Norwalk proclaims Aug. 7

COVID-19 Awareness Day

Project Roomkey closes in Norwalk

Residents living at the Saddleback Hotel have been relocated, officials said.

NORWALK - The City of Norwalk was informed Wednesday that the Project Roomkey (PRK) site located at the Saddleback Hotel was officially closed.

L.A. County operated program transitioned all the participants out of the Norwalk hotel location to other shelters. The site in Norwalk had been in operation since May 7, 2020.

Project Roomkey was a state-initiated program that temporarily housed people temporarily people experiencing homelessness who were not COVID-19 positive or symptomatic but were vulnerable to complications associated with the virus.

In March 2020, due to the COVID-19 pandemic, Governor Newsom declared a state of emergency. He cited several government codes that gave him the emergency authority to act. He particularly cited section 8627, which declares that during a state of emergency, the governor has complete authority over all state agencies, the right to exercise police powers, and the ability to issue and enforce orders "as he deems necessary.'

Under standard conditions, taking authority as the governor did, may have resulted in a conflict with other government agencies. However, during a state of emergency, though controversial, it was considered by many within the powers of the governor to exercise such powers.

In April 2020, Los Angeles County targeted the Saddleback Hotel to house homeless residents considered vulnerable to the coronavirus under these powers. The county originally entered into an occupancy agreement with the hotel for a 3-month period. with options to extend during the pandemic, which they did until its closure. This decision to exercise these emergency powers was made with no prior authorization from Norwalk officials. In response, the Norwalk City Council made several attempts to address these issues with both state and county officials. In April 2020, the City Council voted unanimously to impose a temporary ban to prevent motel conversions for Project Roomkey without prior city approval. In July 2020, the City Council unanimously passed an emergency ordinance that required any public agency to consult with the City prior to placing a homeless or COVID-19 facility in Norwalk. As a result, the county sued the city and in April 2020 a judge issued a temporary restraining order directing Norwalk to comply with the state as this program to shelter the homeless during the pandemic outweighed any negative impacts the city may suffer. The City of Norwalk has always been a willing participant in doing its fair share in its fight against homelessness. "Our city is a leader on implementing solutions for residents experiencing homelessness in our region," said Mayor Jennifer Perez. "We wanted to ensure that any homeless program operating in our city would provide adequate services and place safety parameters to mitigate any issues that could potentially affect residents in the area." The city's own homelessness taskforce has directly contributed to the rapid decrease in the most recent homeless counts by the Los Angeles Homeless Services Authority. The City Council made efforts to work directly with the county to ensure the program would not negatively impact Norwalk residents or businesses. The City looks forward to the Saddleback Hotel resuming its operation as a hotel

■ In its first in-person meeting since the start of the pandemic, the Norwalk City Council discussed COVID-19.

NORWALK – Norwalk city council held their first in-person meeting since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic at city hall on Tuesday.

A majority of the meeting was dedicated to addressing the COVID-19 pandemic, which has claimed 377 lives in Norwalk. In response to the pandemic, the council moved to declare Aug. 7, 2021, as COVID-19 awareness day in the city of Norwalk.

They also took a moment to encourage anyone who is eligible to take the COVID-19 vaccine to get vaccinated. Council also announced that the vaccination site at the Norwalk Arts and Sports Complex is open for walkin vaccinations Tuesday - Sunday from 11 am to 6 pm.

City council also recognized Norwalk resident Marlene Bojorquez for her "Yellow Heart Memorial," which she created on her front lawn for the victims of the virus after she lost her father to the pandemic.

"I never got to say goodbye to my dad. I got to say goodbye on facetime after he passed away," the Norwalk resident said. "So many other people are in the same situation. They're stuck in time because they never got to say goodbye to their loved ones."

Bojorquez announced that the first "Walk to Remember March" will be held on Aug. 7 to commemorate COVID-19 awareness day in the city. It will begin behind the Norwalk AMC at 9:45 am.

A teary Bojorquez joined the meeting via Zoom, and explained that there are thousands of "Yellow Heart Memorials" across the nation and in other countries.

Councilman Rick Ramirez also suggested creating a permanent COVID-19 memorial in the city, similar to the 9/11 memorial.

During the meeting the council discussed the "American Rescue Plan" which President Joe Biden passed on March 11. The plan would allocate $28 million to the city over a two year period.

The money would potentially go towards small business, low-income neighborhoods, affordable recreation and housing. Council moved to revisit the plan on Aug.17 in order to get approval and clarification from the treasury on where the funds can be allocated.

