Norwalk civic center getting new look

■ Norwalk has begun the process of redeveloping its civic center to include restaurants and housing.

By Vincent Medina Contributor

NORWALK - Norwalk Mayor Jennifer Perez and Margarita Councilwoman Rios gave new details about a developer's plans to enhance the city's entertainment district dubbed "The Walk."

Primestor, a Los Angeles developer, presented the council with plans to redevelop the Civic Center, AMC theater, DoubleTree Hotel, surrounding businesses and the City Hall lawn on June 1.

Under the developer's plan, City Hall lawn would undergo development to include restaurants and businesses.

"The project is expected to include dynamic retail food and beverage along with plazas that can be activated with regularly scheduled community events,' said Mayor Perez. "The public spaces will transform the former lawn into the vibrant heart of daily life for many."

Rios expressed concern over the development of the City Hall lawn, as she wondered how changes would impact future Linda Parra, AD

"One of the issues I think is important to consider in a project like this is how much green space would we be losing or gaining," the councilwoman said. "That's where we hold our events. That's not going to be possible at the same level that our community is accustomed to, so where would we hold our events?

"I know that the developer has proposed a side venue where we could hold live concerts or other types of entertainment, but the events we held on a larger scale would have to be held somewhere else," Rios explained.

Under Primestor's proposed plan, the enhancement would include open space, shops, dining, and housing, according to the press release issued by the

"I've asked the developer to give the percentages," said Rios. "If the developer is proposing housing, I want to know what percentage of housing will be there. If they're saying we are maintaining our green space, I want to know what percentage of green space we are maintaining. It helps me and the community get a better idea of what is going

The project is communitydriven, as Primestor was given direction to get feedback from the Norwalk community about what developments they would like to see at "The Walk." The developer will reach out to the community through focus groups, doorto-door canvassing, surveys and meetings, which the city advertised through social media.

developer has received strong support from respondents to redevelop the Civic Center, immense desire for additional food and beverage options, and preference to dine and socialize in Norwalk," said Perez. "I am anxious to hear from our community on their thoughts for the development of the entertainment district."

Mayor Perez detailed that the project would involve a public entitlement process that would take 12 months. Construction of the project would take approximately 18 months.

Athletic directors reflect on a season unlike any other

■ The pandemic caused havoc on high school sports calendars.

By John Sherrard Contributor

NORWALK - The term "challenging" took on a whole new meaning this past year for area athletic directors.

When all of high school sports came to a screeching halt in March of 2020, no one knew what was to come over the next

Athletes began training at home and didn't have any connection with their sport in the usually busy summer.

The governing body of high school sports, CIF-Southern Section, gave occasional updates for the upcoming 2020–21 school

The big date for the first real important update from CIF came on July 20, 2020 when actual start dates could take place. The sports year would be broken up into only

In the meantime, high school athletic directors in the area had no real start dates for fall sports such as football, cross country, best for the kids. boys water polo, etc.

The Norwalk Patriot recently caught up with a few of those AD's at John Glenn, La Mirada, St. enjoys the nasal swab COVID Paul and La Serna. Below are their reflections of the most difficult and unusual year they have every the appointment. Talk about experienced.

Parra has been at the school for 20 years and teaches an amazing group of students in a special education class.

She has been the girls varsity basketball coach for 12 years and, in addition, the girls volleyball coach and girls tennis coach through the years. She then became an assistant AD in 2006 under current football coach Dave record," Parra said. "Despite how Cruz until 2013 and has held the AD position since then.

Below are her thoughts on the

"The last few days I have been reflecting on this past year and a half and it's hard to put into words the amount of pride I have for our athletes and coaching staff," said Parra, who graduated from Mojave High and Cal State University Los Angeles. "We ended last March not knowing what was going to happen with athletics and we began this year in the same boat. We had no answers for our athletes other than 'just be patient.'

"Many of us honestly believed we would not have a season at all. And then in one day everything changed. We learned that we would have a matter of days to put together seasons and get the kids back in practice to play games. Our football season was pushed back as far as we could so that our coaches could do their best to get the kids ready for a game.

She then thought, 'How can you honestly prepare for a football season in a matter of a few weeks?' It is pretty much unheard of yet our coaches took on the challenge. It was a ton of hard work and stress but they managed to coach a group of young athletes and provide them with an experience that many are grateful for. We were lucky to have David Cruz, Ernie Gutierrez, Ruben Rodriguez (Bear) and Eric Villalobos as part of our football staff along with other walk-on coaches. You guys led the way for all of our other athletic teams.

