Metro begins patient transfers

• The state mental hospital transferred 43 patients to the former CYA facility in Norwalk.

NORWALK – Representatives of the Metropolitan State Hospital in Norwalk have informed city officials that due to a recent need for "surge space" in some of their other facilities, 43 female inmates who have recently tested COVID-negative will be transferred to the annex, formerly known as the California Youth Authority facility in Norwalk.

September, Back in administration city met with representatives of the Metropolitan State Hospital and the Department of State Hospitals to discuss the state's plan to re-open the facility to house COVID-negative patients. This action was authorized by Governor Newsom's declaration of emergency powers due to the national pandemic and initiated by the Department of State Hospitals.

On September 10, the Department of State Hospital representatives along with Mayor Jennifer Perez presided over a teleconference "town hall" meeting to inform residents of the state's intent.

On September 16th, a letter with details of the presentation were sent to residents.

On October 8th, a second "town hall" meeting was conducted. At that time, extensive renovations and safety measures were put in place to house patients should the need arise.

However, on Tuesday afternoon, representatives from the Metropolitan State Hospital informed city administration of

Delay of Game

• CIF gives high school sports another delay of game penalty as practices and games are placed on indefinite hold.

By John A. Sherrard Contributor

SANTA FE SPRINGS – A "delay of game" penalty flag has been thrown again at high school sports for the fall season to start up.

The California Interscholastic Association (CIF) announced last week that as of Dec. 1, "...all practices and competition start dates are on hold until updated guidance is issued."

The guidance is from the California Department of Public Health regarding the latest spikes in the pandemic.

building steam if high school sports are cancelled after the first of the year.

"A concern I have is club teams being allowed to work out and compete, even out of state," Anderson added. "It can be hard on school athletic teams bound by state, county, CIF, and archdiocesan guidelines, but these other groups seem to be bound by different rules.

"I am especially concerned with groups who offer online education, which is so different from the current distance learning. Traditional high schools offer strong college prep and AP classes, interaction with an engaged teacher, activities, academic & college advising, and clearinghouse assistance to just name a few. I am skeptical about what the academies offer."

Her final concern is the safety of the student athletes at these academies.

"I wonder if they require athletic physicals, have first aid/CPR certified coaches or athletic trainers, and, almost most importantly, comprehensive insurance in place." she said.

the need to transfer the patients into the facility.

Due to the pandemic, these actions by the state have had far reaching effects on residents. Norwalk city officials have made several attempts to ensure that residents were not adversely affected by these unprecedented decisions initiated by the state and county.

In April, the City Council voted unanimously to impose a temporary ban to prevent motel conversions for temporarily housing homeless residents as part of Project Roomkey without prior city approval.

In July, the City Council unanimously passed an emergency ordinance that required any public agency to consult with the City prior to placing a homeless or COVID-19 facility in Norwalk.

In October, in response to the County's efforts to purchase Motel 6 on Rosecrans Avenue, the City informed County officials regarding the negative impact on Norwalk resources and recommended the County cease their efforts in purchasing the motel for that purpose.

City officials were informed that inmates being transferred into the facility have recently tested negative for COVID and have passed a background check. Both the local sheriff's department and metro police will be responsible for monitoring the facility.

Residents interested in obtaining more information regarding the use of the former "California Youth Authority" facility may contact Dr. Michael W. Barsom, Executive Director at the Metropolitan State Hospital, at (562) 863-7011.

Most of the fall sports have been conditioning on and off, depending on their specific school district guidelines.

The first official day of football practice would have been this coming Monday, Dec. 14, and the first games would have been Jan. 8-9, 2021. Boys volleyball would have held the first official high school contest Saturday, Dec. 12.

But all is on hold until further notice.

On Monday, the second largest school district in the country, Los Angeles Unified School District, announced it would "indefinitely suspended all on-campus athletic conditioning."

The Whittier Union High School District, which Santa Fe and El Rancho are part of, had halted all conditioning a few weeks ago.

Meanwhile, St. Paul High School in Santa Fe Springs has been holding "optional (conditioning) for any of the athletes," Athletic Director Mary Anderson said.

However, that was before the alert on Tuesday.

Conditioning has been cancelled until further notice because of the continuing spikes in L.A. County covid cases.

"I am very sad for our kids, but as the athletic director, I am responsible for the safety and health of our students and coaches and cooperate with all guidelines, but understand how hard this is on the well-being of everyone," Anderson said.

"Some students are struggling with the lack of social interaction and we are offering the opportunity for some teams to work out. Coaches are volunteering their time to be with their athletes. The school has COVID-19 protocol in place by which all coaches and athletes must abide."