Public Safety Lieutenant Eric Wosick updated the council on the Emergency Operations Center response to the pandemic.

Wosick addressed that COVID cases have dramatically increased over the last month. He also noted that hospitalizations from the virus have increased as well.

"We need to be safe and continue to practice the precautions that were put in place," said Wosick.

"It's not over, and we are all still at risk.'

Wosick said the cause of the Environmental rise in cases is from California's reopening on June 15, which eliminated social distancing and the statewide mask mandate. He acknowledged that Norwalk's continued wearing a mask indoors did help education. to stop the spread.

the two COVID cases found in the Norwalk recreation department occurs during the evening, and on July 17 and July 21 during his update.

After meeting, the Wosick stated that Norwalk conducted contact tracing and communicated with county public health to ensure staff and public health.

The council also took time to congratulate the 2021

The council also heard The lieutenant did not address complaints from the community regarding the street-racing that complaints about the amount of traffic in residential areas. Council asked that community members reach out to them to further help them with their issue.

Sanchez pushes for residential solar tax credits

NORWALK - Rep. Linda Sanchez introduced legislation last week that would extend tax credits to residential homeowners who install solar panels.

The bill, formally known as the Residential Solar Opportunity Act, would give homeowners the same tax credits as those given to businesses and corporations who invest in solar.

Homeowners play a critical role in supplying our electric grid with the renewable energy we need to eliminate carbon emissions from our economy and combat climate change," said Sanchez.

'As we prepare to make major investments in renewable energy, we must ensure that homeowners who want to reduce their carbon footprint have access to the same resources as corporations. This legislation would provide the same long-term value of the residential solar energy credit as the corporate solar investment tax credit under current law.

Co-sponsors of the bill include Democratic Congress members Terri Sewell of Alabama and Jimmy Gomez of Los Angeles.

Half of L.A. County

■ A study by UCLA and USC researchers found that many renters are becoming increasingly in debt.

NORWALK - In a new survey of Los Angeles County renters, 49% of households reported that they were unable to pay all of their rent during the pandemic.

The study, by researchers from UCLA and the University of Southern California, found the median amount renters owe their landlords is $2,800. That suggests that countywide, tenants owe landlords upwards of $3 billion.

The findings are from one of a pair of surveys of 1,000 renters each — one conducted in July 2020, which focused on renters' ability to pay rent in the short term, and another in March 2021, asking about their ability to pay over the entirety of the pandemic.

The preliminary results show that in both surveys, about 7% of renters missed a full rent payment in at least one of the three months before the study was conducted. But by the time the second survey was conducted, the share of renters paying less than the full amount to a landlord at least once during the crisis had almost doubled to 31%, up from 17% in July 2020.

The study was co-authored Michael Manville, Paavo Monkkonen and Michael Lens, associate professors at the UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs; and Richard Green, director of the USC Lusk Center for Real Estate.

slight majority of Α respondents reported paying their rent on time and in full, and many of those who owe rent said they were behind by less than a month. But other renters are emerging from the COVID-19 emergency in a financial hole they will struggle to climb out of on their own, the authors write in a research brief published last week.

Of particular concern is evidence from the surveys that renters' debt rose sharply as the COVID-19 crisis dragged on. Only about 6% of Los Angeles tenants reported using a credit card to pay their rent prior to the pandemic. That figure rose to 19% of respondents in the early days of the emergency, and to 44% in the latest survey.

Also in the 2021 survey, 49% said they turned to friends and family to help them pay rent, 58% dipped into their savings and another 37% reported taking out an emergency or payday loan.

The overall share of renters taking on debt reached 45% in the second survey, up from 32% in the first

Other findings include:

Just over 15% of tenants who were behind on their rent payments in 2020 had been threatened with eviction; that figure increased to 25% in the 2021 survey. Although an eviction moratorium is still in effect in Los Angeles County, tenants can still be threatened with evictions or have evictions initiated against them; a court won't act until the moratorium ends.

Similarly, 6% reported in 2020 that an eviction had been initiated against them. In 2021, that percentage tripled to 18%.

In the 2021 survey, about 68% of all respondents said they had received federal aid during the pandemic, and about 15% reported getting local aid.

California's eviction moratorium will remain in place through at least September, and the brief notes that the state has committed to helping renters pay the back rent they owe.

The problem? The data show that many tenants owe money to people or institutions other than their landlords.

