"State unfairly targeting Norwalk," city says

Contributed by The City of Norwalk

NORWALK - For the third time in six months the State of California and Los Angeles County have targeted the City of Norwalk with its "emergency powers" in an attempt to respond to the challenges created by the COVID-19 virus.

In April, Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge Samantha Jessner issued a temporary restraining order against the City of Norwalk ruling that "the interests of the county in implementing a state order under Project Roomkey to safely house the homeless during the pandemic outweighed any harm the city could suffer."

intent to purchase the local Motel 6 as part of Project Homekey, a and permanent housing and support services to persons experiencing homelessness who are impacted by COVID-19.

"Unfortunately, the City of Norwalk has no legal recourse indicated that the city of Norwalk in this matter," stated Mayor Jennifer Perez. "During these unprecedented times, the state has exercised its 'emergency powers' and has essentially disenfranchised a community that wants input on important decisions affecting the city."

In a letter from Los Angeles County Chief Executive Office dated September 1, 2020, the Recently, the Department county outlined that "Project of State Hospitals informed Homekey sites receiving funds Norwalk residents of its intent from the Coronavirus Relief Fund to renovate and possibly house are exempt from local permitting COVID-19 negative patients at requirements." Plans by the

Now the county has informed city officials of its within 90-days of purchase, for use as interim and permanent its fight against homelessness. and then convert to permanent housing by FY2022-2023. They state program providing interim have indicated that "per the state's grant requirements, the property will have a covenant restricting the use and Target Population for 55 years."

> City officials have clearly is a willing participant in doing its fair share in its fight against homelessness. However, the added strain on city services placed on the city by the state and county, along with failure to allow input by the city and residents cannot continue to go unaddressed.

Efforts to bring this matter to the attention of the county were made in a letter to the County of Los Angeles, dated September 23, 2020. Therein, Mayor Perez outlined the "significant negative general the California Youth Authority county are to use the facility and fund impacts that the acquisition supportive housing would cause to the city of Norwalk." Estimates provided by the city show a loss of "$140,000 in transient occupancy tax and $15,500 in property tax annually." City officials would like the county to reconsider the purchase given the added financial strain on city revenue and the violation of the city's adopted General Plan Use designation and zoning ordinance.

Although expressing frustration due to lack of input on these matters, city officials have indicated they embrace Governor Newsom's desire to collaborate with local governments during this pandemic when he stated, "localism is determinative." The city is seeking results and hopes the state will work directly with the city as Newsom himself recently said, the "State of California has a responsibility to

The city has invested into a half-million-dollar program that has been credited with the sudden decrease of homeless residents in the city. In 2017, the city counted 317 homeless individuals on the streets of Norwalk as part of the Los Angeles County Homeless Service Authority official count. Since then, that number has decreased reaching a low of 168 at the beginning of this year.

"The city has proven it 1869: knows how to deal with its homelessness problem. We just want the state and county to provide us directly with the tools 1919: necessary to continue the fight,"

The city of Norwalk expects further dialogue with county officials in hopes of working together to ensure that the state and county address their

Orr Brothers rewind: Talented athletic brother trio from La Mirada High

Sam, Joe and Ben were all multiple-sport athletes

By John Sherrard Contributor

LA MIRADA - When you think of the three Orr brothers Ben ('96), Joe ('99) and Sam ('01) - who all graduated from La Mirada High School and were standout athletes in that era, you not only think of their athletic ability, but who they are.

Perhaps, current La Mirada High baseball coach Jimmy Zurn said it best of the Orr brothers: "As incredible as they were, their legacy is even greater in society now," said Zurn, who played baseball and soccer with Ben Orr.

That about sums up the brother trio, who all left a mark on the La Mirada campus, from 1992 through 2001.

They all played multiple sports all four years in high

All three brothers gave credit to their dad, Matt, and of course mom, Pat.

Matt Orr, who came from a sports family himself, made his mark as the wrestling coach at Biola and later as the soccer coach for 14 years.

Both Joe and Ben played soccer for their father Matt at Biola.

All five Orr siblings, that included sisters Elizabeth and Kathryn, went on to Biola.

"Being a sports family was great," said Ben Orr, who won a CIF baseball title, pitching a complete game in 1996. "Our dad taught us how to work hard with passion.

"Ultimately, our father was at the center of our games in high school and the coaches that invested time in us also, of

All three got together recently and talked about their years at La Mirada and after high school.

My brothers were studs," said Joe Orr, who is the middle

He was referring to both Ben and Sam, who went on to professional baseball careers in the minor leagues, playing in the Phillies and Cubs organizations.