A subject that is getting attention lately is the forming of club football teams.

Anderson has some thoughts about that very subject that is

"There have been more very serious injuries suffered by athletes throughout the years and I am concerned that parents may be required to sign a waiver and then pray that all works out. The cost of medical attention in the case of serious injuries can be overwhelming.

"If CIF cancels athletics and competition is open elsewhere, we are open to exploring opening the campus up to our athletic facilities to clubs/teams to rent and hopefully keep our kids involved, engaged and still Swordsmen.

"In the meantime, we cooperate as required, do what we can, and pray that we can survive this historic time in our lives."

Another concern is the seniors that will be playing a varsity sports for the first time.

In the case for football, the athlete won't get that Friday night feeling. One such case is senior outside linebacker Christian Rocha.

"He's a senior who didn't get to play varsity football last year," Santa Fe coach Dave Pierson said. "He was looking forward to this year of being able to suit up under the lights, only to have the season in question. The kid will never get that back and was looking forward to earning his varsity letter."

High school sports on indefinite hold

"If regular seasons are shortened, it would be at the front end of the season, keeping the back end of the season unchanged. It is our intention for post-season play to be a destination for schools (that) are able to play this fall.

"On Tuesday, January 19, 2021, when we have a better sense of the overall situation at that time, I will update you on the status of Southern Section Championships for fall sports.

"Where we are today is not as important as where we are on December 15, 2020, January 4 or January 19, 2021.'

A conversation with 8th-year St. Paul football coach, Rick Zepeda and 9th-year Santa Fe football coach, Dave Pierson.

How do you feel about the recent CIF decision?

Rick Zepeda: "I think the recent decision by the CIF is smart. I think that we have to keep in mind that the safety of everybody is still the most important decision to make and they've done a good job. If we can all be patient and follow what we're supposed to do, I'm hoping that we will be able to play in February sometime."

How do you think this will affect your seniors?

Zepeda: "It's affected (the seniors) already. You anticipate your senior year of fulfilling a lot of goals that you have personally. If you're not able to show the work that you've put in to yourself, it gets frustrating. I want them to keep the faith and to make sure that everyone still believes that we can get some games in January or early February, so, not to give up and keep working towards your goals?'

For the seniors, what do you think they should do to step up to the next level?

Zepeda: "If it (football) does not happen, there's a lot of options for them that will be out there as far as camps and combines. We're trying to establish ourselves to make sure that they make the best decision and we have opportunities for them to play sometime this vear.'

Do you think there will be something like baseball and softball, where there are travel teams and go to other states that are more open?

Zepeda: "I think clubs will start. I just don't know when. If we don't get anything going here, then I'm sure that most of them will want to participate in an off-campus club."

Personally, as a coach, how has these decisions affected you?

Zepeda: "It's been pretty exhausting; mentally, to see your boys lose time in something you love and even being at school with the camaraderie of being a

St. Paul student. It's frustrating for the teachers, the admin and the coaches not seeing them create those last year relationships. It's been peaks and valleys and as of right now it's been more valleys. It kind of feels like having a terrible season and the season never stops. It just keeps going on and on and on. I know this team is talented and I want to put them on the field. I'm hoping that that still happens, but ya, it's stats been exhausting. You have to make decisions for a large group, knowing that the group has at times.' What have you been doing, practice-wise, conditioning wise and what does this latest stay-athome order do against that?

different opinions, it's difficult

Zepeda: "We were planning on continuing to get them out of the house and doing some conditioning, just two days a week. Our practices are optional, still adhering to all of the COVID restrictions that are in the guide. That was our plan still. As of yesterday (Tuesday), when the alert came out, I think it really kind of reaffirmed to everybody that we still need to be extra safe. We cancelled for now, but I'm hoping to re-establish them as soon as we can. The hard part is I do not know. It's a day-today, hour-to-hour, minute-tominute situation. At any time things can open up, so I have to be able to just stay patient and wait for the indication that we can get back out here safely."

How does this affect California players with their scholarships and their options to go elsewhere?

Zepeda: "If a player had a great junior year, you're in a good position right now, the California player, because you have film and they've seen what you can do and those players are getting scholarship offers. If you are that player that is planning on having a great senior year, you had a great off-season and you did all of the things that you wanted to do and you're finally going to start and get some playing time, that's where the tragedy part comes in. So, how do they get recognized? How do they get themselves out there? It's mostly practice film and anything else you can grab to share with them and you have to be ultra aggressive, marketing-wise for yourself, so that you create opportunities for yourself. A lot of the kids, the seniors that have great GPA's, it's highly effective that if your GPA is good and you started last year and have some

"For the kids that are in between, it's frustrating for them.'

