Norwalk lays out $1 million CARES spending plan

Norwalk will spend $1.3 million in CARES funds, over an estimated $580,000 of which on public health expenses.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

NORWALK - Norwalk will spend $1.3 million in CARES funds to offset some of the costs of the Coronavirus, staff told council at their meeting Tuesday.

Of the sum, public health expenses will receive an estimated $581,504, which communication/ includes enforcement of public health orders, acquisition of medical, protective, and cleaning supplies for public health and safety staff, disinfection of public technical assistance areas, on mitigation, public safety measures in response to COID-19, and quarantining individuals.

Compliance and mitigation will receive $407,523, which includes telework capabilities for staff, paid sick, family and medical leave, and care for the homeless and other vulnerable population.

Economic support will receive $150,532, followed by substantially dedicated payroll expenses ($139,893) and medical expenses ($25,850).

Staff also requested $94,787 from the Department of Justice grant awarded to the city for partial reimbursement of COVID-19 related expenses incurred in the previous fiscal year, which has already been approved. They will also seek refresh," Dr. Bethany Miller, baseball field. senior director of athletics said. This expanded, branded space will provide a spacious and comfortable facility for our over 330 student-athletes to work towards accomplishing their athletic goals now and into the future.

The center is not open yet, but everyone, including Frank Ramirez is a buzz on the potential the center has for those athletes.

Ramirez, who has been at the university since 2016 as the first full-time Director of Sports/ strength and conditioning, is preparing for the alternative.

The alternative for the athletes is a temporary weight

The training sessions will be outside. "It's actually not a bad situation," Ramirez said.

"The weight room looks good," Ramirez said. "I'm happy and it looks like a college weight room should. We want to compete in our conference. We're (NCAA) Division II now.

"All of the kids are coming back and the athletes are champing at the bit."

However, in the meantime Ramirez has been making alternative plans as athletes are returning to campus and Ramirez is preparing to lead weight-training workouts. These

"My role with athletics is to train athletes in the weight room," he said. (They will) do some conditioning outside. Basically this prepares athletes to compete at the highest level.

"I'm happy to see the athletic department grow," said Ramirez, who will be getting an assistant in the Fall.

Renovations to the new Sports Performance Center were completed over the summer and gave Ramirez more space along with new equipment.

"The special part is, it creates a recruiting tool and creates a space for athletes that is their own," added Ramirez.

The arrests were made pursuant to a criminal complaint filed in United States District Court in Los Angeles that charges all four defendants with theft of government property. The affidavit in support of the complaint alleges that the thefts have been occurring since at least 2012, and possibly since 2008

The four defendants arrested this morning are:

·Mark Fitting, 53, of Berlin, New Jersey, an engineer employed by the Navy at a facility in Philadelphia;

formerly cohabitated with Fitting in New Jersey;

·George Posey IV, 36, of Costa Mesa, an employee of Newport Aeronautical Sales Corporation (NASC), a Newport Beach company that sells technical aircraft data; and

> "[S]ome of those drawings and manuals were specifically labeled with International Traffic in Arms Regulations (ITAR) distribution warnings related to export control and destruction, as well as DOD contractor proprietary markings," the affidavit alleges.

Investigators have concluded that Fitting also had access to Erice's Gmail account, Melony Erice, 54, of which allowed both of them Lighthouse Point, Florida, who to sell the documents and drawings to NASC. "Between September 21, 2012, and June 20, 2019, Fitting and Erice together unlawfully sold NASC at least 5,000 governmentcontrolled technical manuals and drawings," according to the affidavit.

Over the same nearly sevenyear period, NASC issued Erice 150 checks totaling $509,845, but the two shared the proceeds of the sales, as evidenced by Fitting having access to one of Erice's bank accounts and Erice being an authorized user on one of Fitting's credit cards, according The investigation started to the affidavit. "In one such instance, on December 8, 2018, at the request of Mirabal, Fitting accessed and downloaded a government-controlled technical drawing for a military landing craft air cushion that he and ERICE sold to NASC, along with at least 16 other governmentcontrolled technical drawings and/or manuals, for $5,025," the affidavit states. "Knowing the drawing was unlawfully procured outside of official government channels, Posey paid Erice for the drawing," which NASC sold to a customer.

