John Glenn standouts earn athletic scholarships

Joe Varoz and Adrian Zamora will continue their athletic careers in college after securing scholarship offers.

By John A. Sherrard Contributor

NORWALK – In a time when playing a sport, any sport, is just not possible for high school students to show their talents to prospective colleges or universities, two local athletes are set for the next level.

Earning a scholarship and verbally committing or signing a letter of intent is hard to do without live action or some video.

Two John Glenn athletes, Joe Varoz and Adrian Zamora, are the exception as they are in position for the next level.

Varoz, a senior offensive lineman that has been in the football program at JG for four years now, has committed to NCAA Division II Minot State University in North Dakota, while Zamora, also a senior, has committed to play baseball at NCAA DIII Finlandia University in Hancock, Michigan.

"Overall, both boys are great student-athletes," John Glenn athletic director Linda Parra said. "We are very proud of them and their athletic achievements. They are a true example that hard work, dedication and perseverance pay off."

The upside to this story is both athletes were able to secure their future at their respective universities prior to each of their respective seasons.

with Covid-19, I have not been able to put in the maximum work I need to be at right now," Varoz said. "It has been a stressful time and I have been trying my best to get drills and lifting done as much as possible. I hope to soon have a senior season because I know it will be a memorable season for a lifetime.'

Varoz, who was chosen the MVP of his freshman team, made the varsity as a sophomore on the offensive line as a right tackle.

"In the beginning of my offseason of my senior year I was able to reach out to the offensive line coach, Nick Nissen, and defensive coordinator, Mike Scheper, from Minot State University via Twitter," Veroz said. "I sent them my film, which they absolutely loved.

"Going on for weeks and months after continuously talking to the coaching staff, they offered me a scholarship to their school."

Varoz is excited for the next stage in life at college.

"I'm from Norwalk and for the next four years I'm hoping to grow as a player and as a young man."

Like most high school athletes in this era of social media, Zamora, a right-handed pitcher, took to Twitter to get the word out on his talents.

"I posted my pitching on Twitter," said Zamora, who will be attending the only private university in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. "I ended up meeting a lot of coaches. When I met (pitching coach) Malcolm Purdy, he continually reached out to me."

Zamora, unlike a lot of potential college athletes, made his official visit to Finlandia, while others didn't get that chance due to the pandemic.

"On my visit, coach Purdy offered me [a scholarship] and I said, 'that's a blessing.' Two weeks ago I accepted."

Here are their stories:

Joe Varoz, Minot State University

For Joe Varoz, there are plenty of memories of his threeyear high school career on the gridiron. Varoz, along with everyone else, is hoping for that fourth year of football.

"With my senior year here and

"Knowing it was going to be a tremendous transition from freshman football to varsity football, I knew I had to put in the time and effort into the weight room," he said.

Varoz credits assistant coach, Donnie Lobendahn, who prepared him for his sophomore year. Lobendahn, who was the strength and conditioning coach, is the son of then, head coach Vince Lobendahn.

In his sophomore year, Varoz received honorable mention in league. His offensive line helped the offense produce 1,964 rushing yards.

That led into his junior year, where he was named offensive line captain. It was the filling of his own, disciplining me when big shoes from recent graduate and league Offensive Lineman of the Year, Edurado Barajas.

Varoz shined in his junior year, as he was named to first team in league.

"My offensive line coach, Donne Lobendahn, was one of the best line coaches I could have asked for," said Varoz, who has five brothers and three sisters. "I wouldn't consider coach Donne as my offensive line coach, but more as an older brother.'

Another brother, Toa, who played at USC, also had a tremendous wealth of knowledge for young Joe.

"Toa and Donne both pushed me beyond my limits and I would not be who I am today without them.

"All in all, the Lobendahn family welcomes me with open arms with anything I can possibly need. They are considered my second family as I am very grateful to be in their lives. Some people even gave me the nickname 'Joe Lobendahn.'"

The same praise also went to his coach Vince Lobendahn.

Much credit by the Varoz family is also given to the Cruz family, Shanon Cruz (JG Assistant Principal) and her husband David Cruz (JG Assistant Athletic Director and current head football coach), who always helped guide Joe academically and encouraged him to utilize his skills on the field.

John Glenn athletes excited for the future

However, first things first. Zamora actually met his varsity baseball coach at JG, (coach Gabriel Guzman) this week for the first time while picking up a cap.

"I first met him (Tuesday) while picking up my hat," he said. "I'm It definitely makes me feel excited to play as well. I really want to play for John Glenn.