Dave Pierson What did CIF put down December 1?

Pierson: "Basically, they are just prolonging the decision on whether or not to green light a football season. Obviously, fall football is kind of in a holding pattern. I care about football, obviously my kids care about football, our parents care. But it looks like they've extended it into the middle of January before a decision will be made as to whether or not there will be a football season.'

Has the district suspended practice?

Pierson: "We actually stopped any type of exercise prior to Thanksgiving and we were going to be on a twoweek hiatus, and then that got extended until after the New Year, based on just the spike in COVID infections that are occurring here in Southern California. They just felt like it was the best thing to do at the time. Just shut it all down and to hold fast and wait until after the new year. Obviously, we're somewhat anxious to get a football season in, but realize the complex situation that we're in as a country.'

What is it like for the seniors that are going to college and how they get film to go if they don't have film, then they don't get recruited. If they can't get recruited against other states where they are playing, how is that going to affect them?

Pierson: "That's a tough one to answer. I know that there's a lot of different groups now that are starting to emerge because of what's happening here in Southern California, with these, I'd call them "traveling football squads", which they are leaving the state of California to play actual full 11-on-11 tackle football. I'm hearing rumors of kids of wanting to do that just as an opportunity to get some type of film, playing four or five games. That logistically, I don't know the ins and outs of that. But, I could anticipate our kids kind of working towards that, any of our seniors trying to participate in some of that, but that's going to be up to those kids individually in what they choose to do in their senior year if it unfolds that way.

Would your seniors be X'd out of recruiting from other schools outside of the state because you have other states that are playing full-on football and they're not?

Pierson: "From a recruiting standpoint, it really sets back our kids here at Santa Fe. Any kid that had an opportunity to maybe get some kind of exposure to Division II, Division III or whatnot or whatever's out there for our kids, there's a huge hindrance of not having film. We'd have to refer back to last year in the film that we have on them to forward on to those coaches and then they could make the best assumption as to what they want to do with it.'

What they said:

Rich Avina, St. Paul Boys

Volleyball coach: "As much as I would love to believe that we could practice and play and there is no risk. That is just not reality. These young athletes can overcome the virus, but it's who they take it home to - parents, grandparents and people who may have difficulty overcoming what COVID brings. CIF is in an impossible position. I believe they are doing their best to give hope of a season by pushing dates back.

"Ultimately, the big picture is we need to get a handle on COVID spreading and get back into the classroom, then back on the court or field of play. If we come back too early, it just prolongs the issues at hand.

"I would rather CIF push dates back in hope of playing then just ending all hope by shutting us down indefinitely."

Daniel Pallan, senior, St. Paul football (cornerback, linebacker, safety): "For being a senior, it's kind of heartbreaking. (On the push back of the schedule) it's sad, but it's life. You can't look down. You have to be positive about everything.

"I know I haven't played my last game of football. [Daniel has offers from the University of San Diego, Valparaiso University in Indiana and Upper Iowa University.]

"If we have a season, we have a season. Do not take life for granted."

Christian Rocha, senior, Santa Fe football (outside linebacker): "I've played since I was in third grade. It

The value of student voice during the pandemic

By Cesar Armendariz

In the middle of the pain, grief, and nonsense of 2020, we have made learning possible. In what seems like the blink of an eye, the ecosystem that makes up the world of education came together to build and sustain virtual classrooms. Parents, guardians, teachers, counselors, administrators, and classified personnel have made countless sacrifices to give children a chance to learn during this pandemic.

Teachers in particular have sacrificed sleep and quality time with family to modify virtual lesson plans to meet the unique needs of each student. Even though children have risen to the occasion and overcome many challenges, this pandemic has taken a toll on them. many tools to cope with these negative effects, but most children Many students have experienced overwhelming circumstances that have inhibited the learning process.

The easiest way to bring respite to students is to return to the classroom as soon as possible. However, the current spike of COVID cases makes a safe January return improbable. If virtual learning continues to be the only safe option for students to attend school, we owe it to them to work as a community to improve their learning experience by increasing our efforts to honor their struggles.

One of the biggest struggles students faced this semester was finding the motivation to learn. When a student consistently misses Zoom meetings or routinely turns in late assignments, it is easy to assume that the student is being lazy or that the student is not taking learning seriously.

However, it would be wrong to assume that students have an inherent character flaw, such as laziness, that prevents them from completing schoolwork. What we consider laziness is likely a behavior that represents a symptom of a problem, rather than the problem itself. To understand why students are struggling to find motivation, we must consider their physical environment and emotional state.

