up the cauldron of racial tension, he had originally scheduled his rally for Freedom Day, which commemorates the date in 1865 that the last enslaved blacks in Texas learned they were free. And this in the city where, almost 100 years ago, white mobs rampaged through a thriving black commercial district, massacring hundreds and burning down businesses and homes. All that was piled on enduring embers of nationwide anger over the death of George Floyd.

But the people of Tulsa didn't go where some tried to lead them. The Tulsa police and National Guard troops kept the sides apart so protesters and Trump rallygoers could both exercise their right to assemble. And they kept their cool. For example, when an attention-seeking demonstrator demanded to be arrested, the police officer smartly ignored him.

Mareo Johnson, a pastor and founder of Black Lives Matter Tulsa, organized a disciplined demonstration in a park not far from the president's rally. Tykebrean Cheshire, founder of Peaceful Rally Tulsa, kept her group away from the BOK Center. "I wanted to do the old school MLK thing," she said.

A thumbs-up goes to Tulsa's Republican mayor, G.T. Bynum, who posted on Facebook: "The world is watching, Tulsa. Let's show them what love looks like. They need it."

And a round of understanding is due to those Oklahoma Republicans who gave the rally a pass, leaving empty rows of blue seats. The Trump campaign boasted that 1 million had signed up to attend. Only about 6,200 people actually showed at the 19,000-capacity BOK Center.

What happened? The poor attendance may have partly reflected melting support for Trump. But much of it certainly indicated a serious concern about the coronavirus.

It's true that many young people on TikTok and fans of the K-pop school of music registered for the event with no intention of participating. That may have inflated the numbers the Trump campaign said would be present. (An area was set outside for an expected overflow crowd.) But people were admitted to the arena strictly on a first-come, first-served basis, not registrations.

Fact is, COVID-19 cases were spiking in Oklahoma, and informed people know that a hollering crowd in an enclosed space was going to produce a steaming stew of pathogens. They also knew of Trump world's hostility toward face masks that would help protect them and others from the virus.

Would someone please explain the definition of courage that elevates refusing to wear a mask during a pandemic to an act of heroic defiance? Kudos, meanwhile, to the few brave attendees who did wear masks in the face of social pressure to be stupid.

More flashing red lights took the form of demands that rallygoers sign waivers absolving Trump of any legal responsibility should they contract the virus. If Trump is good at anything, it's looking out for Number One.

Tulsa, you rose to the occasion by not rising to the bait. Congratulations, and may the rest of America follow your example.

Nancy Pelosi, the queen of debt

By Terence P. Jeffrey

In the 2,000 days that Speaker Nancy Pelosi has now served as the leader of a division of the federal government that the Constitution gives authority over all appropriations, the federal debt has increased by a record $9,655,515,485,628.06.

That is more than all the debt the federal government accumulated ($8,670,596,242,973.04) under all of the House speakers who served before Pelosi first took that position on Jan. 4, 2007.

The record $9,655,515,485,628.06 in federal debt amassed during Pelosi's first 2,000 days as speaker works out to an average of $4,827,757,742.81 in added debt per day.

None of her predecessors comes close to that mark. She is, indisputably, this nation's Queen of Debt.

It will mark her place in history.

Pelosi has served as speaker of the House twice.

As recorded on the official House website, she first took the position on Jan. 4, 2007 and served until Jan. 5, 2011, when she was succeeded by John Boehner. That first Pelosi tenure lasted 1,463 days.

She resumed the speakership — in her current tenure — on Jan. 3, 2019. As of this Monday, she had served another 537 days — bringing her total time as speaker to 2,000 days.

In Pelosi's first stretch as speaker, according to the numbers published by the U.S. Treasury, the federal debt rose from $8,670,596,242,973.04 to $14,011,526,727,895.85. That was an increase of $5,340,930,484,922.81.

In her current stretch as speaker, the federal debt has risen from $21,929,258,046,653.58 on Jan. 3, 2019 to $26,243,843,047,358.83 as of the close of business on Monday. That is an increase of $4,314,585,000,705.25.

When combined, the $5,340,930,484,922.81 debt increase from her first tenure as speaker and the $4,314,585,000,705.25 from her second equal a total debt increase of $9,655,515,485,628.06.

As noted, all of the debt accumulated by all of the speakers who preceded her first tenure ($8,670,596,242,973.04) is less than the debt ($9,655,515,485,628.06) that has accumulated when Pelosi has occupied the speakership.