"I remember when Ben was playing football in his senior year and he was the kicker and a wide receiver," said Joe, who eventually followed Ben as the kicker. "I was in the stands in the band playing the baritone sax and my sister, Kathryn, was playing the French horn when just before the half, Ben kicked a 53-yard field goal.

In addition to band, Joe also had a successful high school career playing soccer, football, cross country and even volleyball during the track and field season in his senior year.

"My coaches were probably ticked off," Joe said.

The three brothers are more than just athletes, attested by their career paths after successful college careers at Biola.

For example, Joe Orr, an outstanding track and field runner immediately became a teacher at La Serna and he has been there

"The cross (country) position came about right away," Joe Orr said. "From way back when I just said to the runners, 'Let's have fun' to now running a championship program, I'm just committed to the sport"

Sam Orr said: "Coming from the bottom end (youngest), my siblings kind of left a mark. There was a lot of integrity in the way we did things. We were all very different and left a mark in different ways.'

After Sam finished his playing days in pro ball, he eventually has found his niche back in baseball after working at Trinity Bats and then a managerial position for Trader Joes.

He currently is starting his own company called Baseball Workshop.

Can the U.S. survive the 2020 election?

By Steve Chapman

At the 2004 Democratic National Convention, a little-known state senator from Illinois electrified the crowd with a speech proclaiming our fundamental unity. "There's not a liberal America and a conservative America; there's the United States of America," Barack Obama declared.

Four years later, he campaigned for president promising that we could overcome our differences. His election offered evidence that he was right. His presidency, however, proved that he was Obama was a cautious centrist, but conservatives vilified him as a foreign-born socialist who hated white people. When Obama finished his second term, his approval rating among Republicans was just 14% — compared with 39% for Bill Clinton when he left. Obama gave way to Donald Trump, the Niagara Falls of divisiveness.

Under him, our ideological, cultural and racial cleavages have gotten deeper and more unbridgeable. The overlooked question is: Can the United States survive this election?

In his new book, "Break It Up: Secession, Division, and the Secret History of America's Imperfect Union," leftist journalist Richard Kreitner expresses doubt that the country can hold together, or should. As he notes, English colonists came here to separate themselves from their rulers. Our revolution amounted to the colonies' secession from the British Empire.

The concept of splitting off is as American as the Fourth of July. The high point of separation sentiment came after Abraham Lincoln's election in 1860, resulting in the Civil War. But New England states contemplated leaving over the War of 1812. And though the South was forced to stay, it fiercely resisted federal interference in race relations for a century — achieving an autonomy just short of independence.

In 1970, the Russian dissident Andrei Amalrik wrote a book titled, "Will the Soviet Union Survive Until 1984?" At the time, the idea of a giant superpower disintegrating sounded like a fantasy. But it eventually came true.

Countries like Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia have also broken apart. Britain is leaving the European Union, and Scotland could push to leave Britain. It would be folly to think the United States is immune to these forces. In fact, Kreitner writes, "disunion has been one of our only truly national ideas."

For decades, the threat posed by the Soviets served to unify us. The 9/11 attacks did the same. But today, the need to stand together for self-defense is less compelling.

Some of Obama's foes talked about seeking a political divorce. In 2009, Texas Gov. Rick Perry said: "We've got a great union. There is absolutely no reason to dissolve it. But if Washington continues to thumb their nose at the American people, you know, who knows what may come out of that?" After Obama was reelected, a Huffington Post poll found that 22% of Americans and 43% of Republicans — would be inclined to support their own state's secession.

That sort of talk is still around, but it's moved leftward and westward. After Trump's 2016 victory, a poll found that 1 in 3 Californians supported what is known as "Calexit." As if to encourage the idea the Golden State is alien territory, Trump has attacked it at every opportunity. He conducts himself as though he were the president only of the red states.

If Joe Biden wins, the urge to flee will subside in California. But what about GOP states? The Texas secessionist movement would get a big boost, which would stimulate similar efforts in other Southern states. If Trump voters saw the election as fraudulent, some of his supporters would see extreme measures as obligatory.

Who can forget the sight of armed protesters entering the Michigan capitol to protest the Democratic governor's stay-athome order? Trump stoked the flames last year, tweeting that if he were impeached and removed, "it will cause a Civil War like fracture in this Nation from which our Country will never heal."

But there is also the possibility that Biden will lose — to the despair of Californians and inhabitants of other deep blue states. The protests and violence that have occurred in recent months would undoubtedly expand. Trump's reelection would be taken as the final proof that those who reject him have nothing in common with much of America.