Even if we were to disregard the social, racial, and economic barriers and trauma that students face on a "normal" year, we cannot disregard that students are experiencing the full effects of a worldwide pandemic. Nothing about this experience feels normal to children. The simple act of showing up to school through a computer screen is a daily reminder to students that their world is not safe.

If the world was as safe as they have known it to be, they would on schoolwork. be learning inside the classroom walls with their peers. Millions of students in the US are living in fear because they have seen their relatives and friends get sick. Hundreds of thousands of students are grieving the death of family members whose lives were taken by the virus.

This environment has created a general fear and anxiety that is overburdening the brain's cognitive processing power. This is diminishing our brain's ability to retain, recall, and prioritize tasks and information.

Adults who have dealt with anxiety over the years might have do not have that luxury. It is no wonder that children are feeling drained and exhausted - in addition to staring at a computer screen throughout the day, their brains are incessantly struggling to make sense of their environment day and night.

Traditionally, most children rely on the web of healthy relationships at schools to sort through complex thoughts and emotions. However, social distancing and quarantine have disrupted these relationships.

During a typical year, students eat meals together, play games together, laugh together, cry together, and grow together. This semester, students have had fewer opportunities to interact meaningfully and authentically with each other. Since the pandemic began, students have felt increasing loneliness and isolation. It has been hard for children to feel like they belong to a community of loving and caring people. This is especially difficult for many students with disabilities who are generally excluded from the school community during the typical year.

Unfortunately for students, social isolation has adverse health consequences such as anxiety, depression, and sleep impediments. On a cellular level, loneliness affects the brain's prefrontal cortex, hippocampus, and amygdala. These areas of the brain are responsible for many of the tasks that are essential for learning including, decision making, goal setting, long and short-term memory, and emotional regulation. Children who are feeling lonely and isolated might be unaware that they are fighting an invisible battle to focus

Students everywhere are fighting all sorts of invisible battles during this pandemic. It is important that we, as adults, remind them they are not fighting alone. This is a good opportunity for the adults in school and at home to be vulnerable with children. It is okay to admit that we too are struggling with anxiety, depression, and stress; that we too are exhausted and overworked; that even the adults cannot get through this alone. When adults demonstrate vulnerability, it invites children to speak up about their own struggles. And in the world of education, student voice is everything. Only by sharing their challenges and struggles can students help us identify the systemic issues and barriers that are affecting their learning experience.

We must encourage every child to share their stories, and in return, we must listen with compassion, empathy, and a commitment to act. Our task as adults is to treat students as partners in our journey to improve and transform the learning environment. The most effective solutions to educational issues always emanate from the collaboration between adults and children. As children share their stories, adults can play an important role by helping children navigate the bureaucratic process so their voices can be amplified and reach the ears of the decision-makers in our community

Throughout this pandemic, children have showcased their brilliance, creativity, compassion, and resilience. They have shown us that they are able and willing to be agents of change for themselves and for others. By listening to children and partnering with them as co-advocates for change, we help transform the institutions and the children themselves. When children believe that their voices matter, they become motivated to take charge of all aspects of their life, including schoolwork. Listening to children is not the only way we are going to help improve their lives and learning experience, but it is a good start.

Can the president pardon himself?

By Judge Andrew Napolitano

Most presidential pardons — indeed all pardons that President Donald Trump has issued — have been for specific crimes of which the subject of the pardon has already been charged and convicted. Yet, Trump, never one to be restrained by precedent, has let it be hinted that he might issue prophylactic pardons to relatives and colleagues who have neither been convicted nor charged with any crimes. And he might pardon himself. Can he do that?

The short answer is yes. Here is the backstory.

The pardoning power is expressly and exclusively granted to the president in the Constitution. Article Two, Section 2, Clause 1, states that the president "shall have Power to grant Reprieves and Pardons for Offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment." When unpacked, that broad language reveals that the president can only pardon for federal crimes, not for anyone's impeachment, and he does not need the approval of anyone else in the government.

The language in the Garland case should put an end to speculation about the legal validity of prophylactic pardons, as should our collective memories. President Gerald R. Ford famously pardoned former President Richard M. Nixon in 1974, a pardon Nixon accepted even though he had not been charged with committing any federal crime

And in 1977, on his first day in office, President Jimmy Carter pardoned hundreds of thousands of young men who declined to be drafted into the military during the Vietnam War era, many of whom had fled to Canada, and nearly all of whom had not been charged with draft evasion.

President George H.W. Bush pardoned six Reagan-era officials in the Iran-Contra affair in 1992, including former Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger — whose trial was about to commence at the time of the pardon and at which the pre-presidential behavior of Bush was to have been laid before the jury.