Beware of COVID-19 scams targeting seniors

The COVID-19 pandemic has sparked a spectrum of scams, many specifically targeting older Americans who are concerned about health and finances.

Recently, the Social Security Administration (SSA) spotlighted a scam that claimed benefit payments may be suspended or decreased due to office closures related to the COVID-19

The IRS has also issued similar warnings about coronavirus scams related to stimulus checks, overdue payments, filing extensions and other tax-related topics.

Fake investment opportunities and fraudulent accounts to protect pension funds are also being touted on robocalls. The U.S. Securities and you're familiar with. Scammers use these methods to get you to pick up a call or respond to a text.

Statistics show that if you engage initially, the likelihood increases that you'll also become a victim. If you have caller ID and you don't recognize an incoming phone number, let it go to voicemail for its operations.

Public Works/Water and Power

Approximatelv $36.2 million has been designated for the Public Works/Water and Power Department, which includes engineering, traffic circulation management, pandemic.

The SSA warned against any call, text or letter offering to "maintain regular benefit payments" if a payment is made. Those who have been targeted by this scam should report it to the SSA's Office of the Inspector General.

Exchange Commission cautioned against fake stock offers pitching a nonexistent biotech company developing a vaccine for COVID-19.

Another scam offers investment gains while protecting against losses — a coronavirus twist on a classic phony investment offer.

Seniors should also be aware of pandemic versions of the "grandparent scam," where a scammer poses as a relative (often a grandchild) who is urgently in need of money.

If you receive such a call requesting that you wire money or buy a gift card and call back with the gift card number, hang up and check in with family directly.

Scam calls and texts are often spoofed to appear as if they're coming from a local number or an official government agency, such as the IRS or a company

Some scammers go straight for your wallet, while others are seeking personal information to later use in subsequent scams or to sell to other bad actors.

To protect yourself, heed the Federal Communications Commission's (FCC) tips:

Do not respond to calls or texts from unknown numbers or any others that appear suspicious.

Never share your personal or financial information via email, text messages or over the phone.

Be cautious if you're being pressured to share any information or make a payment immediately.

Remember that government agencies will never call you to ask for personal information or money.

Do not click any links in a text message. If a friend sends you a text with a suspicious link that seems out of character, call the friend to make sure he/she wasn't hacked

Always check out a charity for example, by calling or looking at its actual website — before donating.

Check with the phone company about call-blocking services and apps to filter out suspected spam robocalls.

If you think you've been a victim of a coronavirus scam, contact law enforcement immediately. File coronavirus scam complaints online with the FCC.

Obituaries

Angela Bailey, Olympic silver medal sprinter

Angela Bailey, a Canadian sprinter who won a silver medal at the 1984 Olympics, died July 31 of cancer at age 59.

Bailey was poised to go to her first Olympics in 1980, but after the U.S. boycotted the Summer Olympics in Moscow, she didn't make it to the Olympics until 1984 in Los Angeles. There, she was on the silver medal-winning 4×100 meters relay team.

Later, Bailey set a Canadian women's record in the 100 meter dash in 1987, competing in Budapest with a time of 10.98 seconds. The record still stands in her home country; the women's world record is 10.49 seconds, set by Florence Griffith-Joyner in 1988.

Bailey went on to compete in the 1988 Seoul Olympics. In later years, she was a lawyer in Ontario.

Celina Sotomayor, mother of Supreme Court justice

Celina Baez Sotomayor, a registered nurse who was the mother of Supreme Court Justice Sonia Sotomayor, died July 25 of complications of cancer at the age of 94.

A native of Puerto Rico, Sotomayor served in the Women's Army Corps during World War II, later moving to New York City.

She married after the war but was widowed when their two children were young. Sotomayor raised the children as a single mother, working first as a telephone operator and then earning her nursing degree and working as a registered nurse.

Her children grew up to become a Supreme Court justice and a physician.

Al Rappa, bassist with Bill Haley & His Comets

Al Rappa, a bassist with the pioneering rock and roll group Bill Haley & His Comets, died July 25 at his home in Florida at the age of 94.

Rappa began playing with the Comets in the mid-1950s, recording and touring with them off and on until 1969. He is featured on their recordings including 1959's "Strictly Instrumental."

Rappa became known for antics with his stand-up bass, including standing atop it. He appeared along with the Comets in the movies "Jóvenes y Rebeldes" and "Besito a Papa."