The bonds that hold Americans together have frayed, and what happens on Nov. 3 may do additional damage. No nation lasts forever, and ours won't be the first. This election won't be the end of the United States. But it could be the beginning of the end.

Steve Chapman blogs for the Chicago Tribune.

The picture of a broken tax system

By the New York Times editorial board

In the years before he became president, Donald Trump lived lavishly while paying little in federal income taxes. The Times reported on Sunday that Mr. Trump paid no taxes in 10 of the 15 years immediately preceding his run for the White House. In each of the following two years, 2016 and 2017, he paid the token sum of Remove Mr. Trump's current job from the picture, and what remains is a story that still demands attention. The portrait of a man who earned hundreds of millions of dollars, lived a life of comic excess and yet, in many years, paid nothing in federal income taxes is an indictment of the federal income tax system. It illustrates the profound inequities of the tax code and the shambolic state of enforcement.

The government has sharply reduced the share of income that it collects in taxes from the wealthiest Americans. One recent study found that the 400 wealthiest households paid 70 percent of their total income in federal, state and local taxes in 1950, 47 percent in 1980 and 23 percent in 2018. The cuts in tax rates have come mostly at the federal level.

The government allows income to be sheltered from taxation for hundreds of different reasons, but real estate investors have long enjoyed a particularly sweet set of loopholes. A homeowner can write off the interest payments on a mortgage loan, but the owners of commercial buildings get a host of other benefits, too. It's relatively easy for real estate investors to use past losses to offset income, to defer income and to avoid reporting some kinds of income. Best of all, the law lets investors claim a building is depreciating in value — a theoretical loss of money — even as the actual value increases.

"I love depreciation," Mr. Trump said during the 2016

Moreover, the formidable complexity of the tax code makes it difficult to tell when wealthy taxpayers have crossed legal lines. For yield $103 billion in otherwise uncollected federal income taxes. the rich, taxation often becomes a kind of structured negotiation between the taxpayer's experts and the government's experts.

It's not a fair fight: The rich keep getting richer, while the Internal Revenue Service keeps getting smaller. Republicans in Congress have slashed funding for the I.R.S., stripping the agency of expertise, resources and authority. The number of I.R.S. auditors has fallen by one-third since 2010. The government employs fewer people to chase deadbeats than at any time since the 1950s.

The share of all tax returns subject to an audit declined by 46 percent from 2010 to 2018, according to the Congressional Budget Office. Astonishingly, the decline was even steeper for millionaires the audit rate fell 61 percent over the same period.

Legend has it that the bank robber Willie Sutton said that he robbed banks because that's where the money is. The I.R.S. has been reduced to going where the money isn't. As ProPublica has reported, the government now audits lower-income households that claim the earned-income tax credit at roughly the same frequency as high-income households. It's easier for the depleted agency to pick on people who can't afford to hire expensive tax

The result? On current trends, the federal government will fail to collect $7.5 trillion in taxes over the next decade — about 15 percent of the total amount owed.

Cracking down on rich tax cheats is law enforcement. It is a basic function of government to ensure that people are playing by the rules. Tax cheating is not a victimless crime. Every dollar hidden from the government is that much less money to spend on education, roads and research. The rich are benefiting at the expense of everyone else.

It would be relatively easy to start collecting some of that money. The Congressional Budget Office estimated in July that adding $40 billion to the I.R.S. budget over the next decade would

The methodology of that estimate is extremely conservative, as Natasha Sarin, an assistant law professor at the University of Pennsylvania, and Lawrence Summers, an economics professor at Harvard, noted in a July paper. Dr. Sarin and Dr. Summers estimated that fully restoring I.R.S. funding, and modernizing collection techniques, would allow the government to collect $1 trillion of the unpaid taxes.

Strict enforcement should start with the president, to show that no American is above the law.

Mr. Trump claimed a tax refund of $72.9 million in 2010, according to the Times report; the government paid the claim, and then opened an investigation. If Mr. Trump loses, he could owe the government more than $100 million in repayment, interest and penalties. It should not take federal authorities more than a decade to determine whether Mr. Trump has paid the full amount he owes. The government must move urgently to resolve this question.

When Mr. Trump and his Democratic opponent, Joe Biden, took the stage for their first presidential debate Tuesday night, both men should have been asked what steps they will take to ensure that all Americans pay the full amount they owe.

And Congress should restore every penny of funding stripped from the I.R.S. since 2010 — plus whatever is necessary for the agency to perform its critical work.