Parra then reflected on the other sports that would play starting in March of this past

"After football season ended, we were then forced with the task of squeezing in all of our winter and spring sports into 2 1/2 months," she added. "I think about all that those sports had to go through, and I am so grateful we have a coaching staff who is flexible and who honestly care about each other's programs. These coaches shared

"Our indoor athletes and coaches were COVID tested at least two times a week. Nobody dedication! The bi-weekly COVID testing allowed our basketball, wrestling, and boys volleyball programs a chance to compete. And how great it was to watch our boys and girls wrestling teams finish in first place in the 605 League and advance to the CIF playoffs."

Sports is more than wins and

"While many people like to judge a program by its wins and losses, I saw so much more take place this year that is more valuable than a win on a team crazy of a ride this athletic season has been, our students were able to connect as teammates and were provided with positive experiences by their coaching staff. I have had the opportunity to speak to many parents who have shared how important this year has been for their child. These parents were so grateful for John Glenn."

Parra concluded with big thanks to John Glenn and Academy Southeast members who have continued to show their support to the athletes.

"Thank you to our coaches for your time, energy, and dedication to our athletes," she added. "Thank you for allowing me to send you, what feels like a million emails this year. I wish you all a wonderful summer and will see you next year. If any of you are interested in helping coach at JG next year, please contact me."

Hemenway, who graduated from Santa Fe High, was as surprised as anyone when sports finally started.

"As horrible as cases and deaths were in November and December, I was shocked when the decision was made that there would be sports played beginning in January," Hemenway said. "Scheduling and rescheduling of season one sports was not too difficult since our league had already adjusted to the new dates set by CIF. Time restrictions did not allow for many nonleague games, but we did have to cases in programs we were scheduled to play.

Season becomes two challenge.

"Season two sports was, without a doubt, the most difficult three months of my AD tenure," Hemenway said. "Our district (Whittier Union) had originally planned to limit our programs to only league contests, He started at La Serna in 1990 but that decision was reversed as

> The number of sports competing at the same time during season two made facility use difficult.

"We had 38 different teams competing during this time frame. Getting officials for all of these events was difficult. The assignors of officials did a great job working with local athletic directors," Hemenway said.

Transportation restrictions via bus led nearly all of our programs to allow parents to be responsible for getting their athletes to both home and away games, he said.

"The most difficult aspect 1965: scramble as there were positive of the job during season two was meeting the requirements of testing every two days for all indoor sports participants, coaches, and game management personnel," Hemenway said.

Martha White

Martha White, catalyst for bus boycott

Martha White, a housekeeper whose refusal to leave the whites-only section of a bus was the catalyst for a 1953 bus boycott in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, died June 5 at a nursing home at the age of 99.

White was on her way home from work on June 15, 1953, when she boarded a city bus and saw just one open seat - in the front row, just behind the driver. Though the seat was in the section reserved for white passengers, White sat, eager to rest after a long day.

The bus driver ordered her to move, but she refused, and she was ultimately kicked off the bus and threatened with arrest. But Baton Rouge had recently passed an ordinance desegregating the buses, so White had broken no city laws.

In the aftermath of the incident, the city's bus drivers went on strike and demanded the city overturn the desegregation ordinance, which they did. In response, the city's Black community organized a bus

Jim Grant, first Black pitcher to win 20 games

Jim "Mudcat" Grant, a Major League Baseball player who was the first Black pitcher to win 20 games in a season in the American League, died June 11 in Los Angeles at the age of 85.

After playing in the minor leagues for four seasons, Grant made his MLB debut with the Cleveland Indians in 1958. In 1964, he was traded to the Minnesota Twins, where he would have some of the best years of his career.

It was the following season when Grant became the first Black pitcher in the American League to win 20 games - Don Newcombe had been the first to do so in the National League, in

In that same season, Grant became the first Black pitcher in the American League to win a World Series game, though the Twins lost the series to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Grant was with the Twins until 1967, then played for several other teams before his 1971 retirement. He was an All-Star in 1963 and 1965.

In later years, Grant was the Publicity Director for the North American Softball League as well as a broadcaster and a baseball historian. He wrote the 2007 book "The Black Aces, Baseball's Only African-American Twenty-Game Winners," focusing on the 15 "Black Aces" who won more than 20 games in a season.

Negishi shared the 2010 Nobel Prize in Chemistry with two other scientists, all of whom worked to create new organic molecules by linking carbon atoms in a technique known as palladiumcatalyzed cross coupling.

Negishi spent decades working on the technology, decades which has been used to make drugs including naproxen. It is also key to the OLED technology that has improved television and computer screens.

The Nobel committee called his work "great art in a test tube."