The lockdown has gone from a mistake to a crime

By Dennis Prager

Four months ago, I wrote a column titled "The Worldwide Lockdown May Be the Greatest Mistake in History." I explained that "'mistake' and 'evil' are not synonyms. The lockdown is a mistake; the Holocaust, slavery, communism, fascism, etc., were evils. Massive mistakes are made by arrogant fools; massive evils are committed by evil people."

Regarding the economic catastrophe in America and around the world — especially among the world's poor who are dependent upon America and other first-world countries for their income through exports and tourism - I wrote, "It is panic and hysteria, not the coronavirus, that created this catastrophe.'

Unfortunately, I was right.

The world should have followed Sweden's example. That country never locked down and has even kept children under 16 in school the entire time. As Reuters reported on July 15, the number of Swedish children between 1 and 19 years of age who have died of COVID-19 is zero. And the percentage of children who contracted the illness was the exact same in Sweden as it was in Finland, which locked down its schools

As regards teachers, Sweden's Public Health Agency reported that "a comparison of the incidence of COVID-19 in different professions suggested no increased risk for teachers." Nevertheless, with few exceptions, teachers in Los Angeles and elsewhere refuse to enter a classroom that has students in it. Their disdain for their profession has been superseded only by that of the Los Angeles teachers union, which announced that teachers will not resume teaching until the police are defunded.

People who defend lockdowns and closing schools point out that Sweden has the eighth-highest death rate per million in the Western world. But, needless to say, this has no bearing at all on the issue of whether Sweden was right to keep schools open or whether our country was wrong to close them, let alone keep them closed now. The overwhelming majority of deaths from COVID-19 in Sweden were among people over 70 years of age, and most of those were people over 80 and with compromised immune systems.

Reuters reported that three separate studies, including one by UNICEF, "showed that Swedish children fared better than children in other countries during the pandemic, both in terms of education and mental health.<sup>3</sup>

For more than a month, Sweden has had almost no deaths from COVID-19 while the entire society remains open and almost no one wears masks. (In Holland, too, almost no one wears masks.) For all intents and purposes, the virus is over in Sweden.

I live in California, a state governed by that most dangerous of leaders: a fool with unlimited power. Despite the fact that California ranks 28th among the 50 states in deaths per million, Gov. Gavin Newsom has destroyed and continues to destroy tens of thousands of small businesses and untold numbers of livelihoods. His continuing to forbid — a half-year after the onset of the pandemic — indoor dining in restaurants is leading to a projected permanent closure of approximately 1 in every 3 restaurants in the state. The same catastrophic destruction will likely affect retail businesses and services such as hair and nail salons. But all this human tragedy — not to mention increased depression and suicides among the young and increased abuse of children and partners — means nothing to Newsom, to Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti or to the Los Angeles Times, whose editors and columnists continue to advocate for the lockdown while they receive their salaries.

Why can people eat with no mask in an airplane - inches, not six feet, from strangers — but cannot eat in a California restaurant, which is so much bigger than the inside of an airplane, while sitting six feet from others? Because Newsom ordered it, the Los Angeles Times supports it and, like sheep, Californians have accepted it.

According to the California Association of Museums, "Museums are losing over $22 million a day due to the statewide quarantine. As of August 1, 2020, California museums have lost more than $2.9

billion in revenue. Museums have a $6.55 billion financial impact on California's economy, support 80,722 jobs, and generated $492 million in tax revenues for the State of California in 2017 and over $1 billion in federal taxes.'

And the American Alliance of Museums issued results from a survey on July 22, 2020, that warned 1 out of every 3 museums may shutter forever as funding sources and financial reserves run dry.