In later years, Rappa formed "Bill Haley's Comets" with other former members of the Comets, touring extensively.

Saginaw Grant, Native American TV actor

Saginaw Grant, a Native American character actor known for roles in TV shows and movies including "Breaking Bad" and "The Lone Ranger," died July 28 at a care facility in Hollywood, Calif., of natural causes at the age of 85.

After serving in the U.S. Marine Corps during the Korean War, Grant began acting in the 1980s.

He became known for appearances on a wide variety of TV shows, including "Nash Bridges," "My Name is Earl," "American Horror Story," "Community," and "Breaking Bad." He had a regular role on the 1993 TV drama "Harts of the West.

On the big screen, Grant played Chief Big Bear in "The Lone Ranger" (2013) and appeared in other movies including "The World's Fastest Indian" (2005).

Grant was also a hereditary chief of the Sac & Fox Nation of Oklahoma, and he was active on the pow wow circuit.

Ron Popeil, TV pitchman and inventor

Ron Popeil, the founder of Ronco and an inventor known for his informercials for products like the Veg-O-Matic and the Pocket Fisherman, died July 28 at a hospital in Los Angeles at the age of 86.

Popeil founded Ronco in 1964, building on what he learned from his father, an inventor and businessman who developed the Veg-O-Matic.

The younger Popeil and Ronco became known for gadgets including the Inside-the-Shell Egg Scrambler, Mr. Microphone, and Smokeless Ashtray. Popeil himself advertised Ronco's products in late-night informercials, perfecting the art of convincing consumers they needed an Electric Food Dehydrator, Cap Snaffler, or Ronco Rhinestone Stud Setter.

Popeil became known for catchphrases: The Showtime Rotisserie made it easy to cook meat so buyers could "Set it and forget it!" In an ad for the Veg-O-Matic, Popeil enthused, "It slices! It dices!" And any product could be made more enticing with "But wait! There's more!"

A pioneer of television sales, Popeil owned Ronco until 2005, when he sold it to spend more time with his family. He continued inventing products after the sale, including the 5 in1 Turkey Fryer & Food Cooking System.

Paul Cotton, singer with the band Poco

Paul Cotton, a guitarist, singer, and songwriter who was a longtime member of Poco, died Aug. 1 at age 78.

Cotton joined Poco in 1970, replacing founding guitarist Jim Messina. He became one of the group's primary songwriters, composing songs including their 1979 hit single "Heart of the Night," which he also sang.

His other compositions for Poco include "Barbados," "Indian Summer," and "Bad Weather." Cotton also sang colead vocals on songs including "Rose of Cimarron."

He remained with Poco for decades, taking a break of a few years in the late 1980s but rejoining and staying with the band until 2010. Cotton also released several solo albums, and prior to joining Poco, he cofounded the band Illinois Speed Press

Cotton's death comes just a few months after the death of Poco bandmate Rusty Young.

Joan Ullyot, runner, physician and activist

Joan Ullyot, a physician and runner whose research and advocacy helped persuade the International Olympics Committee (IOC) to add a women's marathon to the Summer Olympics, died June 19 of cardiac arrest at the age of 80.

Until the mid- to late 20th century, conventional wisdom said that women should not run long distances or engage in vigorous activity. Some said they were simply unable to complete athletic feats like a marathon, while others held that the exercise would cause irreversible damage to their bodies.

Ullyot was among the women who proved this theory wrong, running marathons regularly. And her research showed that she was no outlier: Women could and did run long distances without harming their health.

Ullyot's 1976 book, "Women's Running," made the case for distance running for women, and it became an inspiration to other female runners

She helped the International Runners' Committee make its case to the IOC for a women's marathon to be added to the Olympics.

When they first lobbied for the women's marathon in 1977, the IOC refused. But in 1984, the women's marathon was added to the Los Angeles Olympics.

Ullyot continued running marathons herself, competing until age 56 and running for pleasure later.

Willie Winfield, lead singer of the Harptones

Willie Winfield, the lead vocalist with the 1950s doo-wop group the Harptones, died July 27 at a hospital in Brooklyn, New York of cardiac arrest at the age of 91.

The Harptones were founded in 1953, showcasing Winfield's clear, high singing voice. They performed widely and appeared in the 1956 movie, "Rockin' the Blues.

Though they didn't have major mainstream success, the Harptones were known for songs including "A Sunday Kind of Love," "What Will I Tell My Heart," and "Why Should I Love You?"