A native of China who was raised in Japan, Negishi studied in the U.S. and spent many years teaching at Purdue University.

Lisa Banes, film and TV actress

Lisa Banes, an actress known for roles in movies including "Gone Girl" and "Cocktail," died June 14 at Mount Sinai Morningside Hospital in New York City after a traffic accident at the age of 65.

"Cocktail" (1988) was one of Banes' earliest films; she played Bonnie, who was involved in a love triangle with Tom Cruise's character.

In "Gone Girl" (2014), she was Marybeth Elliott, mother of Rosamund Pike's main character.

In between, Banes appeared in a number of movies and TV shows, as well as on Broadway. She had recurring TV roles on "The King of Queens," "Six Feet Under," "Nashville," and "One Life to Live," as well as starring in the TV film "Mother, May I Sleep

Banes also made notable guest appearances on TV shows including "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine," "NYPD Blue," "Once Upon a Time," "Desperate Housewives," and "Them.'

O'Leary was working as a ski instructor for Colorado's Winter Park Resort in 1970 when he volunteered to teach a group of children with amputations to ski. The 23 kids were visiting from Children's Hospital in Denver, and O'Leary was the only ski instructor willing to take them under his wing and imagine how he could help them succeed on the slopes.

O'Leary was inspired to create new equipment for skiers with disabilities, and the National Sports Center for the Disabled was born from his work with them. He was one of the first people to develop an adaptive sports program.

The center now serves thousands of athletes each year in a variety of sports, and it has sent athletes to the Paralympic Games.

Ned Beatty

Ned Beatty, accomplished character actor

Ned Beatty, a character actor known for roles in films including "Deliverance," "Network," and "Superman," died June 13 at his home in Los Angeles at the age of 83.

Beatty's film debut was in the harrowing 1972 classic "Deliverance," playing an Atlanta businessman on a canoe trip with his friends. In one of the movie's most shocking and talked-about scenes, his character was forced to "squeal like a pig" before being sexually assaulted.

Unser's death comes just six weeks after his father's death from natural causes.

Ernie Lively, actor and father of Blake Lively

Ernie Lively, an actor known for movies including "The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants," and the father of actress Blake Lively, died June 3 in Los Angeles of cardiac complications at the age of 74.

Lively's credits as a character actor date back to the 1970s, beginning with TV roles on shows including "The Waltons" and "The Dukes of Hazzard."

He appeared in movies including "Turner & Hooch," "Air America," "Passenger 57," "and "The Beverly Hillbillies" and on popular TV shows like "The X-Files," "That '70s Show," and "The West Wing."

In 2005, he played the father of his daughter Blake's character "The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants," and he returned for its 2008 sequel. Lively was also a director, directing Blake in her film debut, "Sandman."

A father of five, he influenced Beatty earned an Oscar all of his children as they pursued acting careers. Lively was also a U.S. Marine Corps veteran of the Vietnam War.

Jessica Morris, nonprofit founder

Jessica Morris, the founder of Our Brain Bank, a nonprofit organization that provides support for those glioblastoma, died June 8 at her home in Brooklyn, New York of glioblastoma at the age of 57.

Morris was diagnosed with glioblastoma in 2016. She quickly became frustrated at the lack of psychological support for patients diagnosed with the aggressive cancer.

Knowing her diagnosis was terminal - the odds of living more than 18 months past a glioblastoma diagnosis are very low - Morris sought out support and, when she didn't find what she needed, she created it.

She founded Our Brain Bank, which offers a network for glioblastoma sufferers that includes that psychological support but also goes beyond Morris brought doctors treatments. And through Our Brain Bank, she smoothed the way for glioblastoma patients to receive second opinions and to enroll in clinical trials.

Morris beat the odds and survived more than five years after her diagnosis, which only about five percent of glioblastoma patients do.

John Gabriel

John Gabriel, 'Ryan's Hope' actor

John Gabriel, an actor best known for his Emmy-nominated performance as Dr. Seneca Beaulac in "Ryan's Hope," died this month at age 90.

Gabriel had early roles in movies including "The Young Lions" and "South Pacific" and TV shows including "Hawaiian Eye," "The Untouchables," and "77 Sunset Strip."

In 1963, he was cast as the Professor in the pilot episode of "Gilligan's Island," but the role was recast before the TV show began airing.

He had recurring roles in "Love of Life," "General Hospital," and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" before landing his most recognizable role. Gabriel starred as the controlling Dr. Seneca Bealuac in "Ryan's Hope" from 1975 to 1988 and again from 1988 to 1989. In 1980, he was nominated for an Emmy Award for his performance.