It is also true that even when the historical figures are adjusted for inflation (using the Bureau of Labor Statistics inflation calculator), no recent speaker has come close to presiding over as steep an increase in the debt as Pelosi has

Her immediate predecessor, Paul Ryan, comes closest.

When Ryan took over the speakership on Oct. 29, 2015, the federal debt, according to the Treasury, was $18,152,590,112,385.69. When he left the speakership on Jan. 3, 2019, it was $21,929,258,046,653.58.

Ryan presided over an increase in the debt of $3,776,667,934,267.89. When converted from January 2019 dollars to May 2020 dollars, that becomes approximately $3,846,916,310,000.00.

Thus, in Ryan's 1,177 days as speaker, the federal debt rose an average of $3,268,408,079.86 per day in May 2020 dollars.

That's a great deal of money. But it's still 32.3% less than the $4,827,757,742.81 the debt has increased per day under Pelosi.

Under John Boehner, the debt rose from $14,011,526,727,895.85 on Jan. 5, 2011, when he became speaker, to $18,152,590,112,385.69 on Oct. 29, 2015, when he left that position.

That is an increase of $4,141,063,384,489.84 in current year dollars or approximately $4,464,147,040,000.00 in constant May 2020 dollars.

During the 1,753 days that Boehner was speaker, the debt increased an average of $2,546,575,607.53 per day in constant May 2020 dollars.

That is $2,281,182,135.28 — or 47.3% — less than Pelosi's $4,827,757,742.81 in added debt per day.

Under Dennis Hastert, the debt rose from $5,615,428,551,461.33, when he became speaker on Jan. 6, 1999, to $8,670,596,242,973.04, when he left that position on Jan. 4, 2007.

That is an increase of $3,055,167,691,511.71 in current year dollars or approximately $3,869,885,110,000.00 in constant May 2020 dollars.

In the 2,921 days that Hastert served as speaker, the federal debt increased an average of $1,324,849,404.31 per day in May 2020 dollars.

That is $3,502,908,338.50 — or 72.6% — less than Pelosi's $4,827,757,742.81 in added debt per day.

Under Newt Gingrich, the debt rose from $4,801,793,426,032.89, when he became speaker on Jan. 4, 1995, to $5,615,428,551,461.33, when he left the speakership on Jan. 6, 1999.

In the 1,464 days that Gingrich was speaker, the debt increased an average of $867,279,159.84 per day in constant May 2020 dollars.

That is $3,960,478,582.97 — or 82% — less than the Pelosi's $4,827,757,742.81 in average added debt per day.

Americans should hope that when Pelosi leaves the speakership, she is not succeeded by someone who shares her ability to borrow and spend — even when serving with Republican presidents.

Assemblywoman Garcia holds "Mega Food Distribution" event

Over 2,600 families from the 58th Assembly District received food and other provisions.

By Alex Dominguez
Staff Writer

BELL GARDENS - Over 2,600 families were the recipients of over 125,000 pounds of produce, nonperishables, poultry and cheese at a "Mega Food Distribution" event held by Assemblywoman Cristina Garcia in Bell Gardens earlier this week.

The event was an effort to alleviate hardship during a time where many are suffering from the economic effects of COVID-19.

In addition to food items, around 42,000 diapers were also given out.

"There's a lot of need out there as this pandemic continues," said Garcia. "We'd like to really thank the Crescent Food Bank who's coming from Santa Ana to help our community here."

Over 125,000 pounds of food was distributed. (Photo by Alex Dominguez)

"The need continues everywhere...We're just really blessed that we can do this. It's just encouraging folks to remember that we're a community, and whether we're dealing with the pandemic, or we're dealing with the discussions about race and systemic racism in our system, that we have those discussions with each other, we have an open heart, and find a way to move forward and be the community we've always been."

A group of anti-SB-625 demonstrators did arrive to the event to protest and did so with no known incident.

Short Stories

Memories of the 1992 L.A. Riots

By Yolanda Reyna

On March 3, 1991, a black man named Rodney King was viciously beaten by LAPD officers after a speed chase and his resisting arrest on California State Route 210. Someone recorded the incident and it quickly made the news.

What these officers inflicted on Rodney King was shocking. Each time they struck a blow to him, I flinched. It was heartbreaking for me to witness this beating and I was appalled.