"He told me he's excited to get on the field and told me Happy Holidays and said, 'hope to see you on the field.'

Adrian wasn't always a pitcher. That is, not until a dad in the RBA noticed how hard he threw and asked him why he wasn't a pitcher.

After talking to Adrian's coach, he was given an opportunity to pitch.

"Since that day I remember him saying, 'I belong (on) that mound," Madrazo said. "The moment he was given the opportunity to pitch, he fell in love with that position."

With that, Adrian has been working with his pitches and currently he has a favorite.

"During the offseason, I've been working on my changeup," he added. "My favorite pitch is my changeup."

Adrian was always working hard and trying to improve his pitching. He would work with both his dad, Adam Zamora, and step dad, Eduardo Valadez. In addition, he also had some one-on-one instruction along the way.

Still not yet in high school, Adrian got more serious and started playing baseball year 'round.

"In the summers he played for Adventure Park (Whittier) for fun and winter and spring for RBA," Madrazo said. "My husband (Valadez) decided to coach him and they even won a championship."

However, once high school came around the local park leagues were behind him.

He actually formed his own team for the summer and later formed another team in an adult league in the City of Norwalk.

Of course, there aren't any summer leagues now because of Covid, but as most athletes these days, he works out, while playing catch in the park.

Zamora even has started buying and selling trading cards and occasionally conducts pitching lessons.

All the while, he is waiting for any kind of sign of high school activity and eventually college ball next fall.

Teachers deserve vaccine priority, says Hahn

NORWALK - In letters to Governor Newsom, California Department of Public Health, and Center for Disease Control, Supervisor Janice Hahn is calling for teachers and school personnel to be prioritized to receive the COVID-19 vaccine.

"If it was ever up for debate before, this pandemic has made it clear once and for all that our classroom teachers are essential," said Hahn. "We need teachers back in their classrooms. They are essential to our kids, our families, and our economy. Our vaccine distribution plan should reflect that fact."

Zamora is still building up his excitement for college, which is months away.

"It's a great choice for me and I can't wait to get there," said Adrian, who has a step brother, Dezmond, and also two other brothers, Jayden and Edward. "It's a blessing to get to know my coaches.

Zamora, who has been at two other high schools, St. Paul and excited to play for him and hopefully I do get to play for him this year. Pioneer, in his three previous years is glad his mom has been there for him.

> "My mom helped me and it was good being there with me in this process," said Zamora, of the recruiting trail.

When he finally made the decision to go to Finlandia, his mom, Gaby, was already doing her homework on the local services in the area

Needless to say, Zamora has lots of time to think about his future after high school.

"I got to meet the guys (teammates) on my official visit," he said. "I really love this school and can't wait to get out there."

He'll have to wait a few months, however.

"I can say that I'm a baseball fan because of (Adrian)," said Gaby Madrazo. "Since this upcoming season is still unknown due to Covid, he's staying positive and hopeful so that he will have his final season as a senior in high school.

"His passion and love for the game is contagious."

What they said:

Joe Varoz: "I feel like it will be a great transition for me going into a university and being able to finish my academic and athletic career over there and be able to get a degree.

"My years at John Glenn have been great. I've had wonderful coaching staff and wonderful administration and help from the school was much needed during this time. What I would take away from John Glenn to help me in college is learning discipline and holds myself accountable with the things I do and my actions.

"This year it was really difficult to be seen by a college, because usually they come out to practice or camps. California hasn't been able to hold them because of the stay-at-home orders.

'I am extremely excited and nervous to be playing at the next level, but I know I will have my support from family and friends.'

Vince Lobendahn, former John Glenn head coach: "Playing in DI, II or III, there's a lot of stuff that is nice, like the fans, the lights, etc

"It's good that Joe bought in to everything. He got to know his plays and when you're that kid, it showed up in many games.

"He calms things down. We're really proud of him for that."

Donnie Lobendahn, former JG assistant coach: "For one year straight, Joe has trained with Toa (Lobendahn), myself, and countless others close to him daily. It's in his DNA, it's written in his code that he will outwork you, and if you win, he knows he has to work harder. Joe is very humble, smart and shows his heart the most. I'm really excited that Coach Aldrich at Minot State University will see what kind of cloth Joe is cut from. He's really the stitching that helped Glenn secure its first league title in 30 years.