In later years, Gabriel had recurring roles on "Kate & Allie," "Generations," and "Days of Our Lives." He was the producer of "The Charles Grodin Show" and also had a singing career.

Jack Weinstein, federal judge

Jack B. Weinstein, a federal judge in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York, who presided over notable cases, died June 15 at his home in Great Neck, New York at the age of 99.

He taught at Columbia - his students included Ruth Bader Ginsburg - and served as Nassau County attorney before being appointed as a federal judge in Weinstein presided over cases including a class action suit over Agent Orange, the herbicide used in the Vietnam War that is believed to have caused health problems in the military veterans who were exposed to it. Weinstein approved a settlement requiring manufacturers to pay up on the veterans' claims.

Weinstein's other notable rulings included a 1999 verdict holding handgun manufacturers liable in shootings. Another offered a path for smokers to sue tobacco companies. Both were overturned on appeal.

Stop calling it a choice: Biological factors drive homosexuality

By Bill Sullivan

Across cultures, 2% to 10% of people report having same-sex relations. In the U.S., 1% to 2.2% of women and men, respectively, identify as gay. Despite these numbers, many people still consider homosexual behavior to be an anomalous choice. However, biologists have documented homosexual behavior in more than 450 species, arguing that same-sex behavior is not an unnatural choice, and may in fact play a vital role within populations.

In a 2019 issue of Science magazine, geneticist Andrea Ganna at the Broad Institute of MIT and Harvard, and colleagues, described the largest survey to date for genes associated with same-sex behavior. By analyzing the DNA of nearly half a million people from the U.S. and the U.K., they concluded that genes account for between 8% and 25% of same-sex

Numerous studies have established that sex is not just male or female. Rather, it is a continuum that emerges from a person's genetic makeup. Nonetheless, misconceptions persist that same-sex attraction is a choice that warrants condemnation or conversion, and leads to discrimination

I am a molecular biologist and am interested in this new study as it further illuminates the genetic contribution to human behavior. Ás the author of the book, "Pleased to Meet Me: Genes, Germs, and the Curious Forces That Make Us Who We Are," I have done extensive research into the biological forces that conspire to shape human personality and behavior, including the factors influencing sexual attraction.

The hunt for 'gay genes'

The new finding is consistent with multiple earlier studies of twins that indicated same-sex attraction is a heritable trait.

The 2019 study is the latest in a hunt for "gay genes" that began in 1993, when Dean Hamer linked male homosexuality to a section of the X chromosome. As the ease and affordability of genome sequencing increased, additional gene candidates have emerged with potential links to homosexual behavior. So-called genome-wide association studies identified a gene called SLITRK6, which is active in a brain region called the diencephalon that differs in size between people who are homosexual or heterosexual.

Genetic studies in mice have uncovered additional gene candidates that could influence sexual preference. A 2010 study linked sexual preference to a gene called fucose mutarotase. When the gene was deleted in female mice, they were attracted to female odors and preferred to mount females rather than males.

Other studies have shown that disruption of a gene called TRPC2 can cause female mice to act like males. Male mice lacking TRPC2 no longer display male-male aggression, and they initiate sexual behaviors toward both males and females. Expressed in the brain, TRPC2 functions in the recognition of pheromones, chemicals that are released by one member of a species to elicit a response in another.

With multiple gene candidates being linked to homosexuality, it seemed highly unlikely that a single "gay" gene exists. This idea is further supported by the new study, which identified five new genetic loci (fixed positions on chromosomes) correlating with same-sex activity: two that appeared in men and women, two only in men, and one only in women.

How might these genes influence same-sex behavior?

How the rainbow flag became a symbol of LGBTQ pride of the Stonewall riots, which took place in New York City in June 1969. During Pride Month, it is not uncommon to see the rainbow flag being proudly displayed as a symbol for the LGBTQ rights movement. But how did that flag become a symbol of LGBTQ pride?

It goes back to 1978, when the artist Gilbert Baker, an openly gay man and a drag queen, designed the first rainbow flag. Baker later revealed that he was urged by Harvey Milk, one of the first openly gay elected officials in the U.S., to create a symbol of pride for the gay community.

Baker decided to make that symbol a flag because he saw flags as the most powerful symbol of pride. As he later said in an interview, "Our job as gay people was to come out, to be visible, to live in the truth, as I say, to get out of the lie. A flag really fit that mission, because that's a way of proclaiming your visibility or saying, 'This is who I am!'"

