 Hospital workers received COVID-19 vaccinations this week as surging infection rates sent hospitals beyond capacity limits.

NORWALK – The COVID-19 vaccine created by Pfizer arrived at Norwalk Community Hospital this week.

The hospital received 205 doses on Monday and planned to begin vaccinations throughout the week.

According to Hector Hernandez, CEO of Los Angeles Community Hospitals, the vaccines would be given to healthcare providers in highrisk departments, including the emergency department, intensive care unit, COVID Recipients include units. nurses, physicians, respiratory therapists, and housekeeping personnel, going down a chain dependent on level of risk.

This comes at a critical time in the fight against the coronavirus, as Norwalk Community faces many of the same difficulties other hospitals are facing statewide.

"Right now, we are at capacity; our ICU is full," said Hernandez. "We created a separate area to treat ICU patients. Fortunately, we do have the ICU nurses providing that care so it has not been a critical issue for us. But yes, we are at capacity.

Hernandez says that a recent survey found that about 70% of employees had expressed the entire county and everyone, of the newly approved Moderna vaccine.

With its arrival however, Hernandez hopes that the hospital will be able to begin vaccinating the community in the spring or summer. In the meantime, he advises individuals to follow health advisories.

"If we are a facility that is selected to contribute and distribute that vaccine, we'll gladly do that," said Hernandez. Continue following the CDC and public health recommendations, social distancing, wearing the mask, and constantly wearing a mask. If you feel sick, please stay home, and if you see someone who is sick tell them to look for medical attention if needed.'

Hahn allocates $300K for restaurant gift cards

LOS ANGELES - Los Angeles County Supervisor Janice Hahn's office has dedicated $330,000 to a program designed to support struggling restaurants and families in need.

"People are hurting," said Hahn. "Through no fault of their own, people have lost jobs and wages, and small businesses have been shuttered. We designed this program to get food on families' tables while at the same time supporting restaurants that are struggling right now.'

The funding is being distributed to 10 non-profit organizations across the Fourth Supervisorial District. The non-profits will use the funding to purchase gift cards from small restaurants in their communities and distribute them to local families in need.

"2020 has been a very difficult year for a lot of families and local businesses," said Oscar Hernandez, executive director of Whittier Boys and Girls Club, one of the participating non-profits. "I think this a great idea, that helps both families who are struggling while at the same time, helping local restaurants in our area.'

So many of my patients have become infected with the COVID-19 virus. If you have, I hope that it was a mild case and that you have fully recovered.

But there is a peculiar twist to this strange disease. 10% or more of those who were infected continue to suffer from long-term symptoms, and are becoming known as "long-haulers.

In theory, they have recovered from the worst of the disease and have had a negative test. While they are most likely to be over 50, to have two or three chronic illnesses, or to have had a serious COVID case, many young and otherwise healthy sufferers are also considered

"I felt the unique taste of our ceviche would find a place on the taste buds of my customers and the word of mouth would help build a base to grow on," Esparza said. "But it was enrolling in the Miracle's program that gave me the organizational tools and resources I needed to move forward," he continued. "I'm thankful EECI was able to respond to COVID-19 the way it did."

"Thanks to a great deal of support from our partners in the financial community and others, we were able to offer the free program to 12 individuals and certify a Miracle's Class of 2020, now on the way to hopefully realizing their potential and enriching the economic base of the communities they serve," explained EECI Executive Director Barbara J. Stanton.

"As a result of this year's program, 9 small businesses (DBA's), and The insight came through his enrollment in the Miracle's 3 non-profit organizations have been created. These COVID 19 business start-ups will have the history of knowing that during the most tragic pandemic to come to this country, they endured, they planned, and to be long-haulers.