"From the end of his freshman season, to this day, I have coached Joe. He has had many influences around him, one being my brother Toa, and one of Joe's supporters. These supporters all recognize one thing - his determination. He is laser focused on graduating, and playing ball for Minot.'

Nancy Varoz, Joe Varoz' mom: "Of course I'm so proud of Joe, my son, a child from a middle class family. To be offered an athletic scholarship, not only based on his performance on the football field, but also his academic progress along with his characteristics and qualities of a young man striving for a bright future. So yes Joe, you did it! I'll always be your biggest cheerleader.

"It's so unfortunate, due to the pandemic, that he may not be able to step on that field as a senior. And as a parent, I also will possibly not be able to experience that last high school football game.'

Adrian Zamora: "My goal was to make my decision on a college in midseason, but coach Brandt pointed out that I should make the decision if I had an opportunity. He gave me advice and I really appreciated it.

"Another coach said to me, 'You do realize you're moving out of state?' and I said that's something I want to do."

Gaby Madrazo, Adrian Zamora's mom: "As a family, we all enjoy baseball and the Dodgers and even went to Arizona to Spring Training.

"Adrian enjoys playing ball and is excited for this opportunity to continue his education and play baseball.

"Adrian kept sharing with me that college baseball coaches were having zoom meetings and that he would attend the meetings to meet and make connections.

"He connected and maintained contact with one coach in specific. He mentioned he was going to commit and he did."

Whittier College lands $12 million gift

WHITTIER - A $12 million gift from author and philanthropist MacKenzie Scott will go far to support Whittier College's mission of equity and inclusion in support of student success, college officials announced Tuesday.

The unrestricted donation will be apportioned to the areas that will make the greatest impact at Whittier, including providing additional need-based scholarships, creating new innovative programs, and support for the college's Racial Justice and Equity Action Plan, Office of Equity and Inclusion, Gender Equity Center, environmental justice work, and faculty diversity efforts.

"Whittier prides itself on being a national model for providing access to higher education to students from all backgrounds. This transformative gift-the largest from a single donor in the College's history-allows the College to further invest in this mission," said President Linda Oubré. "It is also an affirmation that the innovative work we are doing at Whittier College is having an impact and being recognized beyond our campus."

Phase 1B of the vaccine distribution plan will include essential workers. Supervisor Hahn is asking that teachers and school personnel be considered essential workers in this Phase 1B category and that they are included in the 1st tier of this phase.

"We need to reopen our schools, and that means vaccinating our teachers as soon as possible," continued Supervisor Hahn.

The LA County Department of Public Health distributes vaccines based on the recommendations established by the CDC and State Department of Public Health.

As of Wednesday, the virus has killed 106 people in Norwalk and infected 7,007 residents.

Health officials estimate that 1 in 80 people in L.A. County may be currently infected with the virus and contagious.

"We have decided that this transformative gift will make the greatest impact by helping us invest in what matters most, our people: the staff, faculty, and students of the Poet community," added Oubré.

Scott was married to Amazon founder Jeff Bezos until 2019. Their divorce made her the third-richest woman in the world.

Whittier College is among 384 leading non-profit institutions selected to receive a gift from Scott. She specifically selected organizations and organizational leadership that align with her vision to promote racial, LGBTQ, and gender equity, economic mobility, functional democracy, public health, global development, and climate change.

Moreover, as a response to the current situation, Scott sought to support organizations working with those hardest hit by the pandemic.

Scott's team took a "data-driven approach to identifying organizations with strong leadership teams and results, with special attention to those operating in communities facing high projected food insecurity, high measures of racial inequity, high local poverty rates, and low access to philanthropic capital."

In a public announcement last July, Scott said, "I pledged to give the majority of my wealth back to the society that helped generate it, to do it thoughtfully, to get started soon, and to keep at it until the safe is empty.

How to reduce infections without closing businesses

By Yaryna Serkez

While many restaurants, bars and gyms shut down during the pandemic, others have continued operating with limited capacity. New research shows this sacrifice could be effective at curbing transmissions — and density caps may offer one way to keep the economy humming along during the worst of the winter wave.

Data from early in the pandemic reveals there's a "sweet spot" where infections can be reduced while keeping business steady. That magic number: around 20 percent. If indoor capacity in public spaces like restaurants, gyms, hotels and grocery stores was reduced to just 20 percent, we could prevent 87 percent of new infections. Meanwhile, these businesses would lose just 42 percent of their visits, on average, according to research from scientists at Stanford and Northwestern

The findings bolster capacity limits as an effective coronavirus strategy, keeping businesses alive while limiting infections. Researchers found they are so effective because they reduce the risks during peak hours, encouraging patrons to stay home or visit at less crowded times, according to Serina Chang, a PhD student at Stanford and co-author of the study.