On Aug. 3, The Wall Street Journal wrote, "In March ... There was broad public support for the prudent goals of preventing hospitals from being overwhelmed and buying scientists time to develop therapies." But the left — the media and Democratic governors and mayors — immediately moved the goal posts to "bending the curve" and "saving one life," enabling them to get away with destroying lives and livelihoods.

I conclude with the words of a Swedish medical doctor, Sebastian Rushworth:

"Covid is over in Sweden. People have gone back to their normal lives and barely anyone is getting infected any more. I am willing to bet that the countries that have shut down completely will see rates spike when they open up. If that is the case, then there won't have been any point in shutting down in the first place ... Shutting down completely in order to decrease the total number of deaths only makes sense if you are willing to stay shut down until a vaccine is available. That could take years. No country is willing to wait that long.

The lockdown is a crime. But even more upsetting is that it is supported by so many Americans. This country is unrecognizable to those of us who lived through the 1968-1970 pandemic, which killed, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, approximately 100,000 Americans — the 2020 equivalent of 170,000 Americans. Nothing shut down. Not one mask was worn.

Trump, Biden on criminal justice reform

By Jacob Sullum

Alice Johnson's appearance at the Republican National Convention last week was a rebuke to Democratic presidential nominee Joe Biden, who for decades promoted the draconian policies that sent her to prison for life as a first-time, nonviolent drug offender. Johnson's case was also meant to show that President Donald Trump, who commuted her sentence in 2018 and pardoned her the day after her speech, offers a more enlightened alternative.

The truth is a little more complicated. While Biden's record on criminal justice issues is long and awful, Trump's is short and pretty good. But when it comes to promises for the future, a repentant Biden supports several ambitious reforms, while Trump sounds like the Biden of the 1980s and '90s.

Johnson, who received a life sentence in 1997 for participating in a Memphis-based cocaine trafficking operation, was introduced during the president's State of the Union address last year, and she was featured in a Trump campaign Super Bowl ad last February. Her case exemplifies the unjust penalties that Biden — whom the Trump campaign describes, with only a little hyperbole, as "the chief architect of mass incarceration and the War on Drugs" — supported as a senator.

Trump seems to have been genuinely moved by Johnson's story, and so far he has commuted 10 sentences in addition to hers. By comparison, Barack Obama, who eventually commuted a record 1,715 sentences, approved just one petition during his first term.

The convention also highlighted Trump's support for the FIRST STEP Act, a 2018 law that included some modest but significant sentencing reforms. One of those provisions dealt with the irrational disparity between the smoked and snorted forms of cocaine, which was created by a 1986 law that Biden wrote.

More than two decades later, in the midst of his unsuccessful bid for the 2008 Democratic presidential nomination, Biden introduced a bill aimed at eliminating that distinction, which had led to strikingly unequal treatment of Black defendants. While the bill went nowhere, Biden as vice president continued to advocate correction of what he last year described as "a big mistake" that had "trapped an entire generation."

The Fair Sentencing Act, which Obama signed in 2010, shrank but did not eliminate the gap between crack and cocaine powder, and it did not apply retroactively, meaning that thousands of prisoners continued to serve sentences that nearly everyone agreed were excessive. The FIRST STEP Act, which passed the House and the Senate with overwhelming support, addressed the latter problem; it also reduced sentences for repeat drug offenders, expanded "good time" credits, prevented the stacking of multiple firearm charges in a single drug case and widened the "safety valve" that allows low-level, nonviolent offenders to avoid mandatory minimums.

Trump deserves credit for supporting that law, which has freed thousands of federal prisoners, and for using his clemency powers not only to help his cronies but also to ameliorate some genuine injustices. Yet his campaign has nothing to say about further reforms, and his second-term agenda echoes the "tough on crime" Biden, calling for more police on the streets, opposing bail reform, and advocating harsher punishment without explaining why current penalties are inadequate.

Biden, meanwhile, claims to have seen the error of his ways. In addition to equalizing the sentences for crack and cocaine powder, he supports abolishing the myriad mandatory minimums and death penalties he once championed and decriminalizing pot possession, although he still resists repealing the federal ban on marijuana.