In 2001, President Bill Clinton pardoned his half-brother, Roger, Trump is the subject of a criminal investigation in New York City for alleged or potential violations of state laws. But the existence of a state criminal probe of the president does not impair his ability to insulate himself from the legal consequences of a federal criminal probe, since it is clear that the president cannot pardon anyone including himself — for state offenses.

As there has been little modern litigation over the validity and scope of individual pardons for federal offenses, there is little case law. What case law does exist broadly favors an expansive view of presidential pardon power. The leading case is Ex parte Garland from 1866. There, the Supreme Court upheld a pardon issued to Augustus Hill Garland, a former Arkansas senator in the Confederate States of America.

Garland, who supported his native Arkansas during the Civil War, was pardoned after the war of all offenses against the United States by President Andrew Johnson, even though the former senator had not been charged with any crimes. When federal officials, pursuant to a statute, refused to allow him to practice law in federal courts due to his support of the Confederacy and failure to renounce that support, he sued them.

The Supreme Court ruled in Garland's favor and held that the presidential pardon power "extends to every (federal) offense known to the law, and may be exercised at any time after its commission, either before legal proceedings are taken, or during their pendency, or after conviction and judgment."

over an old cocaine possession conviction and his former business partner Susan McDougal over a land deal in which President Clinton and his wife, Hillary, had arguably been involved.

Clinton also infamously pardoned Marc Rich for a conviction of income tax evasion, and then accepted a substantial donation to the Clinton Foundation from Mrs. Rich.

All of these pardons were and remain legally valid.

It was well-known to the framers that British monarchs only pardoned for specific, already-charged offenses. Professor Aaron Rappaport of Hastings College of the Law at the University of California, Berkeley, has argued that the original understanding of the pardon power was that it would be used only for crimes that had already been charged. And others have argued that the concept of bilateral fairness — which certainly animated James Madison when he drafted the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment mandates that no person shall be a judge in his own case.

Both of these points are well-taken and historically correct. If the president pardons for crimes not yet charged, is he exercising powers that the framers never understood that they were giving him? If the president pardons himself, is he acting as a judge in his own case? The answer to both of these questions is ves. Yet, the Supreme Court and history teach that while such pardons may be eviscerated politically, they will be upheld legally.

Before the president pardons his children, his colleagues and himself, he should pardon all those convicted under federal drug laws for use and possession. They harmed no one. He should also pardon Julian Assange, who revealed the slaughter of innocent civilians and the cover-up by the U.S. military in Afghanistan, and Edward Snowden, who revealed that the feds have engaged in secret, unlawful and warrantless spying on hundreds of millions of innocent Americans.

Assange and Snowden have been bitterly targeted and verbally savaged by the Deep State, but these heroes risked their lives and liberties so we might know the truth about government law breaking.

Should pardons produce justice? Sometimes they do — as would be the case for Assange and Snowden. But the essence of a pardon is mercy, not justice — and they are often opposites.

Voter suppression

Dear Editor:

I read the article on how to fix elections that was printed December 4. Here's my reaction. I guess the writer wants to go back to extreme voter suppression and disenfranchisement of voters.

Voter ID required in all states. This discriminates against minorities, college students, low-income, and the elderly. Additionally, in 2014, a Loyola Law School analysis looking at voter impersonations, found that there were only 31 cases since 2000, out of more than one billion votes cast in the entire country.

The writer's suggestion that mail-in ballots can only be utilized by the elderly, disabled, and out-of-towners disenfranchises all voters from Washington, Oregon, and Colorado who have been voting by mail for some time. Hawaii approved voting by mail in 2019 for the 2020 elections. And in California as you know, all voters received a ballot because of the coronavirus. I know my husband and I appreciated being able to vote this way without having to go into the polls. Frankly, I think all states should allow mail-in ballots without an excuse. Period.

Since we have no control over the Post Office as to when a ballot is received, as long as it is postmarked by election day, it should be accepted within the state's time limits. And, when you have a current federal administration messing with the postal service prior to the election to slow down the entire process, then there needs to be some leeway. And what about overseas military ballots, ballots from civilians who work overseas, and provisional ballots?

With over 161 million ballots cast in this last election it would be absolutely IMPOSSIBLE to count all ballots on election day! In California alone, there were approximately 17,330,000 votes cast. Do you really think that all of those votes could be counted in one day only? And with the suggestion of not using machines to count the ballots, again there is NO way that all of those votes could be counted in one day without using the machines. Get real!

Parties, candidates, citizen groups, or independent organizations can deploy observers to witness the electoral process. State policies do vary, but I am not aware of anywhere there was an issue. There were some restrictions this year because of COVID-19.