Baker saw the rainbow as a natural flag from the sky, so he adopted eight colors for the stripes, each color with its own meaning (hot pink for sex, red for life, orange for healing, yellow

June has long been recognized as LGBTQ Pride Month, in honor for sunlight, green for nature, turquoise for art, indigo for harmony,

The first versions of the rainbow flag were flown on June 25, 1978, for the San Francisco Gay Freedom Day parade. Baker and a team of volunteers had made them by hand, and now he wanted to mass-produce the flag for consumption by all. However, because of production issues, the pink and turquoise stripes were removed and indigo was replaced by basic blue, which resulted in the contemporary six-striped flag (red, orange, yellow, green, blue, and violet). Today this is the most common variant of the rainbow flag, with the red stripe on top, as in a natural rainbow. The various colors came to reflect both the immense diversity and the unity of the LGBTQ

It was not until 1994 that the rainbow flag was truly established as the symbol for LGBTQ pride. That year Baker made a mile-long version for the 25th anniversary of the Stonewall riots. Now the rainbow flag is an international symbol for LGBTQ pride and can be seen flying proudly, during both the promising times and the difficult ones, all around the world.

Ganna's study are associated with olfactory systems, a finding that has concept of kin selection, whereby people work to ensure the passage parallels to the work in mice. Ganna's group found other gene variants that may be linked with sex hormone regulation, which other scientists have previously suggested plays a large role in shaping the brain in ways that influence sexual behavior.

Males with a genetic condition called androgen insensitivity syndrome can develop female genitalia and are usually brought up as girls, despite being genetically male - with an X and Y chromosome and they are attracted to men. This suggests that testosterone is needed to "masculinize" a prenatal brain; if that doesn't happen, the child will

Similarly, girls who have a genetic condition called congenital adrenal hyperplasia are exposed to unusually high levels of male hormones like testosterone while in the womb, which may masculinize their brain and increase the odds of lesbianism.

It's also possible that hormonal shifts during pregnancy could affect how a fetus' brain is configured. In rats, manipulation of hormones during pregnancy produces offspring that exhibit homosexual behavior.

Why does homosexual behavior exist?

Several hypotheses have been advanced to explain how homosexuality I find it intriguing that some of the genes from men identified in can be beneficial in perpetuating familial genes. One idea involves the of their family's genes into subsequent generations. Gay uncles and aunts, for example, are "helpers in the nest" that help raise other family members' children to nurture the family tree.

Another idea suggests that homosexuality is a "trade-off trait." For example, certain genes in women help increase their fertility, but if these genes are expressed in a male, they predispose him toward homosexuality.

Sexual behavior is widely diverse and governed by sophisticated mechanisms throughout the animal kingdom. As with other complex behaviors, it is not possible to predict sexuality by gazing into a DNA sequence as if it were a crystal ball. Such behaviors emerge from constellations of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of genes, and how they are regulated by the environment.

While there is no single "gay gene," there is overwhelming evidence of a biological basis for sexual orientation that is programmed into the brain before birth based on a mix of genetics and prenatal conditions, none of which the fetus chooses.

Draft registration for women? The Supreme Court rightly stays silent

By Steve Chapman

To everything there is a season, and in a season when the Supreme Court will decide many important questions, the justices have recognized an important truth: For major constitutional issues, there is a time to act, and there is a time to do nothing.

They followed this wisdom in declining to hear a lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of requiring only men to register for the military draft. You may ask: What draft? The justices may have asked themselves the same question.

Aware that military conscription hasn't happened since 1973 — a year after Amy Coney Barrett, the newest justice, was born — they understand that there is no urgency about resolving a question that is important in principle but moot in practice.

Despite the absence of a draft, all males from age 18 to 25, including noncitizens, have to register with the Selective Service System — just in case the government should one day want to invite them to boot camp.

Anyone who doesn't comply is ineligible for federal student aid, federally funded job training and, in the case of foreigners, U.S. citizenship. In some states, failure to register means you can't attend a public university or get a driver's license. Failing to register is a felony, but not really: No one has been prosecuted since 1986.

In 1981, the court said excluding women was fine because they couldn't serve in combat. But since then, women have been admitted to every role the military has. As Defense Secretary Ashton Carter announced in 2015, "They'll be allowed to drive tanks, fire mortars and lead infantry soldiers into combat." There are female fighter pilots, ship commanders and paratroopers.

The basis for the 1981 decision has disappeared. Those challenging the law, a group called the National Coalition for Men, clearly have the better of the argument. In recent decades, the court has repeatedly ruled that the constitutional mandate of equal protection requires women and men to be treated the same.

Discrimination against women is not allowed. The justices ordered the Virginia Military Institute, a public college that had been all-male since its founding in 1839, to admit women. Nor is discrimination in favor of women allowed: The court also said that Mississippi University for Women, the first public women's college in America, had to admit men to its nursing school.