'Against all odds," the president's daughter said at the convention, Trump "brought together Republicans and Democrats, and passed the most significant criminal justice reform of our generation. And we're just getting started." That last part requires some explanation.

"My father did not campaign on this issue," Ivanka Trump added. 'He tackled this injustice because he has a deep compassion for those who have been treated unfairly." While I am inclined to believe her, Trump needs to clarify the future implications of that impulse.

Don't let politics impede a vaccine

By Betsy McCaughey

Trump-haters are so determined to defeat the president that of the Obama-Biden administration when the H1N1 virus, also called chances. These are the same voices that bash hydroxychloroquine, future ones. He learned what not to do from the pathetic performance anti-Trumpers accuse him of trying to boost Trump's reelection they're opposing emergency authorization of a COVID-19 vaccine. What a callous disregard for human life. Without a vaccine, another 100,000 fatalities are expected by year's end, according to Washington 2009. The Obama administration promised to develop and manufacture University epidemiologists. On Friday, Food and Drug Commissioner Stephen Hahn ignited a firestorm when he said the FDA might grant emergency use authorization to one of the COVID-19 vaccines this fall, if clinical trial results indicate it's safe and effective.

Emergency use authorization would allow the vaccine to be rushed to frontline health care workers, cancer patients, first-responders, mass transit workers and the elderly. But only those who want it. It's voluntary, just like "right to try." Full-fledged FDA approval will take months longer, and most Americans won't be able to stop in a drug store to get vaccinated until mid-2021.

Emergency use authorization is customarily granted when early results are so promising that waiting would amount to a cruel disregard Kingdom also have announced they're considering emergency or conditional approval.

Joe Biden accuses Donald Trump of meddling in vaccine development rather than leaving it to the experts. Truth is, Trump is revolutionizing how vaccines are developed for this pandemic and the swine flu, struck in 2009.

The first victim was a 23-month-old Texas baby who died in April 100 million vaccine doses by October, but came up with only 11 million, due to a flawed plan and bungled manufacturing. As the delay dragged on, infections tripled to 60 million.

Trump isn't risking failure. Instead of relying on one vaccine production method, like Obama did, Trump's Operation Warp Speed has eight companies working on vaccines based on four different scientific platforms. Each company recruits 30,000 volunteers, administers the shots and waits to see if these vaccinated volunteers are significantly less likely to contract COVID-19 than unvaccinated people. The first trials, run by Pfizer, Moderna and AstraZeneca, are expected to finish in December.

for the lives that could be saved. The European Union and the United Biological Products Advisory Committee experts drawn from industry and academia. They meet publicly, examine the data, vote and make a recommendation to the FDA. It often takes months.

> But even for emergency use authorization, that committee will be consulted, explains Peter Marks, who runs FDA vaccine approval.

Hahn insists emergency use hinges on data, not politics, but under Gov. George Pataki.

attack emergency use of Remdesivir, and wish failure on whatever breakthrough could stop the COVID-19 carnage.

Highly respected Anthony Fauci is another matter. His caveats are being touted by the anti-Trumpers. But parse his words. Fauci says, "The one thing you would not want to see with a vaccine is getting an EUA before you have a signal of efficacy." Hahn has already confirmed emergency use depends on that signal of efficacy. If it's powerful, then waiting for all 30,000 results would cost too many lives.

Fauci also worries granting emergency use for one vaccine would make it harder to recruit volunteers for other vaccine candidates, because everyone will want the real deal. Sorry, but that's bureaucratic thinking at its worst. Tell that to a nurse treating COVID-19 patients and desperate for protection.

Meanwhile, Biden announced that if the virus continues, then he'll Formal approval will be in the hands of Vaccine and Related consider locking down the country again. Americans have suffered enough from lockdowns.

> Trump's idea is better: "We will achieve a victory over the virus by unleashing American scientific genius." In short, a safe vaccine developed at warp speed. The naysayers need to get out of the way.

and federal officials investigate what happened. They also made a speedy arrest of the 17-year-old who is charged with shooting two demonstrators dead.