Paying taxes is a civic duty, and the government needs the money. Most Americans try to pay what they owe, even if they wish they owed less, and they take comfort in the assumption that most of their neighbors are conducting themselves in the same way.

Americans deserve to know that the president has paid his

A new U.S.-UK trade agreement must prioritize American intellectual property and innovation

By Erik Paulsen

It looks increasingly unlikely that American and British negotiators will finalize a U.S.-UK trade agreement this year. When asked whether a deal could be struck by the end of 2020, one UK official recently responded, "Basically, no."

No one likes to wait. But if holding out for another year leads to a better deal, then that's certainly the right approach. Our two countries have the potential to strike a top-notch agreement that sets the standard for future international trade pacts and puts the rest of the world on notice. Negotiators would be wise to use this extra time to secure state-of-the-art intellectual property and market access protections for American innovators.

The United States and the United Kingdom are two of the largest economies in the world and the lifeblood of the international trade ecosystem. In 2019, the United States traded nearly $6 trillion USD worth of goods and services with foreign nations, while the UK exchanged more than $1.8 trillion USD worth of the same wares. Given their dominance on the global economic stage, they can deliver the most ambitious bilateral trade deal in modern history.

The robust trade relationship between the United States and the United Kingdom certainly reinforces the prospect of that. In 2018, U.S. goods and services trade with the UK eclipsed $261 billion. America is the single largest investor in the UK. And fittingly, our British allies are also the largest investor in the United States.

Still, this relationship has room to grow -- especially when it comes to intellectual property protections.

Take the U.S. biopharmaceutical sector, which employs over four million Americans. Our innovation ecosystem produces more than half of the entire world's new medicines, helping people across the globe live longer and healthier lives.

But it's no simple feat. Bringing just one new drug through the development pipeline to patients typically costs billions of dollars and takes more than a decade. Even when biopharmaceutical companies commit to this investment, less than 12 percent of the medicines that enter clinical trials secure FDA approval.

The United Kingdom unfairly punishes U.S. drug companies with price controls on these expensive, cutting-edge medicines. This makes it even harder for American innovators to recoup R&D costs, which discourages them from future drug investments.

Especially now, in the new reality ushered in by the coronavirus, we cannot afford any disincentives against biomedical innovation. That's why U.S. trade negotiators must do all they can to ensure that the U.S.-UK trade deal prioritizes American scientists and medicine manufacturers.

The new U.S.-UK deal must also include 21st century protections for America's creative industries. Rampant online piracy in the United Kingdom robs American recording artists, producers, and film and television creators of hard-earned

In 2018 alone, the United Kingdom saw nearly six billion visits to pirated websites. And just this spring -- during the coronavirusinduced quarantine -- traffic to pirated film sites increased by nearly 60 percent compared to visits earlier in the winter. A robust U.S.-UK trade deal must include provisions that address this blatant disregard for American innovation.

It's disappointing that the U.S. and UK officials have yet to reach a comprehensive trade agreement. But if we have to wait, let's use that time to hammer out the best deal possible -- one that serves as a gold standard for all future trade agreements.

Newsom signs law allowing school districts to build housing for teachers

Gavin Newsom on Monday signed into law legislation that empowers school districts to utilize lowincome housing tax credits to construct affordable housing for teachers and school employees on

The legislation also clarifies that local governments can work collaboratively with school districts to build affordable housing for their employees as

SACRAMENTO - Governor well as members of the general rental unit. As a result, many California's affordable housing crisis is particularly acute for teachers and school employees, many of whom cannot afford to live in the communities where they work, officials said.

In Los Angeles, an entry-level teacher would have to spend more than 85 percent of their income to afford an average median-level teachers in Los Angeles are forced to work second or third jobs, crowd together in small apartments, or endure lengthy commutes from communities as far away as Riverside, San Bernardino, or Ventura, officials said.

"It's shameful that so many teachers have to work second jobs or spend four hours a day commuting just to afford rent," Assemblymember Jesse Gabriel, who sponsored the legislation. "We must do more to address California's affordable housing crisis, particularly for those who have committed themselves to educating our kids and protecting our communities. This legislation will empower school districts and local and will ensure that all tools affordable housing.'

AB 3308 clarifies California's substantially lower cost. Teacher Housing Act to ensure that school districts retain important incentives and tools for building desperately needed affordable housing. Moreover, by empowering school districts to build on land they already own (rather than acquiring expensive governments to work together new property), this legislation will enable school districts and are on the table to create more local governments to deliver new affordable housing at a

AB 3308 received bipartisan support in the Legislature and was supported by a statewide coalition which included the California Federation of Teachers, the California School Employees Association, and the Los Angeles, San Francisco, and San Diego Unified School Districts.