It's safe to assume that even a court loaded with conservatives would find it hard to justify a system that obligates one sex while sparing the other. In time, the government will have to choose between making everyone register and making no one register.

But that doesn't mean the court should butt in now. The burden on men is modest, and it would not be lighter if women were also forced to shoulder it. The chance of actual conscription, in our modern era of hightech warfare, is too remote to warrant immediate reform.

Besides, as Justice Sonia Sotomayor noted in a statement explaining Steve Chapman blogs for the Chicago Tribune. the decision not to hear the case (joined by Stephen Breyer and Brett Kavanaugh), Congress may very well address the issue itself.

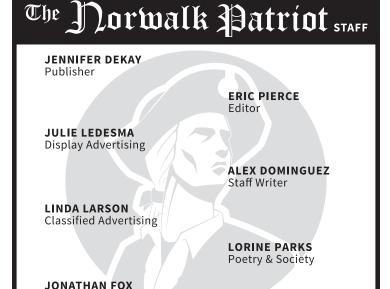

A congressionally created commission issued a report last year that said, "The time is right to extend Selective Service System registration to include men and women." The Biden administration asked the court to stand down, giving Congress time to decide whether to enact that change.

Consider this unlikely spectacle: A Democratic administration asked the court not to issue a decision that would align with its own preferences, and liberal justices declined to consider a case in which they would probably prevail. This deference to the other branches of government reflects an approach commonly championed by conservatives.

Supporters of gender equality might wish to achieve this victory immediately. But there are good reasons to commend the court and the administration for their caution. Decisions by elected representatives generally win greater public acceptance than decrees by judges.

Judicial abstinence isn't likely to preserve the male-only registration system in the end. No one seriously denies that men and women deserve the same opportunities and duties, except in rare circumstances. If Congress refuses to uphold that principle, the court will have plenty of chances to do so.

There are times when the court has to settle an issue. But wise justices also know when to say: "You know what? We're not needed here.

Problems with critical race theory

Dear Editor:

Regarding the editorial "Truth About Critical Race Theory, (6/10/21). Susan Estrich is intent on avoiding the real reasons so many reasonable people disagree with critical race theory.

Vice President Mike Pence did not say what he said to "reclaim his stake to Donald Trump's base." This claim by Ms. Estrich is simply an effort to invalidate anything Vice President Pence has to say, or anyone else for that matter.

Critical race theory looks first at a person's race, and then maybe who the individual is - unless you are white, in which case there is a forgone conclusion that you are hopeless. Likewise, if you are a successful black, brown, or any other skin color person (except for white), and you do not believe in this race-based view, you are also prejudged as damaged beyond repair.

It appears their strategy is "divide (by race) and conquer. First on the agenda is to conquer the whites, by far the largest group by race in the United States. After that it will be everyone else who does not agree with their agenda, black, brown, yellow, green or purple it doesn't matter. Likely the same divide by race strategy will be used

Getting to the point, critical race theory is a modern-day rationalization of blatant racial prejudice at its worst. Only an academic suffering hypoxia in their lofty ivory tower could conjure up such an abomination. This is what has so many people upset, including Vice President Pence, and me.

28th Amendment

Every day in my mail are 5-10 letters demanding help of some kind and donations of money. I cannot help everyone, and I don't intend to try.

It is my decision to concentrate on one, the most important (to me), the 28th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States: The limit of terms for Congress.

I was put in charge of the City of Downey and the 40th area of the state of California. It was with great pride and pleasure that I accepted this appointment.

I have had many letters from Congressmen offering their help. I am donating money for this one election.

The latest and most important said that he had introduced legislation into Congress and would have the members vote in public, on TV. So, we're started. We don't have to have 100%. We just need 2/3 of the House and 2/3 of the Senate, then it goes to the states for

I am 99 years old. My birthday is July 1, and I will be 100 years old. Wouldn't this 28th amendment be a terrific birthday present?

Lessons my dad taught me

By Gail Earl Contributor

I know that I have written many stories about my dad; how he was the most warm-hearted, tender, amazing man I have ever met.

I'd also like to tell you about how fun he was too. My entire life was filled with his adventures and the special ways he shared them with his kids. Here are just a few of my favorite everyday memories.

"STILTS." Dad built a pair of stilts for my best girlfriend and myself. They were made from 2 x 4's with crutch tips on the bottom. They were very tall and we had days and days of fun racing up and down the street with them.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me to be adventuresome.