Wedged between an incident of possible brutality against a black man and the need to curb right-wing violence, the police did their best. The last thing they needed was President Donald Trump fanning the anger of both unruly protesters and white supremacists clashing with Both the Kenosha mayor and Wisconsin governor asked him to stay away and not make things worse. Of course, he ignored them.

In Portland, mass demonstrations have shrunk into a kind of gang warfare between the worst of the left and the worst of the right. So Trump tries to further inflame the situation by threatening to send the federal forces back into Portland, against the city's wishes.

"Your offer to repeat that disaster," wrote Portland Mayor Ted Wheeler, "is a cynical attempt to stoke fear and distract us from the real work of our city." And it leaves Portland police with the miserable job of managing a bigger mess.

Donald Trump's America centers on daily arousal of public stress and anxiety, trapping our police departments in no-win confrontations. Inciting disorder in the streets is, of course, how he moves attention away from his spectacular failure during the coronavirus crisis.

Who said the following?

"The police are doing an impossible job. They're trying to deal with the protesters. They're trying to stop looting. And they're trying to keep themselves safe."

Answer: New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo.

Regarding the George Floyd video, James Rovella, former Hartford detective and now Connecticut's top cop, said, "If you wear a badge and aren't appalled by that what you saw, please turn it in and find a new profession; we don't need you."

This is the intersection of reality and decency. To repeat, the police have a very hard job, and most do it well. But some people should not be cops. These are not contradictory statements.

There is no justification for rioting or looting. Some of the current protests, however well meaning, do attract a criminal element that takes advantage of the chaos. They're also a magnet for mayhem tourism, whereby outsiders drive in to trash other people's downtowns.

Note that several black council members in New York City are infuriated by fringe-left calls to "defund" the police. Their neighborhoods sorely need good policing. The council's liberal majority leader, Laurie Cumbo of Brooklyn, called these demands "colonization" pushed by white progressives and the movement behind them "political gentrification." She's right.

The long game for those who want Trump gone is to refrain from staging emotionally fraught events that he can turn nasty. Do they really care to play extras in his extravaganzas, all designed to portray some ugly skirmishes as an America in flames?

Good Americans who put Black Lives Matter signs on lawns would do well to add Blue Lives Matter signs — and vice versa. Again, no contradiction here. (And in most urban police forces, many of the blue lives, the police, are African American.)

Joe Biden should continue to forcefully condemn violence whether by the right or the left. Running mate Kamala Harris, formerly California's top law enforcer, might express added support for police doing their impossible job.

Despite some troubling events on which Trump throws gasoline, the real America is not on fire. It is, however, sick — hurtling toward 200,000 dead from a virus that has left the real economy in shambles. This is Donald Trump's America.

Robbery crew ringleader sentenced to nearly 4 years in prison targeted traveling jewelry salespeople, following them for many miles at times and inflicting at least $835,000 in losses, was sentenced last week to 45 months in federal prison.

Federico Santiago Quiroz Lucca, 52, a.k.a. Christian Sergio Alessandro Hernandez Valenzuela, of the Rampart Village neighborhood of Los Angeles, was sentenced via videoconference by United States District Judge James V. Selna, who also ordered him to pay $835,000 in restitution.

Lucca pleaded guilty in December 2019 to one count of conspiracy to interfere with commerce by robbery.

From October 2017 until April 2019, Lucca and his coconspirators surveilled and conspired to rob a series of jewelry salespeople and bank customers in the Los Angeles metropolitan area, the San Francisco Bay Area and Denver.

Lucca led and organized the crew's activities, enlisting help from several Colombian nationals who traveled to Los Angeles to participate in the conspiracy and robberies. He also used his apartment as a base of operations and meeting place vest asked to help them pack where some co-conspirators up their belongings. The man lived, and equipment and stolen in the safety vest ended up goods were stored.

The various heists followed a similar pattern: a member of the crew known as a "scout" identified a victim who was likely to be carrying jewelry or cash. The victims typically were grinding your teeth?