"Capacity caps disproportionately target those risky locations in their busiest hours. This is why we see the promising trade-off curve, where a smaller reduction in visits can result in a large reduction in infections," she said.

The finding should influence how cities respond to the pandemic now. Rather than citywide shutdowns and stay-at-home orders, stricter density caps paired with other measures could curb the coronavirus while allowing the economy to limp along.

These findings are consistent with earlier study by researchers Protecting the most vulnerable at the University of Chicago and Northwestern University, which showed that reducing economic activity in hotspot neighborhoods in New York while keeping businesses open in other parts of the city could prevent the coronavirus from spreading with a "lower economic cost than uniform citywide closure policies.

"There is data that shows that capacity restrictions can be beneficial in decreasing transmission risks at certain places along with other types of measures as well," said Amesh Adalja, senior scholar at the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security. "In general, I'm in favor of capacity restrictions when the alternative is to have just zero capacity and not allowing businesses to operate."

Capacity limits are not a new idea. They were among the first recommendations from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Many cities have versions in place — including New York, which limits places like restaurants and retail stores to 25 and 50 percent capacity respectively. However, their severity matters a lot. tanford's study showed that reducing occupancy by half prevents only 41 percent of new cases, while restricting occupancy to just 20 percent would more than double the number of prevented cases.

No matter how strict, however, occupancy limits won't prevent all transmissions. And they could work for some cities more than others. In places with greater underlying immunity and higher share of people wearing masks and social distancing, density caps are more likely to succeed. But they won't be as effective if the area's infections are rapidly worsening or other mechanisms like private gatherings are driving the spread.

"If your goal is to get to zero cases as fast as possible, or to keep it going down, or you have poor mask compliance and not a lot of underlying immunity," density caps might not be enough, said Justin Lessler, an associate professor of epidemiology at the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health. That could mean Southern states like Georgia, which have flouted mask-wearing laws, might not benefit as much from density caps.

While the strategy could help the economy, the biggest impact could be reducing infections among lower-income Americans — a group disproportionately affected by the pandemic both physically and economically. Stanford's study found that occupancy caps would help mitigate these inequalities.

The virus ravaged disadvantaged communities in cities like New York partly because lower-income people visited more densely packed businesses and stayed there for longer, according to the study. A tiny, crowded bodega is different from a spacious high-end supermarket. People in lower-income neighborhoods also traveled more, commuting to work or leaving home more often for groceries and other essentials, the researchers found.

"The average grocery store visited by lower-income individuals had 59 percent more hourly visitors per square foot, and their visitors stayed 17 percent longer on average," the researchers write.

"The reason why there are disparities is not only pre-existing conditions and unequal access to healthcare, which are important, but also actual mobility patterns," said David Grusky, co-author of the study and director of the Stanford Center on Poverty and Inequality. "Because low-income groups are more likely to be essential workers, they tend to be more exposed to infection and work in places that are denser and have longer dwell times."

Density caps can't eliminate inequality. But they can counteract its effect on the pandemic, preventing dangerous high-density interactions that drive disease spread among lower-income populations.

The study has its limitations — it doesn't include all types of businesses, does not cover all populations, and does not account for all aspects of disease transmission. And density caps are, by no means, a panacea. The economic downturn should be addressed with broader federal stimulus packages and support for small businesses. Inequality should be tackled with improved paid leave policies, free widespread testing and accessible PPE. But given how simple and effective stricter density caps could be, many American cities should consider them this winter.

"We want to choose from among the plans that not only reduce the overall rates but decrease disparities and maintain the economy,' said Mr. Grusky.

Oregon makes the case for decriminalizing hard drugs

By Steve Chapman

In the aftermath of the November election, public attention focused on the sudden termination of Donald Trump's presidency. Largely overlooked was a development that could begin to shut down another destructive phenomenon. The people of Oregon voted to remove criminal penalties for possession of any illicit drugs.

Heroin? Meth? Cocaine? They will remain illegal in the state, but in the same sense that parking by a fire hydrant is illegal. Police may stop violators and issue citations, but no one will be arrested for carrying a small amount of drugs for personal use. (Selling them will remain a criminal offense.)