I surmise there was some investigation before the officers were arrested and went to trial. On April 29, 1992, after seven days of deliberations, all four officers were acquitted.

The L.A. riots were just beginning, and I will never forget this. I was eight months pregnant with my first child and what I later witnessed on TV that day and the following days would be the most alarming experience for me.

The black smoke was billowing over the blue skies of L.A. The Rodney King verdict had been announced on the news the day I was driving home from work on the Santa Ana Freeway heading south from Commerce to Norwalk. As I watched the smoldering fires covering our city, I felt anxious.

There were no cell phones back then so I was unable to telephone my then husband, Robert. It seemed like an eternity and the longest drive of my life getting home. I listened to the news on my car radio and I did not know the severity of the event.

When I finally arrived home, I rushed to turn on the TV. As I watched the TV bleed the news of the chaos that was developing, I was both saddened and angry. Tears flooded my eyes, but as I stood in front of the TV watching the horror, my greatest hope was that this would not affect my pregnancy. I knew this was going to be a historical period in time.

These "human beings" were parading and jostling around without a care in the world. What I saw on the news was awful. There was looting, rage, even laughter. Innocent people were being dragged from their cars and severely beaten.

I particularly cried for trucker Reginald Denny that day.

I could not understand this, and the sight of this horrifying event was making me physically ill. It was obvious the rioters were aggressively showing their anger with the verdict of the officers being acquitted.

As much as I did not want to watch this, I continued to do so and for hours. Then I had to take a deep breath and pull away from it. The aftermath was devastating.

Sadly, Rodney King is no longer with us today, but I will always remember the following words he uttered one day while being interviewed on national TV:

"... Can we all get along? Can we get along? Can we stop making it horrible for the older people and the kids? ..."

In the end, so many lives were lost, people injured and businesses destroyed, and the beautiful city of L.A. was broken but not forgotten.

Downey woman pleads guilty to money laundering

DOWNEY - A Downey woman has pleaded guilty to money laundering charges stemming from a drug-trafficking scheme inside a California state prison, authorities announced Monday.

LaShawn Anderson, 50, was a civilian employee with the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department when she agreed to help a convicted murderer hide income made from selling drugs inside Centinela State Prison in 2017.

In her plea agreement, Anderson admitted to helping Lamont Devault, 49, and others to launder illicit proceeds. She faces up to 20 years in prison when she is sentenced Aug. 3.

After a three-day trial in February, a federal jury found Devault guilty of three felonies: conspiracy to distribute methamphetamine and other controlled substances, possession with intent to distribute methamphetamine, and possession with intent to distribute heroin.

According to the evidence presented at trial, Devault was an inmate at Centinela State Prison in Imperial County in 2017. Devault recruited his son, co-defendant Lamont Devault II, 26, of Long Beach, to obtain narcotics outside the prison supplied by an associate of another inmate, co-defendant Steve Bencom, 39, a.k.a. "Risky" and "Risky Business," of East Los Angeles.

Devault's son then supplied the drugs to co-defendant and prison cook Lance Medina, 33, a.k.a. "Droop," of El Centro, so that Medina could smuggle the drugs into the prison by concealing them in his underwear.

Devault, who coordinated the conspiracy by using a contraband cell phone in prison, then oversaw the distribution of those drugs within the prison through other inmates, including co-defendant Deandre McIntosh, 43, a.k.a. "Casper D," of Long Beach.

In November 2017, Medina was caught smuggling nearly 54 grams of methamphetamine into the prison. Medina had another 131 grams of methamphetamine and 91 grams of heroin at his home that he was planning to smuggle into the prison at Devault's direction.

Devault was sentenced to 188 months in federal prison, which will begin if he is paroled in March 2031. He is currently serving a life sentence on a murder charge.

Each of the other suspects were found guilty at their respective trials and are awaiting sentencing.

Returning to work? Tips to help your pets cope

Getty Images

Marcia Mayeda

As society starts slowly reopening from the coronavirus shut down, some people will begin returning to work outside the home and must leave behind pets that became accustomed to their ongoing companionship. Pet owners returning to work outside of the home will likely be concerned how their pets will handle the sudden separation. Some pets may become depressed or destructive because their owner is no longer around full time. If you plan to be returning to work outside of the home, here are some suggestions to get your pets accustomed to your absence:

Before your work schedule begins, start taking absences from the home so your pet can get used to being alone again. Go for a drive, take a walk, or engage in any other activities where you can still practice social distancing and comply with local health orders. Begin with just a brief absence and gradually increase the length of time that you are gone. It is important that you remain calm and relaxed both when you leave your home and return, so your pet doesn't associate your coming and going with something to be anxious about.