Long-haulers appear to include two groups: Those who experience some observable permanent damage to their lungs, heart, kidneys, or brain, and those who continue to experience debilitating symptoms despite no detectable damage. The list of symptoms is long and inconsistent, and it is interesting that their long-term symptoms do not necessarily look like their original illness. The most common longhauler symptoms include:

- Cough
- Fatigue
- Body aches
- Joint pain
- Shortness of breath
- Loss of taste and smell
- Difficulty sleeping
- Headaches
- Brain fog

The leading theories are that the virus remains in the body in some small form, or that the immune system continues to overreact even though the infection has passed. Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases at the National Institutes of Health, has speculated that many may have developed myalgic encephalomyelitis/chronic fatigue syndrome (which can also be triggered by other infectious diseases, such as mononucleosis, Lyme disease, and SARS, another coronavirus disease). Scientists have, so far, been unable to predict who might become a long-hauler.

Another EECI partner, GBC International Bank, awarded two scholarships of $500 to the youngest student in the group, 15-year-old Jada Robinson of "Jada's LA Jewels" and import/export entrepreneur Bernard "Kofi" Amofa of "Floralingual".

> "I appreciate this opportunity to create and grow a small business in my community and evolve into a business that can boost its economic base and provide jobs and support for youths and young adults. That is what I learned as part of my Miracle's experience," Esparza concluded.

The goal of these long-haulers is to resume employment, family life, etc. while continuing to deal with debilitating symptoms. There is currently no intervention or treatment. For many, online support groups have been helpful.

To date, over 17.5 million Americans have been infected with COVID-19, and the number may climb to as many as 50 million. That implies that we could ultimately be dealing with millions more longhaulers; a lasting and significant problem for our country.

Battery Ingestion Can Cause Severe Damage

Q: We're pretty sure our dog, Holly, ate a remote control with its batteries, because we can't find it anywhere. She seems normal. What should we do? A: Take Holly to her veterinarian immediately for a physical exam and radiographs, often called X-rays. If Holly did eat the remote, or even just a battery, she could develop severe medical problems. Treatment is most successful if begun early. Once swallowed, a nonfood item becomes what veterinarians call a gastrointestinal foreign body. The stomach can't digest it, and if it's relatively large, it can block the gastrointestinal, or GI, tract. Battery ingestion is especially harmful, regardless of whether it's an alkaline or a lithium battery. Alkaline batteries are the more common household batteries, available in AAA, AA and other sizes. Lithium batteries are usually small, round discs. If you see black powdery material in Holly's mouth, it's likely she punctured an alkaline battery. These batteries contain potassium hydroxide or sodium hydroxide, caustic chemicals that burn the tissues of the GI tract and cause deep ulcers. Lithium batteries are much riskier, even if they aren't punctured, because they emit electricity. The risk is highest if the battery becomes lodged in the folds of the esophagus, where the electrical current rapidly damages the tissues, causing perforation or a stricture. Some batteries also contain heavy metals, which are toxic. Do not induce vomiting unless your veterinarian instructs you to do so. A damaged alkaline battery can cause corrosive injury to the esophagus and throat on its way up, and a lithium battery may get stuck in the esophageal folds and cause electrical injury. Tell Holly that the next time she wants to get charged up, she should grab her leash and take you for a walk.

I need my pet's love and comfort now more than ever, so I won't relinquish her to the animal shelter. What can I do?

Will a Biden presidency finally end the death penalty?

the U.S. government under President Donald Trump has carried out the most federal executions ever in a single year.

Three more executions were scheduled before Christmas. President-elect Joe Biden, however, made eliminating the death penalty part of his criminal justice reform platform, marking a reversal from his past support for capital punishment.

How will a Biden presidency affect the death penalty, and what are the issues about it that continue to cause debate and controversy?

"Executions are a form of torture that violate the Eight Amendment, which prohibits the federal government from imposing cruel and unusual punishment," says David Dozier (www. DavidDozierBooks.com), a professor emeritus in the School of Iournalism & Media Studies at San Diego State University and author of The California Killing Field, a novel about the death penalty.

"The death penalty is a barbaric and sadistic violation of human rights that should be eliminated in the U.S. and around the world. The U.S. has a disgusting record for a nation that sees itself as a beacon for human rights. But the momentum of states abolishing the death penalty, and the growing bipartisan consensus against it, make Biden's goal of ending capital punishment a stronger possibility."