The change is happening in only one state, and it's an incremental reform from Oregon's past policy, which was to classify all such of legions of addicts shooting up in the gutters. But fear not. It's offenses as misdemeanors. But a crack in a windshield can eventually already been tried in Europe, notably Portugal and Switzerland, with shatter the whole thing, and Measure 110 puts a noticeable fissure in restrictions didn't produce a hapless society of dazed stoners. By decriminalizing hard-drug use, it can do even more to show the wisdom of greater tolerance.

The measure makes another major change: using the savings from not arresting and incarcerating offenders to help those who want help. It directs a share of revenue from taxes on marijuana to this wholesome purpose.

The money would pay for expanded treatment, housing and "harm reduction" efforts such as syringe exchanges. Instead of targeting drug use and addiction as crimes, Oregon will treat them as health and social problems that warrant cures rather than punishment.

By American standards, this is a radical shift. It invites visions reassuring results.

Oregon's new approach may also help break down barriers that make it hard for drug users to get treatment. Methadone and buprenorphine have proven effective in helping heroin users overcome their addiction, but stifling regulations have hindered their availability.

Only one in 10 Oregonians who need treatment for substance abuse are able to get it. Anything that improves access to voluntary treatment programs is bound to eventually affect attitudes and laws besides helping those struggling with addiction.

Scrapping the punitive approach will mean that fewer Oregonians face the trauma of being arrested and locked up. They also won't acquire criminal records that can deprive them of jobs, housing and higher education. Classifying illicit-drug users as criminals pushes them toward other types of crime.

Ask yourself: Would we help alcoholics by putting them behind the edifice of the drug war.

Oregon may have earned its reputation as a coastal outpost of woke eccentricity, but in drug policy, it's often led the way. It was the first state to decriminalize the possession of cannabis and one of the first to authorize medical marijuana. Most states have since done the same

Its voters were early in legalizing recreational pot, in 2014. Fourteen other states and the District of Columbia are now on board. Oregon was one of the first to "de-felonize" possession of all drugs, reducing these offenses to misdemeanors. It's now the law in 20 other states.

In each instance, Oregon helped demonstrate that easing

Joanne Csete, a professor at the Columbia University Mailman School of Public Health, says that Portugal decriminalized all drugs in The result, she told me, was "the near disappearance of HIV linked to drug injection as a public health problem." Not only that, "there was a remarkable decline in problematic drug use."

The overdose death rate plunged. The Czech Republic, Csete notes, also succeeded in curbing HIV this way. In both countries, expanded access to addiction treatment has done much to reduce harmful behavior. The prevailing approach in Europe is formal or informal decriminalization, and its overdose death rate is about 11% of ours.

bars? If not, why do it with people dependent on heroin or cocaine?

The shift will have enormous benefits, particularly for the most 2001 partly to combat the spread of HIV through illicit drug injections. vulnerable. A report by the state's Criminal Justice Commission said that Measure 110 would reduce the number of arrests and convictions for drug possession by some 90% — and virtually eliminate racial disparities in those arrests and convictions.

> Oregon is trying a bold experiment in humane alternatives to prohibition, and it could have far-reaching effects. One thing we've learned is that when it comes to drug policy, what happens in Oregon doesn't stay in Oregon.

American officials said Snowden's leaks put lives at risk. But in the eight years since then, they've never given any clear examples.

"They constantly tell us, 'This is for your safety (and) to investigate terrorists," says Snowden. "Barack Obama's own investigations found that it didn't stop a single terrorist attack."

At the time, the NSA did claim that mass surveillance stopped

Richard Ledgett, former deputy director of the NSA, said NSA programs contributed to stopping 54 terrorist attacks.

"That makes me feel safer when I hear that," I say to Snowden.

"We want to believe it's true," Snowden responds, "but it's not. Fourteen years ago, when Snowden worked for the CIA, and then The government itself no longer makes these claims that it stopped

> In fact, the government no longer claims it stopped any attacks. All of this made me realize — Snowden got screwed.

"Aren't you pissed off?" I ask. "(Former Director of National Intelligence) James Clapper lied to Congress and he wasn't fired! Now he works for CNN. (Former NSA director) Keith Alexander wasn't fired. Now he's on Amazon's board! They made out; you're in exile."

"If you're one of these 'made men,'" answers Snowden, "You face a very different flavor of justice."

Snowden went to Hong Kong to give reporters the data that showed the NSA had lied. He asked 27 countries to grant him asylum, without success. He tried to fly to Ecuador. When his plane stopped for a layover in Moscow, U.S. officials revoked his passport. He's been stuck in Moscow for seven years now.