Provide puzzle toys for your pets. Puzzle toys take your pets' mind off your absence and are great mental stimulation. Your dog will enjoy a puzzle toy that can be filled with treats. These can occupy a dog for hours as they attempt to dislodge the treats. For added length of puzzle time, add peanut butter (without xylitol, which is toxic to pets), canned dog food, low fat cream cheese, or other goodies inside the treat and freeze it before giving it to your dog. There are many puzzle games for cats that take advantage of their prey drive to chase and capture moving objects. Options for both dogs and cats can be found at local pet stores or on any online pet toy website.

Make sure your pet is getting plenty of exercise. Try to build a brisk 30-minute walk for your dog into your schedule before you leave the home, or play an engaging game of fetch, tug of war, or other activity that will burn off any excess energy your dog has. Cats will enjoy chasing laser pointer beams or playing with many cat toys that encourage jumping.

If your pet is an only pet and enjoys the company of other animals, consider adopting a friend for it at one of the Los Angeles County Animal Care Centers (or any other animal shelter). Your pet cat and its new buddy can play together when you're gone, and you will have made a huge difference in the life of a homeless animal.

If you are not able to bring an additional pet into your home your dog instead might benefit from going to a doggie day care in your absence. Thoroughly research the facility and take a tour in advance to make sure it is suitable for your dog. DACC inspects all animal facilities in its jurisdiction and provides grades to them similar to Los Angeles County's restaurant grading system.

Find someone to stop by your home during the day to play with your pets or walk your dog. There are many qualified pet sitting companies, or even a trusted friend or neighbor might be able and willing to do this for you.

Always ensure that your pet is wearing its collar and tags whenever you are away in the event it escapes your home or yard to look for you. Keep your pet's license up to date to prevent any citations or fines for failing to comply with pet licensing laws. Microchip your pet, and make certain that you contact information is current with the microchip registry. All of these precautions are necessary to ensure you and your lost pet can be successfully reunited.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

Like most of you, I've been hearing some very funny jokes about the coronavirus. However, last time I checked, there was nothing humorous whatsoever about a lethal pandemic that has changed our daily lives so completely. Isn't it interesting how we cope with difficulties and stress during these surreal times? It turns out that jokes, gallows humor, and just laughter in general can be very healing - and a legitimate way of dealing with stress, alleviating depression, and improving our general health.

A good sense of humor is certainly not a cure-all, but a steady flow of preliminary scientific data suggests positive benefits. Our laughter not only helps us, but like the coronavirus, can be infectious.

A good laugh lightens the load mentally and also induces physical changes. It increases oxygen intake, thereby stimulating the heart, lungs and muscles. Laughter fires up and then cools down the stress response, and increases and then decreases the heart rate and blood pressure. It stimulates circulation and aids in muscle relaxation, which can help ease some of the physical symptoms of stress. It increases the release of endorphins, which make us feel better by binding to our opioid receptors. The more opioid receptors one's brain has, the more powerful the effect. Highly addictive opioid drugs, like heroin, also bind to these receptors, suggesting that laughter induces a euphoria that is not unlike a narcotic. By the same mechanism, it reduces pain as well. Clearly, this way is safer!

Laughing activates the release of the neurotransmitter serotonin, the same brain chemical affected by the most common types of antidepressants. It's not clear from the research how long this mood-improving effect lasts, but the burst of brain activity triggered by laughing is effective, at least for short periods.

Laughter can protect the heart. Research has shown that laughter may act as an anti-inflammatory, protecting blood vessels and heart muscles from the damaging effects of cardiovascular disease. The mechanism of this is unclear, but the body's stress response is indeed directly linked to increased inflammation.

Laughter forms social bonds. When a group laughs together, it spreads the endorphin release and promotes a sense of togetherness and safety. Each person in a social group who laughs can transmit those feelings. This may explain why some will genuinely laugh even if they're not quite certain what everyone else is laughing about. In essence, laughter helps make difficult situations easier; acting as a natural icebreaker and as a way to connect with others.

Laughter can be a key to relationship success. It's interesting that women tend to laugh more than men, although men appear to instigate laughter the most. Women rate a sense of humor as a top three trait for a potential mate, and men rate a woman who laughs higher than women who don't.