A 2019 Gallup poll on capital punishment showed that 60% of

Despite a shift by the American public against the death penalty, Americans favored life in prison while 36% preferred the death each of the 13 executions since then. penalty when they were asked, "Which do you think is the better penalty for murder?" Public support for the death penalty has dipped near a 48-year low.

> Dozier explains some key points about the death penalty heading into the Biden presidency:

> Legislative possibilities. Biden supports ending the death penalty through legislation and incentivizing the remaining death penalty states to do likewise. There are conservative lawmakers on board with ending the death penalty, but Dozier says a 6-3 conservative majority in the U.S. Supreme Court means "it is unlikely the Court will reconsider the death penalty anytime soon."

> Reversing recent party history. "The Democratic Party leaders have been shameful cowards with regard to human rights in general and the death penalty in particular," Dozier says. "The Clintons, Barack Obama, and Biden were pro-death penalty when it was still popular in the 1990s. Vice president-elect Kamala Harris, on the other hand, refused to seek the death penalty for an accused cop killer when she was the district attorney of San Francisco.'

> High costs of the death penalty process. A study in California revealed that the cost of capital punishment in the state has been over $4 billion since it was reinstated in 1978, or $308 million for

Other financial facts about the death penalty show capital cases in some states costing far more than non-capital cases and being much more expensive than life imprisonment.

"The complexity of seeking the death penalty and carrying out the execution is a long and expensive process," Dozier says. "Many capital cases are appealed. Incarceration on death row can span 10, 15, or 20 or more years. Capital punishment costs are an economic burden on government budgets. It's more cost-effective to commute death penalties to life imprisonment sentences without parole.'

Demographics of death row. "The death penalty is often a poor man's punishment, and it is systemically racist," Dozier says. "Underpaid public defenders often defend the poor. District attorneys are more likely to go after defendants with few resources to fight their prosecution."

Black Americans make up 13% of the population but 34% of persons executed since 1976.

"The American public is moving away from the death penalty," Dozier says, "and it's time for a new administration to do away with

The need for new antibiotics

By Kenneth E. Thorpe

The end of the COVID-19 pandemic is finally in sight.

Both Pfizer and Moderna have received emergency FDA authorization to distribute tens of millions of doses of their vaccines across the country.

This is fantastic news. Unfortunately, the scientific community can't rest on its laurels. An even worse pandemic is already looming. And this time, developing treatments will prove much more challenging.

This coming pandemic may not stem from a virus, but from drug-resistant bacteria and fungi known as "superbugs." These microbes already kill 700,000 people worldwide each year and infect millions more. And unless scientists invent new, more potent drugs, superbugs could kill 10 million people annually by 2050.

Antibiotics normally kill the vast majority of bacteria they encounter. But sometimes, a few microbes survive, reproduce, and pass on their immunity to future generations. Over time, certain strains of bacteria can become largely or completely impervious to even the strongest drugs.

Drug resistance could spell the end of modern medicine. Without effective antibiotics, common operations like Caesarian sections and hip replacements may become too risky, since patients could heavily in R&D, and turn a profit by selling any successful drugs in contract lethal drug-resistant infections in the hospital.

Public health experts almost universally agree that superbugs pose an enormous threat. But relatively few drug companies are investigating new antibiotics.

It's not hard to see why: the antibiotics market is fundamentally broken

Doctors liberally prescribe cutting-edge treatments for diseases like cancer, multiple sclerosis, and diabetes. By contrast, doctors only use new antibiotics in emergencies. They worry about overprescribing new antibiotics, lest bacteria evolve to resist them.

Consequently, manufacturers sell relatively few doses of advanced antibiotics -- and generate comparatively little revenue. In fact, many have abandoned antibiotics R&D. Just four major pharmaceutical companies still have antibiotics programs, down from 18 in the 1980s.

Small biotech firms have taken up that research burden but haven't fared well in recent years. Startup Achaogen, for example, released a groundbreaking superbug treatment two years ago, but didn't generate enough sales and ultimately filed for bankruptcy in 2019. At least three other startups have similarly gone belly up.

Simply put, the traditional biotech business model -- invest heavy volume -- doesn't work for antibiotics. For the sake of patients worldwide, policymakers need to find an alternative.