According to former U.S. Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency Director Christopher Krebs, "This was the most secure election in American history. There is no evidence that any voting system deleted or lost votes or changed votes or was in any way compromised." Krebs, a lifelong Republican was put in charge of this agency two years ago. He also worked on cybersecurity in the Bush Administration. I would like to know what failures the writer is referring to as I can't find any major issues.

And, just to let you know, in the past 40 years, seven presidential elections have gone beyond election day. What you see on election day is the media using projections that are strong enough to announce one candidate over the other. But these calls are not the official results.

We did have a fair election without suspicion of fraud. "Voting is the expression of our commitment to ourselves, one another, our country, and this world." - Sharon Salzberg

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

We are in the midst of a global race to identify and distribute a safe and effective vaccine for the COVID-19 virus. Every day we see new information. It appears that there are three vaccines that may receive emergency FDA approval very soon, with others not far behind. What does this mean for you and me?

Please recognize that this pandemic is far from over. The numbers of ill and dying have never been more terrible. This is an extremely easy disease to spread, and estimates are that only about 10% of us have contracted it so far. That could mean that almost all of us are still vulnerable. We've also seen that this disease can recur, and if immunity does not last long, then herd immunity may be a very difficult thing to reach. This makes it even more critical that a safe and effective vaccine is distributed and administered.

Vaccine research has never before been conducted in such a fast and focused manner. Just what are the phases that every new drug must pass through?

Phase I: The drug is given to a small number of healthy people as well as to those who have the disease, in order to identify side effects and to figure out the optimal dose. Phase II: The drug is given to a larger number of those who have the disease, looking to see whether it works and whether there are side effects that weren't identified during Phase I.

Phase III: The drug is administered to several hundred or up to 3,000 subjects in a large-scale trial. A similar group of people takes a placebo. This phase normally takes between one and four years.

Phase IV: After the drug is approved for use, it continues to undergo monitoring to confirm that there are no serious or long-term side effects.

Keep in mind that until now, vaccines have taken years, and sometimes decades, to develop. Scientists have telescoped that time frame into mere months, and the current estimate is that we will start distributing the vaccine to frontline personnel in the immediate future, and may have a vaccine available to most of us by the middle of next year; only 12-18 months after this new virus became a clear global threat. That will be a huge scientific accomplishment, and if it happens it will be due to having an international open-ended supply of brilliant minds...and of money.

In addition to skilled scientists and funding, every vaccine must present answers to these critical questions:

• Does it actually protect us from the disease, and if so, for how long do we maintain immunity? Does it actually prevent the disease entirely or just make it a milder case? The Pfizer vaccine requires two doses, and it does make recipients unlikely to get a serious case of the disease. (A mild case is still possible.)

• Can a vaccinated person still spread the disease if they get infected and have minimal or no symptoms? It appears that at least with the Pfizer vaccine, one can still get infected and possibly spread the disease. If that is the case, we may all be wearing masks and physically distancing until COVID-19 is either gone entirely, or diminished to a minimal level.

·Is it safe? I recently got my Shingrex vaccine, which is a wonderful and fairly new vaccine to protect against shingles. Most people experience a mild fever and body aches for some 24 hours. I found those side effects to be a more than acceptable tradeoff when compared to the risk of contracting shingles. It appears that the Pfizer vaccine does cause similar uncomfortable symptoms in about half of the recipients. Uncovering a vaccine's side effects is one of the key reasons it takes so long to study.

The next hurdle for a new vaccine is mass production and distribution. Are healthcare workers and those at high risk first in line? What impact does wealth make on who gets vaccinated first? How confident will the public be that it is indeed effective and safe? What will the distribution process look like? We don't yet have clear answers to these questions. Clearly, not everyone will receive the vaccination. How many will need to be vaccinated in order to achieve herd immunity? Current estimates are 65% to 70%. This would still amount to vaccinating billions of people worldwide!

It is indeed looking like we will have a safe and effective vaccine, starting distribution almost immediately. However, the process of getting most of us vaccinated will take a long time. In the meantime, I urge you to wear your mask, maintain physical distancing, wash your hands frequently, and when you are near anyone outside of your pod, bundle up and stay outdoors.

Dementia related psychosis: four caregiver facts you need to know

Approximately 2.4 million people or 30 percent of people living with dementia in the U.S. may experience hallucinations and delusions associated with dementia-related psychosis. These symptoms might include seeing something that isn't there or believing something that isn't true and can be frequent, persistent and recur over time.