"WATERMELON SEEDS." Dad loved to entertain us and make us laugh. He was a pro at shooting watermelon seeds across the yard and hitting a target. He was so accurate, he would just tell us what he was aiming for and a spit second later, the seed would be sitting

I'll never forget the look on my sister's face when he shot one across a picnic table and it landed right in the middle of my sister's forehead. We all knew this was no accident!

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me to enjoy being silly.

"PVC." My dad loved PVC. He made many everyday inventions. If anything needed to be made or modified, he found a way to include PVC. He made many Christmas lawn decorations with millions of lights strung in and around the PVC.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me to think outside the box.

"LIBRARIES." Dad took us to the library on Saturday mornings. I'll never forget the happy comfort I felt sitting on his lap and sharing books.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me about the many adventures awaiting just inside a book.

"CLACKERS." Dad had a game that he called "Clackers." All it was was each of us running to get an empty soda can, laying it flat on the ground, and smashing our foot down (in tennis shoes) on top of

When you smashed it, the can would wrap around the bottom of our shoe and hold in place. Then there would be a mad scramble to the corner and back to the porch. As you ran, the cans made this "clickity-clacking" sound, thus the name of the game.

At any given moment, Dad would yell "Clackers!" and everyone would run for a can. This game went right through my childhood.

When I was 17, my family and I were at a hotel in Pismo Beach. Dad yelled "Clacker!" and without skipping a beat, the game was on. Dad and I were circling the pool so many times and laughing so hard we were quite surprised to see that the manager had been called to make us quiet down.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me the value of laughter.

"FLASHLIGHTS." Dad loved flashlights. He was just fascinated with them. Every time he went to the store, he'd buy another one.

Every night after dinner, the whole family would go for a walk around the block. Everyone had to have their own flashlight. This tradition was a family favorite and continues today with his children, grandchildren and great grandchildren.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me the value of tradition.

"WHISTLES." My dad loved to whistle. It was a constant around my house and all through his life. It just made him happy. He even made a family whistle that was used very often when we were trying to locate one of the other family members.

I have always been a whistler and it, too, puts me in a happy

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me not to be afraid to express my

"HANKY HAT." My dad always had a neatly-ironed white handkerchief in his pocket. It never stopped amusing us kids to see him pull it from his pocket, tie little knots in each corner, and plunk it down on his scalp to make a perfectly adequate hat to protect him

We have many photos of him at picnics, parks and many other occasions with his "hank hat" on.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me to be inventive.

Dad taught me to understand that the prize in life is one's own happiness. He taught me to have a happy life and not be stifled by what anyone else might be thinking. He taught me to be memorable. He taught me to celebrate being funny. He taught me to celebrate me being me.

Don and Frances Howorth lived a few houses west of us on Gleason Street in East L.A. They had one child, Don Jr. (nicknamed Dickie). You never would have guessed that this skinny boy would achieve one title after another in the

If you grew up in the 50's, you'll recall opening a comic book and seeing a 97-pound weakling at the beach, having sand kicked in his face by a muscular or herculean man, known to us as Charles Atlas. That weakling could have been Don Jr., as could the herculean man years later when Don's manly strength and muscular development earned him one prestigious title after another in the bodybuilding world.

Mom and Dad and the Howorth's were very close friends; they went on outings together, they always attended the Benson Family Reunion, and they even went on a trip to Michigan together to visit Don Sr.'s parents. They were friends right to the end.

They moved to San Gabriel in 1941, but they always came back to visit or to play cards and dominoes. Frances always wanted a girl, so she took me under her wing, and I stayed with them for a week during summer vacations.

Dickie was four years older than I, and was always gone with his friends who lived in the area.

Dickie (now Don) went to Mark Keppel High School in Alhambra. He participated in gymnastics and became a standout in free exercise, high bar, and tumbling. Looking back, I do recall seeing his gym equipment in their

He met Steve Reeves at a gym in 1956 and was inspired by his aspirations in bodybuilding. He then joined the gym and started his bodybuilding regimen and, in time, became known as one of the original gurus or classic bodybuilders of the Golden Era.

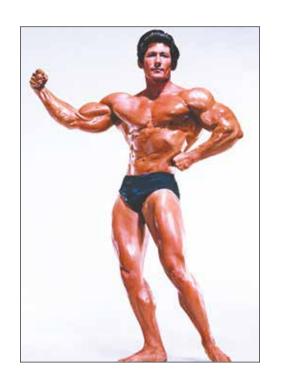

Born in 1935, he won the title of Mr. Los Angeles in 1962. He went on to become Mr. California in 1963 and, after competing three times, he won the title of Mr. America in 1967.