Consider the potential of a Netflix-style subscription model, in which insurers -- whether public or private -- pay recurring fees for unlimited access to new antibiotics. A modified version of this model already proved successful with Pfizer's COVID-19 vaccine. The U.S. government pre-purchased 100 million doses, with the option to buy an additional 500 million, which gave the company the confidence and funding necessary to develop the drug.

Governments could take a similar approach with antibiotics. Senators just proposed a bipartisan bill, the PASTEUR Act, which would allow the federal government to pay companies up to $3 billion to provide new antibiotics to doctors and hospitals. Experts think G20 countries will have to provide $4 billion in subscriptionlike payments to sufficiently spur the development of lifesaving antibiotics.

Right now, the antibiotics market is fundamentally broken. And unless policymakers fix it, the death toll from superbugs could make COVID-19 look tame by comparison.

COVID's threat to disabled Americans

By Angela F. Williams

The second wave of COVID-19 has arrived with a vengeance. But there's hope on the horizon. Vaccinations from Pfizer and valuable ICER considers it.

In theory, QALY assessments provide an objective way to quantify a drug's effectiveness -- and ensure that patients, insurers, and investing in drugs that disproportionately benefit Americans with disabilities.

ICER isn't alone in signaling that drug companies shouldn't Moderna proved more than 90 percent effective in clinical trials.

People in the highest risk categories -- namely, healthcare workers and those with chronic illnesses and disabilities -- are receiving prioritized access to these vaccines. That's as it should be. Putting them at the front of the line for a vaccine is a way to collectively acknowledge that their lives matter.

But unfortunately, when it comes to diseases other than COVID-19, society doesn't show nearly the same level of concern for people with disabilities and chronic illnesses. In fact, many selfstyled healthcare experts have proposed "reforms" that would limit these individuals' access to treatments. That's wrong, plain and simple

By now, it's well known that COVID-19 disproportionately harms people with pre-existing conditions and disabilities. Of the roughly 250,000 Americans who've lost their lives, 94 percent had another condition listed as a factor in their cause of death. COVID-19 patients with intellectual or developmental disabilities have died from the virus at roughly twice the rate of the general patient population.

These vulnerable patients could soon face even more challenges if health insurers listen to groups like the Institute for Clinical and Economic Review (ICER).

The influential non-profit has appointed itself as an arbiter of new drugs' cost-effectiveness. ICER recommends a "fair price" for By Jim Hightower medications based on the analyses it performs.

To conduct these cost-benefit analyses, ICER uses a controversial America's power elites for Christmas. metric called a "quality-adjusted life year," or QALY. taxpayers are getting a good bang for their buck.

But in practice, these assessments discriminate against patients with disabilities and chronic illnesses. That's because patients with certain chronic diseases and disabilities may never achieve a full QALY. A drug could completely alleviate the patient's symptoms but wouldn't deliver a full QALY.

In other words, ICER uses its OALY metric to devalue the lives and well-being of vulnerable populations. And ICER's clout cannot be underestimated. If it considers a drug to not be cost-effective, insurers may listen and deny the medication to those who need it most.

The dangerous consequences of ICER's pseudoscientific Angela F. Williams is president and CEO of Easterseals, a leading evaluations don't end there. By placing such a low value on these treatments, ICER discourages biopharmaceutical firms from

Special gifts for special people

Ho-ho-ho, wait till you hear about the gifts I gave to some of

To each of our Congress critters, I sent my fondest wish that from now on, they receive the exact same income, health care and pension that we average citizens get. If they receive only the American average, it might make them a bit more humble — and less cavalier about ignoring the needs of regular folks.

To the stockings of GOP leaders who've so eagerly debased themselves to serve the madness of President Donald Trump, I added individual spritzer bottles of fragrances such as "Essence of Integrity" and "Eau de Self-Respect" to help cover up their stench. And in the stockings of Democratic congressional leaders, I put 'Spice of Viagra" and "Bouquet du Grassroots" to stiffen their spines and remind them of who they represent.