According to advocates, improving management of these troubling symptoms starts with recognizing and understanding what patients are experiencing. To learn more, UsAgainstAlzheimer's, the Lewy Body Dementia Association (LBDA) and Acadia Pharmaceuticals, surveyed patients and their caregivers. Findings highlighted important, infrequently discussed, considerations for caregivers:

1. Symptoms can happen frequently: The most common symptoms of dementia-related psychosis reported by surveyed patients were visual hallucinations (89 percent), auditory hallucinations (54 percent) and distortion of senses (54 percent) and such symptoms can happen frequently. Of patients who reported recent visual hallucinations, 61 percent indicated they occurred at least weekly. In addition, the majority of care partners (77 percent) reported paranoid delusions as occurring at least weekly.

"Given their potential frequency, being prepared to recognize, report, and manage these symptoms is critical," says Theresa Frangiosa of UsAgainstAlzheimer's, one of the survey authors. "My mom experienced these kinds of symptoms associated with her Alzheimer's disease and in talking with other caregivers, many people think this could never happen to their family until it does."

2. Dementia-related hallucinations and delusions greatly impact a patient's overall health and quality of life: Most surveyed patients said their activities of daily living (75 percent), sleep (63 percent), family life (56 percent), and safety (about 56 percent) were affected by dementia-related hallucinations and delusions. Care partners reported that symptoms make it difficult for their loved ones to know what is real and what is not real, contributing to their anxiety, and impacting their personal relationships.

Jo Anne, 70, from Maryland, was surprised by her husband's hallucinations. "Before Ed was diagnosed with Lewy body dementia, he would tell me that he saw mice or insects in the house so, of course, I'd go check! When these experiences increased in frequency, I knew that we needed to talk to his doctor about why he was having persistent hallucinations."

Research shows that these kind of neuropsychiatric symptoms may pose challenges. For example, studies show that presence of psychosis in Alzheimer's patients was also associated with 1.5 times increased likelihood of death.

3. Care partners are affected too: Dementia-related hallucinations and delusions are symptoms that can be associated with all forms of dementia such as Lewy body dementia, Alzheimer's disease, Parkinson's disease dementia, vascular dementia, and frontotemporal dementia. Unfortunately, caregivers of people with dementia compared to non-caregivers can experience high rates of emotional and physical stress as well as depression, an increased likelihood of comorbid conditions, hospitalizations, and doctor visits. In fact, caregiver burden is associated with increased desire to place people with dementia in long-term care.

4. Getting help as early as possible is key: Living with dementia-related hallucinations dementia-related hallucinations and delusions takes a toll on both patients and caregivers. That's why advocates urge caregivers to get educated about what to expect from dementia-related psychosis and find support.

"If you see your loved one exhibiting new symptoms, then take the initiative to tell their health care provider, who can offer advice on how to cope," urges Frangiosa.

Covid-19 vaccine no 'walk in the park,' CDC committee told

The vaccine could make people feel sick initially, federal health officials warned.

WASHINGTON – Americans need to be prepared for the possibility that they may feel a little unwell after they get a coronavirus vaccine, if one is authorized, members of a US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention advisory committee said Monday.

The CDC's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices met to discuss whether to recommend use of any Covid-19 vaccine that the US Food and Drug Administration might authorize.

Volunteers in vaccine trials have reported they frequently feel flu-like effects after getting vaccinated, and members of the ACIP -- as well as liaison representatives who take part in the discussion -- said that could affect people's willingness to get vaccinated in the first place, or to get the second dose of the twovaccine regimen.

"As a practicing physician, I have got to be sure my patients will come back for the second dose. We really have got to make she said. patients aware that this is not going to be a walk in the park,' Dr. Sandra Fryhofer of the Emory University School of Medicine, representing the American Medical Association, told the meeting.

"They are going to know they got a vaccine. They are not going to feel wonderful.'

whole point of The vaccination is to cause an immune response in the body and that can sometimes cause flu-like symptoms such as body aches, or even fever and a headache.

Patricia Stinchfield of Children's Hospitals and Clinics of Minnesota, representing the National Association of Pediatric Nurse Practitioners, said providers must be ready to explain this to people getting any vaccine.

"These immune are responses, so if you feel something after vaccination, you should expect to feel that. And when you do, it's normal that you have some arm soreness or some fatigue or some body aches or even some fever," Stinchfield told the meeting. Some people may feel bad enough to need to stay home from work for a day,

Dr. Paul Hunter of the city of Milwaukee health department and a voting member of the committee, said it will be important for the first people to get vaccinated to describe these experiences to others.

Boosting confidence in a vaccine

"The people who highly value getting the vaccine soon and fast, early, are going to be really helpful to everyone else. And I think we really are going to need to honor them, because they are going to let us know how it feels," he said. "And I think these people are likely to be health care workers who are likely to be up for that kind of task.'