Most of us can find a way to laugh about the situations we find ourselves in. Spend time with friends who make you laugh. Share stories and jokes. While the research on the benefits of laughter to our health may be limited, it is clear that feeling a bit more positive doesn't hurt. There is more than enough news out there to bring us all down. Let's work on daily laughter, and help one another to feel a little bit better as we emerge from these challenging times.

If your pet has serious separation anxiety that cannot be remediated with these suggestions, consult a Certified Applied Animal Behaviorist (CAAB or ACAAB), your veterinarian, or a board-certified veterinary behaviorist (Dip ACVB).

Returning to work outside the home can go smoothly if well-planned. What will you do to ensure a smooth transition for your pets?

LA County considers diverting funds away from jails

The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors backed a proposal this week to consider reallocating funding provided to the county through AB109 from the jail system to alternatives to incarceration.

"This moment is a once-in-a-generation opportunity to get away from our over-reliance on incarceration and invest in treatment and services," said Supervisor Janice Hahn, who authored the motion with Hilda Solis.

"We cannot police our way out of all of our problems—whether that be mental illness, or poverty, or addiction. I want to look critically at the State funding that we currently give to our jail system and see if there is a smarter way to spend this money."

The motion passed by supervisors instructs the county's CEO to report back to the board with options for how to reallocate the county's future AB 109 community corrections funding toward alternatives to incarceration. This could include funding diversion programs, substance abuse programs, mental health treatment, housing, restorative justice programs, and community-based services.

The recommendations should be based on and build off of the recently passed recommendations in the Alternatives to Incarceration Workgroup's "Care First, Jail Last" March 2020 report.

"Today's vote in support of this Board motion demonstrates LA County's commitment to meaningful changes to the criminal justice system. Investing in community-based treatment and services, instead of incarceration, is not only humane, but is cost effective in the long run. It allows people to remain with their families and stay at their jobs, as they get treatment and help and that benefits all of us in the long run," said Solis.

"As we consider how to align our spending with the priorities of the 'Care First, Jail Last' approach, we must continue to invite community voices to the table to not only participate in this conversation, but to also be part of the solution in how we can uplift and empower our justice-involved communities."

The California Public Safety Realignment Act of 2011 (AB 109) shifted the responsibility for certain low-level offenders from the state to the counties. To help the counties implement their new responsibilities, the state provided an annual permanent funding stream to be used for criminal justice and rehabilitative services.

Since 2011, LA County has allocated most of its AB109 community corrections funding to the LA County Sheriff's Department to manage the jail system and the Probation Department. AB109 was responsible for a jump in LA County's daily jail population which went from 15,000 to 18,000 in the first year after realignment.

In the nine years since AB 109 was passed, the county has begun to reimagine its criminal justice system away from incarceration and punishment, and instead towards diversion and rehabilitation.

In 2015, the Board of Supervisors created the Office of Diversion and Reentry with the goal of implementing criminal justice diversion for individuals with mental illness.

Last year, the board created the Alternatives to Incarceration (ATI) Workgroup that was composed of representatives from county departments and the community. The ATI Workgroup spent almost a year compiling 144 recommendations for a comprehensive county-wide system of care that reduces the role of incarceration and instead uplifts the role of care and community.

In addition, the COVID-19 epidemic has meant the Sheriff's Department has dramatically reduced the population of the LA County jail system to around 12,000 today - well below what it was at when AB109 passed.

This year, the county is facing a projected decrease in AB 109 Community Corrections base allocation funds because of lost sales tax revenue due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The motion states "this gives us the opportunity to revisit the way the County has spent AB 109 Community Corrections funding in the past and to reassess ways we could spend AB 109 revenue in the future to support the visions put forward by the ATI Workgroup."

games. It's going to be sweet."

Snyder, who played both baseball and football at Norwalk and like all of the past players played their "home games" at Excelsior high.

"The prospect of home games is exciting for the players and not having to get on a bus," said Snyder, who was an offensive lineman, center and tackle. "I remember having to ride the bus to our home games. I love the game."

One promise Snyder has to fulfill is having former principal Mike Garcia at the first home game. Garcia recently moved on to a Norwalk-La Mirada School District position.

"He made me promise to have him at the opening of the new stadium."

Snyder begins his fifth year as the AD in the 2020-21 school year.

Perhaps the most excited person regarding the new stadium is second-year football coach Dean Gray.