For America's CEOs, my gift is a beautifully boxed, brand-new set of corporate ethics. It's called the golden rule: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." Going to pollute someone's neighborhood? Then you have to live there, too. Going to slash wages and benefits? Then slash yours as well. Going to move your manufacturing to sweatshops in China? Then put your office right inside the worst sweatshop. Executive life wouldn't be as luxurious, but CEOs would glow with a new purity of spirit.

To the Wall Street hedge fund hucksters who've conglomerated, plundered and degraded hundreds of America's newspapers, I've sent copies of "Journalism for Dummies" and offered jobs for each of them in their stripped-down, Dickensian newsrooms. Good luck.

And what better gift to the Trump family — Donald, Ivanka and Jared, Eric, Donnie Jr. and the whole nest of them — than to wish that they live with one another constantly and permanently? No, really, each of you deserve it.

Yes, I have finally mastered the art of finding perfect gifts for people on my list — gifts that rise above crass commercialism and are genuinely appreciated by the people who receive them. I wholeheartedly recommend such gift-giving to you.

This holiday season got me thinking about America's spirit of giving, and I don't mean this overdone business of Christmas, Hanukkah and other holiday gifts. I mean our true spirit of giving giving of ourselves.

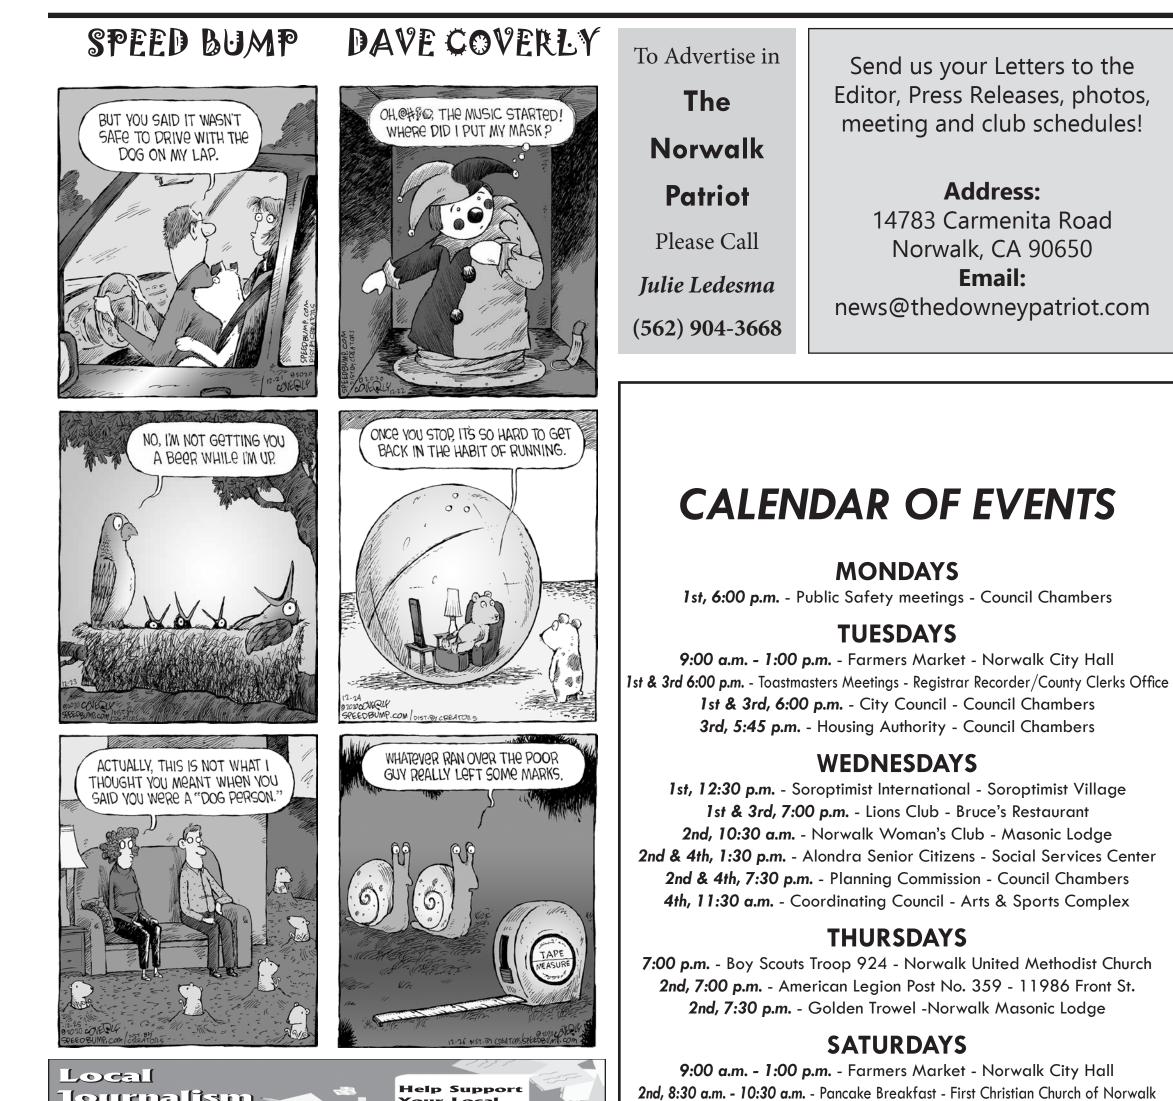

Yes, we are a country of rugged individualists, yet there's also a deep, community-minded streak in each of us. We're a people who believe in the notion that we're all in this together, that we can make our individual lives better by contributing to the common good.

The establishment media pay little attention to grassroots generosity, focusing instead on the occasional showy donation by what it calls "philanthropists" — big tycoons who give a little piece of their billions to some university or museum in exchange for a building named after them. But in my mind, the real philanthropists are the millions of you ordinary folks who have precious little money to give but consistently give of yourselves, and do it without demanding that your name be engraved on a granite wall.