State increases funding to house homeless

Newsom on Monday announced the third round of awards for Homekey, California's $600 million program to purchase and for people experiencing or at risk of experiencing homelessness.

The latest round of funding includes $7.4 million for Los Angeles County to purchase a Motel 6 in Norwalk that will be used to house up to 56 homeless

The governor also announced he has asked the state's budget committee to approve his request for an additional $200 million in coronavirus relief funding Homekey. If approved, Department of Housing and Community Development (HCD) will provide funding for approximately 20 more Homekey projects now on a waitlist pending additional funds.

If approved, the Newsom administration will have provided local governments with a total of $800 million for acquisition, rehabilitation and operating support under Homekey.

HCD, which administers Homekey, on Monday awarded more than $137 million for 19 projects in 15 California communities, totaling 938 units. These awards bring the total awarded under Homekey to $449.9 million for 33 successful applicants and 49 awards totaling 3,351 units. The statewide average cost to Homekey thus far is approximately $134,000 per unit.

"Not only is Homekey unprecedented in providing capital to house experiencing homeless, but we are moving with unprecedented speed," said Newsom. "Most of these projects will be ready to house people very soon after the acquisitions are complete, providing immediate help to our most vulnerable residents."

"Local communities continue demonstrate imagination and innovation for using Homekey dollars," said Business,

> · The Scotts Valley Band of Pomo Indians (SVBPI) has been awarded $1.24 million to rehabilitate a 10-unit multifamily residential property just north of Lakeport, in Lake County, to convert into permanent housing. The property includes one-, two-, and three-bedroom units. SVBPI is a landless tribe - one of only three of California's 109 recognized tribes - which has further exacerbated the community's housing challenges.

• Nearly $4.3 million has been awarded to the City of Stockton which, in partnership with the Central Valley Low Income Housing Corporation and Stocktonians Taking Action to Neutralize Drugs (STAND), will acquire and renovate an existing 39-unit motel into permanent · Alameda County has been awarded nearly $14.5 million to purchase an existing hotel and operate it as permanent supportive housing for extremely low-income individuals who have been homeless and who need support. Once purchased, repairs to common areas and vacant rooms will be completed before the end of the year.

• Nearly $6.8 million has been awarded to Sutter County, which is partnering with Habitat for Humanity Yuba/Sutter to acquire a hotel to provide 62 one-bedroom units for permanent housing with on- and off-site supportive services, serving up to 124 people. No rehabilitation is required.

• Humboldt County has been

awarded $4.3 million to convert a motel into 48 permanent supportive housing units. Six of the units will provide recuperative still needing medical care.

"The City of Los Angeles has housed thousands of our homeless neighbors at an unprecedented rate since the COVID-19 crisis began, and this moment demands that we all step up together to create even more housing in the coming months," said Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti. "I am Project Roomkey, Governor grateful to Governor Newsom for his work to deliver this additional funding, which will help us expand our shelter capacity, and bring housing and services to the people in our communities who need it the most."

"Through our partnership with Homekey, we will be able to provide 40 individuals in the City of Stockton with the dignity that comes with shelter, with the dignity of permanent supportive housing – with the dignity that all human beings deserve, by virtue of being human," said Stockton Mayor Michael Tubbs. "Thank you to the Governor, thank you to the State of California. We're looking forward to making Stockton an example of how to use data and how to use resources in a way that doesn't just hide the issues surrounding doesn't just talk about the issues 22, 2020. Additional awards are surrounding homelessness, but expected weekly until all $600 actually addresses them with million has been awarded. what is needed – housing."

"Our Homekey award will provide the funding necessary to increase the supply of affordable housing for people experiencing care services to homeless homelessness in Santa Barbara individuals exiting hospitalization County. Homekey will be a big help in our efforts to move people experiencing homelessness into permanent supportive housing and begin changing their lives for the better," said Executive Director of the Santa Barbara County Housing Authority Bob Havlicek.

> Building on the success of Newsom in July announced the availability of $600 million in funding for Homekey, the next phase in the state's response protecting Californians experiencing or at risk of experiencing homelessness, following approval by the Legislature as part of the 2020-21 state budget. Of that, $550 million will be provided to cities and counties by California's direct allocation of the federal Coronavirus Relief Fund, with an additional $50 million provided by the state to supplement acquisition and provide initial operating funds. The Homekey funds are being expended in compliance with federal regulations in response to COVID-19.