"It's fantastic," said Gray, who was born in Norwalk and has been at the school for 31 years. "How thankful I am for the parents and for the school board. I am so thankful for the community for passing the bond and all the years of waiting for the stadium for this city.

"It opens up so many opportunities for the softball and baseball programs and soccer and tennis for all levels. To see the lights go up and the progress as I drive around the school is great. I have the greatest job in the world to coach here."

Gray's excitement boils over to his players too.

"The kids are excited and when they were in school they saw the construction and got excited as it goes up."

To date, there still is no decision on a start date for football and the other Fall sports.

However, one possibility being talked about is a late December or early January start for football.

"There is that possibility that could happen with the opening of the season in our new stadium," Gray said. "There's a lot of great things with the new stadium, but we want to make sure the kids are safe.

As Snyder mentioned, Gray was elated for no more away "home" games.

"It's great for us to not have to get on a bus."

If the season does start in the early Fall as usual, they would have a few more away "home games."

"I'm also excited for all of our sports and their new fields.

Included in one of those new fields is baseball and coach Bill Wenrick.

"This field is just unbelievable," said Wenrick, who was a pitcher on the 1982 CIF Champion at Norwalk. "I'm truly excited and Norwalk is a baseball town. To have these facilities is great. I never thought I'd see the day."

Wenrick, along with softball coach David Gonzalez is also thinking about the advantages of the lights at the fields.

"I can run camps at night and so forth," added Wenrick, who is entering his sixth year as coach next season. "It's a beautiful thing. It's just going to be good for the whole city, including the little leaguers. It will help big time."

Gonzalez, who is in his third year as Norwalk's softball coach, knows the value of playing under the lights.

"It's so exciting," Gonzalez said. "One thing in football is playing under the lights and I'm so looking forward to it on the softball field."

Gonzalez, who is also an assistant high school football coach, knows the value of a home field. "This is an actual sports-specific facility at home. There's nothing like playing at home."

Most of his players are beyond excited for their first practice on the new field.

"They are super excited and I get texts every time a light pole goes up," Gonzalez said.

Just in the last week, all of the light poles have risen on the fields.

"This is something they can call their own and it's like Christmas for the kids for the new field.

In fact, it could be just about Christmas when they actually step on their new field.

Health officials condemn death threats

L.A. County Health Director Dr. Barbara Ferrer released the following statement Monday in response to threats received during the COVID-19 emergency:

"COVID-19 has upended thousands and thousands of lives all across the nation. The virus has changed our world as we know it, and people are angry. As of today, 83,397 cases have been reported in Los Angeles County and 3,120 people have died from this virus. We mourn every single one of those deaths, and we are working tirelessly to slow the spread of COVID-19 and find good solutions for the future of our communities.

"And while the devastation experienced by so many is heartbreaking, it is also disheartening that an increasing number of public health officials, across the country—myself included—are threatened with violence on a regular basis. In my case, the death threats started last month, during a COVID-19 Facebook Live public briefing when someone very casually suggested that I should be shot. I didn't immediately see the message, but my husband did, my children did, and so did my colleagues.

"One reason I handle these briefings myself is to shield the extraordinary team at L.A. County Public Health from these attacks which have been going on, via emails, public postings, and letters—since March. It is deeply worrisome to imagine that our hardworking infectious disease physicians, nurses, epidemiologists and environmental health specialists or any of our other team members would have to face this level of hatred.

"Our job and our calling is to keep as many people as safe as possible during this pandemic. We did not create this virus. We come into work every single day prepared to do our very best, prepared to work with everyone, with all of our partners, to try to continue to contain this pandemic and to try to continue to minimize the loss of life. And while frustration boils over in our communities as people are done with this virus, this virus is not done with us.

"As public health officials, we try hard not to be influenced by partisan politics or public sentiment – we must follow the science in order to save lives. And the science says if we don't change the way we go about our daily routines, we could pay for it with our lives or the lives of others around us. Change is hard, but we must change if we want to contain this virus. Face coverings must be worn because they help to stop the spread of the virus.

"I recognize there is a lot of pushback from people not wanting to wear face coverings—when wearing a seatbelt was made mandatory in California there was a lot of pushback, too. But the data proves that seatbelts save lives, and the data also proves that wearing a face covering will help stop transmission of COVID-19, which will save lives. And that's what drives public health officials and is our passion: saving lives."