My own daddy — rest his soul — was a fine example of this. With half a dozen other guys in Denison, Texas, he started the Little League Baseball program, volunteering to build the park, sponsor and coach the teams, run the squawking PA system, etc., etc. Even after I graduated from Little League, Daddy stayed working at it, because his involvement was not merely for his kids ... but for all. He felt the same way about being taxed to build a public library in town. I don't recall him ever going in that building, much less checking out a book, but he wanted it to be there for the community, and he was happy to pay his part. Not that he was a do-good liberal, for God's sake — indeed, he called himself a conservative.

My daddy didn't even know he had a political philosophy, but he did, and it's the best I've ever heard. He would often say to me, "Everybody does better when everybody does better." If only our leaders in Washington and on Wall Street would begin practicing this true American philosophy.

Roldan family lives, breathes soccer

The Pico Rivera family is enjoying extraordinary success in professional soccer.

By John A. Sherrard Contributor

PICO RIVERA - Since March of this year, when the pandemic surged, many family members haven't been able to all gather.

Christmas Day 2020 will be special to a lot of people.

One family in particular, the soccer-playing Roldan brothers, Cesar, Jr., Cristian and Alex and their parents, Cesar and Ana, all of Pico Rivera will be one of those families

The three brothers, all raised in Pico by their parents, played organized soccer since they were very young, went to El Rancho High School and are now all in the professional ranks

Cesar, the oldest, is the head athletic trainer for the L.A. Galaxy and both Cristian and Alex play for the Seattle Sounders of the MLS.

The first time the two teams played, it was a game Cesar, Sr. and wife, Ana will never forget.

"It was very exciting," said Cesar, Sr., of seeing all three on the field as professionals at the same time. "Every family is always thinking about taking the kids to a different level, as far as sports go. It was a dream come true. To be honest with you, she (Ana) cried and I got goose bumps when that happened. It's been non-stop since then."

The Sounders have won two MLS Cups (2016, 2019) and have been in the championship game four out of the last five years.

Ana comes from a soccer family from El Salvador and had a nephew play for the national team and her dad was a legend in his neighborhood. She recently showed some of the awards the boys have earned, including their various championship rings. They had a case with seven title rings, which included two MLS Cups, two CIF and one CIF State championship and conference titles in the Pac 12 for Cristian and the WAC for Alex.