If he returns to America, then Snowden will almost certainly be jailed.

"I can be very much at peace with the choices that I've made," he says. It was the right thing to do, and it has made things better. Some of these programs have been halted."

In 2013, Donald Trump was asked about Snowden. He said, "This guy is a bad guy and there is still a thing called execution!" But this year, President Trump said he'd "look at" giving Snowden a pardon.

Instead, he took documents to journalists. The world learned the th.

Snowden did a good thing. He deserves a pardon.

Julian Assange deserves one, too.

Charley Pride

Charley Pride

Charley Pride, the pioneering country music superstar who had 30 number one hits on the country music charts, died Dec. 12 at the age of 86 in Dallas from complications of COVID-19.

Pride was not the first Black musician in country music, but he was the genre's first big star, with 30 No. 1 songs on the country charts during a legendary career.

He was a great athlete growing up and was a star pitcher and twotime All-Star for Memphis in the Negro Leagues. Injuries ended his baseball dreams and he turned to a career in country music.

The baritone went to Nashville, and after a while he was signed to RCA and first hit the charts in 1966 with "Just Between Me and You." Pride would become a top-selling star whose hits include the enduring 1971 song "Kiss an Angel Good Morning."

He won three Grammys and was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame in 2000. Pride had just received a lifetime achievement award November 11 on live television at the CMA awards and performed on that show.

John Le Carré

John Le Carré, a British novelist known for bestselling spy novels including "The Spy Who Came in from the Cold" and "Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy," died Dec. 12 of pneumonia in Cornwall, England at the age of 89.

Le Carré's novels drew in part from his own experiences in the 1950s and '60s working for British intelligence in both MI5 and MI6, the British equivalents of the FBI and CIA.

His early novels focus on the Cold War that raged as they were being written, and several featured the Le Carré hero George Smiley, a retired spy whose everyman qualities endeared him to British readers as an anti-James Bond.

Le Carré's works were frequently adapted for film, TV, and radio, with popular Hollywood adaptations including a 1965 "The Spy Who Came in from the Cold" starring Richard Burton, a 2005 "The Ann Reinking Constant Gardener" starring Ralph Fiennes, and a 2011 "Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy" starring Gary Oldman.

Le Carré didn't talk much about the details of his time with MI5 and MI6; he told the Paris Review in 1997 that it was "some residual sense of loyalty" that prompted him to keep those years close to the vest, even decades after he left to pursue his writing career.

Jeannie Morris

Morris began working in sports journalism in the 1960s, writing for the Chicago Daily News and Chicago's American. The then-wife of Chicago Bears wide receiver Johnny Morris, she wrote her early columns under the byline "Mrs. Johnny Morris."

She moved to sports broadcasting at Chicago's WMAQ and WBBM TV stations, continuing for decades. Morris often found she had to argue with men to get the access she needed, in press boxes, on the field, and in locker rooms.

On one memorable occasion, as she covered a Bears-Vikings game with a press box that explicitly barred women and children from entering, she reported from the box's roof in a blizzard.

Morris was honored with 11 Emmy Awards, and in 2014, she became the first woman to win the Ring Lardner Award for Excellence in Sports Journalism.

"Athletes generally are closer to their mothers," she told the Chicago Sun-Times. "They'll tell me things they'd never dream of telling a man."

Doug Scott

Doug Scott, an English mountain climber who was part of the first team to summit Mount Everest via its challenging southwest face, died Dec. 7 of cerebral lymphoma at the age of 79.

Scott joined Chris Bonington's famed Everest expedition in 1975. It was the first British team to summit Everest, as well as the first to use the southwest face to get there, and Scott himself became the first Englishman to reach Everest's summit.

The night after he achieved the summit, Scott and his climbing partner, Dougal Haston, were caught away from camp and without oxygen for the night. They lived through brutal cold and low oxygen that night, surviving to continue their descent.

Two years later, climbing Pakistan's The Ogre, Scott broke both legs and crawled to base camp, again surviving a near-impossible situation.

Scott made first ascents of many mountains, and he climbed the highest peak on all seven continents.

In 1989, Scott founded Community Action Nepal, a nonprofit that works to improve working and living conditions in Everest's country.

Carol Sutton

Carol Sutton, an actress known for roles in movies and TV shows including "Steel Magnolias" and "Queen Sugar," died Dec. 10 of complications of COVID-19 in New Orleans at the age of 76.