It was total commitment and sacrifice to his workout that helped him become so legendary. His shoulder to waist ratio earned him the title of "The Then movie offers came along. He appeared in a television version of "The Wild, Wild West", and a few others. He was photographed with Mickey Hargitay (who was married to Jayne Mansfield), and he gave training advice to Arnold Schwarzenegger.

Thinking back over the years and particularly if you lived on Gleason Street, you would find it very difficult to believe that the skinny kid of the block achieved title after title and became legendary long before he was renowned worldwide as Mr. America.

Whittier teens gain national prominence for chess playing

■ A group of Whittier teens discovered chess during quarantine. Now they are some of the nation's best.

WHITTIER - When Whittier High School senior Isabel Luna joined the school's Chess Club, she was looking to challenge herself and connect with her peers in a way that went beyond Zoom conferencing. At first intimidated by what she perceived was a male-dominated sport, Luna learned that chess can be mastered with patience and dedication.

Quarantining at home, Luna discovered correspondence chess, which is typically played through the postal system or email. Through correspondence chess, Luna has sharpened her skills in the comfort of her home, gained new friends and exercised her brain. In the process, Luna has emerged as one of the topranked female correspondence chess players in the United correspondence program.

Downey's fiscal budget dips $13 million from last year

■ Downey's 2021-22 budget reflects a sluggish economy still recovering from the pandemic.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY – Most of Downey's general fund spending will go towards police next fiscal year, according to a budget approved by the City Council on Monday.

Council members presented with the city's anticipated FY 2020-21 revenues and expenditures during a special meeting last week.

On Monday, the City Council approved a balanced $228.9 million spending plan, split between $93 million in general funds and $135 million in other funding: a roughly $13 million or 5.69% decrease from the previous

In fact, spending is down almost unanimously across the board in all departments, except for public works, which saw a 4%

Still, the city is projecting $93.8 million in general fund expenditures, a majority of which - around 66% - will be spent on public safety.

More than $37 million (40%) will be spent on police. Fire will receive the next largest allocation, with over $24 million (26%).

A majority of the city's general fund revenues will come from property and sales taxes, approximately $31.9 million (34%) and $30.4 million (32%) respectively.

Overall, general revenues declined more than $13 million, or 12%, from last year.

The proposed budget also accounted for a handful of staffing changes. Notably, Community

Director Aldo Development Schindler was formally reclassed to deputy city manager.

The end of the after-school ASPIRE program – which the city partnered with Downey Unified School District on – also resulted in three full-time staff reductions, and the transfer of two parks and recreation program coordinators from fund ASPIRE to parks and recreation that the financial detriment to programming. The cost of those positions was offset by the elimination of seven part-time

In total, there are 425 fulltime personnel currently staffed by the city.

Downey will end the current fiscal year with an estimated $27,564,834 in reserves. City officials are anticipating to finish the upcoming fiscal year at $27,569,928; netting just under $5,100 after projected revenues and spending.

As the state prepares to reopen this week, officials announced the city due to COVID-19 was not as large as initially anticipated.

Officials originally had expected to lose over $12.7 million in revenue over FY 2019-20 and FY 2020-21 but ultimately only lost $7.9 million, which will be subsidized by the federal government through the American Rescue Plan Act.

"Another hurdle that we had to get over was the monitoring and controlling of spectators to meet L.A. County and district restrictions. For each event, both outdoor and indoor, we required each of our programs and all visiting opponents to provide us with a list of only household members that would be allowed to attend our events. "We were all so happy that we were going to be able to play whatever that looked like. From that moment on we were in hyper speed. We completed 14 sports in two and a half months. It was crazy, stressful, aggravating, frustrating, and rewarding all at the same time. To see the looks on the kids' faces when they were able to practice and play was priceless.

"At La Mirada, we had added stress of not having facilities available as no football or soccer field, gym or track was available. We only had access to softball and baseball fields. So having to coordinate transportation to other facilities for my teams and work out times for practices and games with other schools added to the madness."

Norwalk doubles the size of Public Safety Commission

NORWALK - Norwalk City Council approved the addition of five new members to the city's Public Safety Commission at its meeting

Currently, the commission is comprised of five members, one representing each council member. They are Gerard Bueno, Bertha representative, bringing the total number of commissioners to 10.

Appointments may be made at the next regular council meeting scheduled for July 6. Applications are available on the city's website or by request from the City Clerk's Department.

The decision comes after the council expressed a desire for more representation in consideration to the size of the community's month at 6 p.m. inside the council chambers at City Hall

The commission advises the City Council regarding public safety problems in the community, including (but not limited to) earthquake and disaster preparedness, emergency management, street crossing, child abuse and neighborhood watch.