"These championships were really exciting and emotional for us," Ana added.

Cristian explained how important those rings were for his parents.

"Without them, we wouldn't be able to get these," Cristian said. "I felt they would cherish them a Cristian, who signed with Seattle in 2015 and is a midfielder, has been on the team for all of those appearances. Alex, a defender/ midfielder, who was drafted by the Sounders in 2018, has been in the last two championship games.

Seattle played the Galaxy twice this year, which were the two times the three brothers were on the field at the same time. Mom and dad couldn't watch in person, since no fans were allowed in Dignity Health Sports Park this season.

soccer power during the era when the Roldans played there and won two CIF Southern Section Championships in 2011 and '13 and a National title, were coached by Dominic Picon.

"This is one of the greatest families that I've ever been associated with in my 22 years of being in education," said Picon, who currently is Assistant Principal at Schurr High. "Each of the kids are so unique and I still remember

"He started out as a goalie and in his senior year he played forward. He was also a threesport athlete and scored one of the most important goals in El Rancho history. Salesian was nationally ranked and was undefeated for five years at home and his goal and that victory catapulted the program into where the kids believed they could beat the best.'

eighth grade when Cesar was a senior.

"From the get-go in his sophomore year (he was injured his freshman year) he was putting up big numbers," Picon said of Cristian. "He was playing at a very high level."

little bit more than I would.'

Cesar, who we know as Dewey.

At the time, Cristian was in Picon was coach for the Dons for two stints from 2001-04 and after two years in law school he came back to coach through 2013.

The Dons, at one stretch, went undefeated at home for six or seven years. The field wasn't one of the better ones around but turned out to be a killer for most visitors as Cristian explained.

"To be honest, I think we had huge advantage when we were on that field," Cristian said. "They cut it nice and short when we had big games and the crowds on the sidelines were intimidating to a lot of people.

"It benefited us quite a bit."

Cristian won CIF Player of the Year in his sophomore year when the Dons won the CIF title. Cristian would go on to the University of Washington and helped the Huskies to a Pac 12 Conference title.

Cristian, who became a big scorer as he progressed in high school, had some extra incentive to score those goals.

"Grandpa (Ana's dad Estevan) used to bribe me per goal," he said. "He would give me money when I was younger and it was a way for me to make a quick buck and also be dangerous in front of the goal.

"My dad would also say, 'I'll give you five dollars if you can score a header.' It was more difficult than scoring a normal goal. Honestly, I attribute a lot of that to me being good and scoring a lot of goals in the air. I knew that five dollars was on the line.'

Cesar, who later was attending Cal State Long Beach working on his Kinesiology degree, would occasionally come back to El Rancho to help out with the program.

"As for Alex, he was going to go to a junior college in Arizona, but a late opening at Seattle University led him to a four-year college career," Picon added.

Alex, who is currently in a graduate program, was proud to have a family like no other.

"It's a life unlike any other," Alex Roldan said. "We're blessed, we're privileged and we have everything that was given to us not taking for granted.

"My brothers and parents, so far, have lived a great life. They came here and gave us the tools for success and good values. All the things that we got from a parent, we got them as kids. The only way that we can repay them is to be successful and do the things that they wish upon us.

"As far as the storyline about family, we are very lucky to have the family that we have and this storyline has been great for us.

'(As for Christmas), it's going to be special. As for the moment, we're going to take it in and it has been a long time since we were all together."

Cesar, Sr. said of his boys when they were kids: "When they were younger, they would destroy my garage door. They never struggled to go to practice and they were always ready.

'One day I remember this man said to me at a game when they were little, 'I hope I'm still alive to see these kids play professional.""

That man should see these kids now.

Cesar, who emigrated from Guatemala, ended by saying how important their mother was when they were all growing up and even now when it comes to eating.

"They have been traveling all around and they miss momma's food," Cesar, Sr. said. "They Face Time her before they came here and requested certain dishes for them for her to cook."

And so it goes. It all comes down to momma's food now and all the years growing up in Pico Rivera.