One of Sutton's most recognizable roles was as Nurse Pam in "Steel Magnolias." Her other movies include "Ray," "Monster's Ball," "The Pelican Brief," and "Dawn of the Planet of the Apes."

She was frequently seen on TV, appearing in shows including "Lovecraft Country," "Queen Sugar," "American Horror Story: Coven," "Treme," "Claws," and "True Detective."

Sutton was also a well-known stage actress in New Orleans, widely considered one of the bright lights of the city's theater scene.

Ann Reinking, a choreographer, dancer, and actress known for productions including "Chicago" – both the original Broadway show and the 1996 revival, died Dec. 12 at age 71.

Reinking became a star when she took over for Gwen Verdon as Roxie Hart in the original Broadway production of "Chicago" in 1977.

She had previously worked with the show's legendary choreographer, Bob Fosse, in "Pippin," and she became his muse as well as beginning a romantic relationship with him that lasted for

Influenced by Fosse's work but drawing on her own creativity as well, Reinking became an acclaimed choreographer, and when "Chicago" was revived on Broadway in 1996, she both choreographed the production and returned to the role of Roxie Hart, winning a Tony Award for Best Choreography.

She co-created, co-directed, and co-choreographed the 1998 revue "Fosse," receiving an Olivier Award for Best Theatre Choreographer when she brought the production to London's West End.

Reinking also starred in the movies "Annie" and "Micki & Maude.'

Tommy Lister

Tommy "Tiny" Lister, an actor known for his roles in "Friday" and "The Dark Knight," died Dec. 10 at the age of 62. He reportedly had been experiencing Covid-19 symptoms but the cause of death has not been determined.

Lister started acting in the 1980s appearing in "Beverly Hills Cop ' and "Runaway Train.' П"

He played a wrestler in the 1989 Hulk Hogan movie "No Hold Barred" and then briefly wrestled in the WCW.

His most popular role was playing the neighborhood bully in the popular comedy movie "Friday" and the sequel "Next Friday.

Lister appeared in the movies "Dark Knight" and "Austin Powers in Goldmember" and on television he guest starred on "The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air."

Short story: Pizza and tears

By Yolanda Adele

I thought that my precious grandson, Moises, would die in my arms after he suffered a seizure at just two years old. He had an ear infection and was asleep on the living room floor when I stopped by with my mother to see my daughter, Tina, and her newborn baby girl, Hannah.

At the end of our visit, I told Tina we'd let ourselves out. She was in her bedroom feeding the baby.

We walked into the living room and saw Mosey on the floor shaking violently. His eyes were open wide with fear and confusion. I yelled to my daughter to call 911. Mosey's lips were becoming a bluish-grey color. I knelt on the floor at his feet and held his flailing arms down over his head as I lowered my body over his. The force of Mosey's seizure caused his small body to thrust against me as I struggled to hold him still.

Tina bolted from her room to phone for help. She related the instructions the emergency operator was giving to her. "Strip his clothes off, roll him over to his side so he doesn't choke on his vomit and apply cold water with towels to his body!

I was going through the motions, all the time saying to myself... This can't really be happening! This can't really be happening!!!

I desperately wanted Tina to trade places with me. I was afraid I may not perform the life-saving tasks perfectly. I soon changed my mind at the sound of the panic cries in Tina's voice that singe my heart. I somehow contained my terror while I witnessed this precious little boy's body convulsing. All the while I pleaded with God to release us from this nightmare.

Suddenly, the back door opened and five firemen came in with military-like precision. I got up and reluctantly left Mosey's side to let the rescue workers take his vital signs and work to get him stable.

I found my mother in a corner of the room looking pale and crying hysterically. As much as I wanted to go in the ambulance with Mosey and Tina, I had to stay with my mother. I told Tina that I'd care for the baby until my son- in -law got home. I felt terror grip every fiber of my by being. I had to get my mother home and give her sedatives. Soon my son-in-law arrived and he took the baby with him to the hospital. It was time for her feeding and she needed her mother and my son in-law needed to be with his wife and his son.

I hurriedly drove my mother to her house before I went home to get my husband, so we could drive to the E.R. together. He looked stoic. I was feeling an odd emotional numbness. We drove in eerie silence.

At the hospital we learned that Mosey had a febrile or heat-induced seizure brought on by a rapid rising body temperature. It caused the electrical activity of the brain to become irregular, resulting in loss of body control.