Or perhaps you're suffering from headaches, jaw pain, or severe discomfort in and around your ears, all of which can be brought about by the tension many people are experiencing this year as a pandemic, a recession, social unrest and a divisive presidential election create strain in nearly everyone's life.

"All of these symptoms can be connected to TMJ disorders," says Dr. Cathy Hung (www. drcathyhung.com), an oral surgeon and author of Pulling Wisdom: Filling Gaps of Cross-Cultural Communication for Healthcare Providers.

TMI stands for temporomandibular joint, which is the name for the right and left joints that connect the jaw to the skull. Those joints do yeoman work every day as people talk, eat, yawn or otherwise keep their jaws moving. But the joints wraps around the temples, Hung also can become the source of extraordinarily unpleasant sensations when things go awry.

"There are a number of reasons a person might suffer from TMJ disorders, including a physical injury or disease," Hung says. "But stress is also one of the major causes, and I have seen patients with TMJ due to stress from the pandemic. When people are tense, they often clench or grind their teeth, tightening their jaw muscles and putting stress on the TM joints. Sometimes from TMJ disorder. "For example, severe clenching also can lead to you may have a misaligned bite,

This can happen unconsciously while In many cases, physical therapy people are awake, Hung says, but also takes place while they are asleep. Severe cases can lead to TMJ, headaches, and teeth damage. Treatments can include efforts to reduce stress. A doctor can also prescribe muscle relaxants that can help, or a dentist or oral surgeon might fit the person with a mouth guard to wear while sleeping.

Tension headaches. Many people likely wouldn't associate a tension headache with their oral health, but in some cases, there is a connection. A tension headache is a band-like headache that says. How does that relate to TMJ disorder? Tension headaches can come from clenching. Headaches associated with TMJ often have other symptoms connected to the jaw, such as jaw pain or restricted movement of the jaw. Over-thecounter pain medications can help, but if they don't a visit to a medical professional is in order, Hung says.

GOAT, jabroni among new words added to dictionary.com

Tuesday it has added 650 new words to its database, according to a press release obtained by CBS News. The site also made changes to over 15,000 current entries in a wide range of topics to mark its biggest update ever.

Common phrases, hashtags and slang with roots in the digital sphere and pop culture are now available to those searching the site. The acronym GOAT, which stands for Greatest Of All Time; the slang term amirite, an informal spelling of the phrase "Am I right"; and the term sharent, "a parent who frequently shares [photos and other details about their child] on social media" made the cut.

Another new word is jabroni, defined as a slang term to describe a stupid, foolish or contemptible person.

> is more than just adding new words. It's an ongoing effort to ensure that how we define words reflects changes in language and life," Dictionary.com senior editor John Kelly said of the changes. "Among our many new entries are thousands of deeper, dictionary-wide revisions that touch us on our most personal levels: how we talk about ourselves and our identities, from race to sexual orientation to mental health.'

Some of the terms reflect changes to language used to discuss race and race-related issues. The site capitalized Black in its entries, "as a mark of respect and recognition that's in line with capitalizing other cultures and ethnicities," the release said. The site also created a separate entry for Black, as it

> Other added terms include language concerning gender identity, expression and sexual orientation. Gender-inclusive, meaning "relating to or intended for any gender" and trans+, defined as "of or relating to people with gender expressions outside traditional norms, as transgender, genderqueer, agender, or nonbinary," both made the list.

Tuesday's update also reflect changes in how addiction and mental health are discussed. The release said the site revised all entries to change language used to discuss both suicide and addiction, "to eliminate language that implies moral judgement incorporates historical prejudice." For example, uses of the word "addict" as a noun is replaced with "person addicted to or habitual user of," according to the release.

The phrase MeToo was also added to the site, defined both as a hashtag used in solidarity by survivors of sexual harassment or assault "to demonstrate the prevalence of abuse" and "a social movement drawing attention to sexual harassment, sexual assault, and other abuses of authority, especially those resulting from gendered power imbalances in social institutions.'