Public willingness to get a coronavirus vaccine has been steadily dropping since the spring, but it might improve when people start to hear more about the safety and efficacy of the various vaccines in the works, the CDC's Dr. Sara Oliver told the committee during the five-hour-long meeting.

Oliver said the CDC has been looking at various surveys on attitudes and noted that anywhere between 40% and 80% of those surveyed said they'd be willing to get vaccinated.

"Many adults reported intentions to receive Covid vaccine. But concerns were raised around side-effects, unknown efficacy and the speed of the (authorization) process," Oliver told the meeting.

Vaccine acceptance was highest among Asian-Americans and lowest among African-Americans, Oliver said. That's of concern because ACIP wants to make sure any vaccine that is approved gets to the groups most affected by the pandemic, and Blacks are among the hardest hit by Covid-19.

Nurses were also a concern. One survey showed that while nurses agreed vaccines were likely to be safe and effective, only 34% would voluntarily get CDC estimates there are 21 vaccinated, Oliver said.

Members of ACIP said they thought these fears could be addressed with education campaigns and as people learned about data showing that, for example, the Pfizer and Moderna vaccines were about 95% effective preventing symptomatic in disease with no significant safety concerns.

Allocating the vaccine

Any plan for distributing coronavirus vaccine should take into account fair and equitable access to everyoneespecially groups that are disproportionately affected by the pandemic.

Fair access is at the top of the list, ACIP committee members said in a document published at the start of the meeting.

"How do characteristics of the vaccine and logistical considerations affect fair access for all persons?" they asked in the document, released in the CDC's MMWR report.

"Does allocation planning include input from groups who are disproportionately affected by Covid-19 or face health inequities resulting from social determinants of health, such as income and health care access?"

The CDC, the National of Academies Science, Engineering and Medicine and other advisers have proposed four groups that should get vaccinated first: health care personnel, other essential workers, adults with high risk medical conditions and other adults 65 and older.

That's a lot of people. The million healthcare personnel, 87 million essential workers, 100 million adults with high risk medical conditions and 53 million others are 65 and older. The federal government has said 40 million coronavirus vaccine doses could be available by the end of December.

There's little disagreement that frontline healthcare workers should be in the first group -- designated as 1a. At issue is whether residents of long term care facilities should be in this group, also.

There's no question it's a highly vulnerable population. "Long term care facility residents and staff accounted for 6% of cases and 39% of deaths in the US, despite the fact that long term care facility residents account for less than 1% of the vaccine because there's not been US population," the CDC's a randomized, controlled trial. Dr. Kathleen Dooling told the And I think we're going to have meeting.

Plus, it's a group that would be easier to reach if the staff caring for them are already being immunized in the first phase of any vaccine that might get emergency authorization from the FDA.

But ACIP member Dr. Helen Keipp Talbot worried that this frail group might do poorly in general and damage faith in the vaccine.

"There is such a high mortality rate in long term care facilities," Talbot told the meeting. "There will be a number of patients who receive immunizations for Covid and will pass away. And it will be regardless of the vaccine and most likely will be regardless of the vaccine," Talbot said.

"But early on as we're building confidence and we will not be able to show any data to say that it was not due to the a very striking backlash of 'my grandmother got the vaccine and she passed away,' and they're not likely to be related, but that will become remembered and break some of the confidence in the vaccine."

But others did not think that putting these residents further back in line would help.

Hunter said it would be inefficient to vaccinate healthcare workers in the facilities but skip residents. "Why not vaccinate people that, you know, you, you've got it all set up and ready to go? he asked. "It's an efficiency to vaccinate a bunch of people who could benefit from it.'

NORWALK - The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously Tuesday to support a motion by Supervisor Janice Hahn calling on Congress to pass the latest COVID-19 federal relief package.

"The CARES Act was critical funding for us at the beginning of this pandemic-but we have been largely abandoned by the federal government since then," said Hahn.

"We need another round of funding so we can pay businesses to stay closed and get help to people who have lost their jobs. This should have happened months ago, but it is not too late. The vaccine is coming but we are still months away from it being widely available."

The motion considered near enough - but it is something and it is a start," said Hahn. "I am hopeful that the incoming Tuesday calls for the Board of Supervisors to send a five-

Leaders in the House and Senate have restarted discussions and say the best chance in passing any relief is by adding it to the annual spending bill. But that would have to happen quickly because the House is scheduled to leave town at the end of the week.

A potential deal is coming down to the wire as 12 million Americans are set to lose their unemployment benefits the day after Christmas.

Eviction moratoriums for renters and protections for student borrowers are also set to expire, as well as a federal program for paid family leave.