Amazingly, several hours later Mosey was back home with his mom, dad, baby sister, his Papa and me. His fever was remarkably lower. He was a little weak but plenty happy and wanted pizza. So, of course, we ordered pizza. When the pizza arrived we sat around the coffee table to eat. I was overcome by a deluge of tears as I let myself remember my deepest fear... that this evening would be about making funeral arrangements for our two- year- old grandson. Instead, here we were eating pizza. Tears of relief and gratitude flowed as I looked at Mosey's pepperoni and marinara sauce stained face. Then, I became hungry for pizza too. Though mine was sprinkled with salty tears, pizza never tasted so good to me.

• The pandemic has brought unique challenges, but the country will persevere.

for optimism

By Claudia M. Frometa Mayor of Downey

Hello! We are continuing to face and respond to a historic pandemic, and some of the greatest challenges we have faced in our lifetime are before us. Yet, I am encouraged. I am filled with hope, enthusiasm, and grit! It is during great times of adversity that our collective character is revealed.

As the greatest British statesman M. Frometa of the 20th century and leader of the British Army responsible for the victory in WWII, Sir Winston Churchill once said, "The optimist sees opportunity in every difficulty." And here we are Downey, we will tackle the challenges ahead and move our city forward.

Claudia

This week has been historic for the State of California and certainly for LA County as the first shipment of the Pfizer approved COVID-19 vaccine arrived for distribution and inoculation.

And while we are celebrating the vaccine that will eradicate this virus and bring us closer to ending this historic pandemic, my message to our Downev residents is: We must continue to remain vigilant and protect each other by avoiding large gatherings especially with Christmas and the holidays upon

Yes, while this virus has over a 90% survival rate in LA County alone, we have seen a 300% increase in hospitalizations over the last two months. Currently, there are over 4,200 people hospitalized in LA County (this number is changing daily) and our hospitals are running out of Intensive Care Unit (ICU) capacity. There are not enough beds for all who may become extremely ill. These are the most critical times we have faced during 2020. Neighboring county hospitals are running out of ICU beds and space.

Downey mayor expresses reasons

I say this with the intention NOT to contribute to additional fear-mongering but as someone in the healthcare industry, currently seeing first-hand what is happening in our hospitals across Southern California. As an Emergency Management professional in healthcare for the last 15 years, the surge that our hospitals are experiencing, coupled with the shortage of staff is both alarming and unprecedented.

Healthcare staff is exhausted and hospitals have been on disaster response mode all year.

As we approach the Christmas and New Year holidays, my ask as your Mayor is that we as a community, take responsible steps to safeguard our families and our children. We all desire to get back to normal.

I also want to take this opportunity to address a few important issues of concern many of our residents have placed before me:

1.) Excessive trash all over our city – littering, especially around fast food places. The city is working with the management of these establishments to keep up with the maintenance. We need to work together and all do our part to maintain the cleanliness of our city.

2.) Speaking of trash littering on our streets and the potential for viral infections As we continue to deal with a public health crisis, our city will continue with its normal street sweeping schedule. This is important as we strive to maintain public safety and the health of our community. 3.) Illegal dumping - We are seeing an excessive amount of bulky items thrown out. Please contact the city's illegal dumping at 562-904-1161 or contact Cal Met to schedule a pick up at 562-259-1239. The city has increased Code Enforcement surveillance from two times per week to five times per week.

4.) Speeding throughout major intersections - our Police Department will continue to conduct speed enforcement in different areas of our city.

5.) Our parks and playgrounds are open - While we want to avoid large gatherings to minimize the increase in community infection spread, we know our youth and children need the outdoor space. Our youth and children have had a very tough year with distance learning and the elimination of many activities this year. For our mental health, let's utilize our parks and playgrounds responsibly.

This coming year will continue to bring us great challenges but it will also bring tremendous opportunities for collaboration, growth and the strengthening of our city. I invite you to be involved and be the change you want to see in our city by coming alongside me and working collaboratively to strengthen relationships and unify our community.

As the 47th Mayor of this city, the 11th largest city in LA County, I promise to lead our City of Downey through this great time of adversity with strength, compassion, integrity, and empathy. It is during these uncertain times our collective effort must be focused on our strengths and we must come together in unity.

I am full of hope and optimism that better days are ahead of us, but in the meantime, we must continue to exercise good sense, be kind and take care of each other and our community by avoiding gatherings. We will get through this together. Thank you for allowing me to serve you Downey. God bless our city. Merry Christmas and Happy Holidays!