Their recording of "Life Is But a Dream" became known to a new audience when it was featured in the 1990 film "GoodFellas."

Winfield remained with the Harptones through decades of personnel changes until his retirement in 2019, at age 89.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

A DEXA scan, also known as a bone mineral density scan, is a useful, easy, and inexpensive imaging test that measures bone density. DEXA stands for "dual-energy X-ray absorptiometry," and uses very low levels of x-rays. It provides useful details about bone loss, and the risk for osteoporosis and bone fractures.

Osteoporosis literally means 'porous bone." Brittle bones lead to a higher risk of having a bone fracture. As we age, our bones lose thickness and strength; they get weaker and break more easily. Osteoporosis results when we lose bone faster than our body can create new bone tissue. It is seen most often in postmenopausal women, and some don't realize that they have osteoporosis until after a bone breaks.

How does the DEXA scan work? You will lie on a special x-ray table, and be carefully positioned. As the arm of the DEXA machine passes over the body, it uses two different x-ray beams, which emit very low levels of radiation

The scanner translates bone density measurement data into pictures and graphs. Bone appears white, and fat and muscle appear as shadows in the background.

The DEXA scan comes up with a bone score. The convention is that normal bone is equal to that of a typical 30-year-old woman, with an assigned score of o

The range of normal bone is from 0 to -1.0. A score between -1.0 and -2.5 is labeled as osteopenia, meaning that the bone mass is low.

Many people, including those who are slender and active, fall into this category. Osteopenia will not necessarily progress to osteoporosis. However, if there are other risk factors for fracture, such a person might still be a candidate for an osteoporosis medication.

Finally, a score of -2.5 or more is considered to be osteoporosis.

DEXA scans are also used to track bone health and to monitor responses to treatment. They can be used to evaluate body composition, such as the proportion of fat to muscle mass.

Who should get a DEXA scan? Typically, scanning is performed on women and, depending on risk factors, may begin for some after age 50.

Risk factors include a history of broken bones, long-term steroid use, a family history of osteoporosis, the use of certain cancer drugs, and the use of organ transplant medications.

Those with rheumatoid arthritis, lupus, diabetes, or liver and kidney disease may be at a higher risk of developing osteoporosis. Petite, thin women with fair complexions are at higher risk, as are smokers and those who consume high levels of caffeine.

Even without other risk factors, the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force recommends DEXA scans for all women who are 65 and older.

Subject to the presence of these risk factors, Medicare may cover DEXA scans every two years, with private insurance companies usually following suit. You and your physician can consider all of these risk factors when deciding whether to have a DEXA scan.

If a DEXA scan leads to a diagnosis of osteopenia or osteoporosis, your doctor may suggest treatments including weight-bearing exercise, calcium and vitamin D supplements, and a variety of prescription medications.

Live theater and music return to Rio Hondo College

WHITTIER - Live theater is returning to Rio Hondo College, which will stage and livestream two online performances of the Broadway musical "Working," at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 6 and Saturday, Aug. 7.

"Working" is a series of vignettes telling the stories of everyday Americans, in their own words, with professions ranging from steelworker to corporate executive. Based on a book written by oral historian Studs Terkel and developed for the stage by lyricist and composer Stephen Schwartz, the musical debuted on Broadway in 1978. A 2012 revival of "Working" added two new songs written by Lin-Manuel Miranda, which will be included in the College's production.

"We are proud to bring back live theater this summer," Rio Hondo College theater professor and "Working" director William Korf said. "We feel 'Working' is a great, uplifting musical that will resonate with our audiences with its themes of perseverance and pride."

Korf, who has dealt with scores of challenges staging live performances in his 34 years at Rio Hondo, said he is excited to overcome the technological obstacles of a livestreamed musical production.

Rio Hondo College student Brianna Alanis will play three separate roles, including Dolores, a waitress from Chicago, and Maggie, a domestic worker who wants more for her children, and sing two solo numbers

"I love theater and singing.

I sing everywhere - at work, at home. My plan is to eventually transfer to a four-year university and continue studying theater,' Alanis said. "'Working' is very relatable and fun because it is based on real people, and you get to make choices on how you bring them to life. I'm not nervous performing, but dealing with tech issues is a little scary.

Juver Ramirez graduated from Rio Hondo College in June, earning an Associate's degree, and is now attending Cal State Long Beach. Korf enlisted Ramirez to serve as an assistant director, as well as portray a variety of characters, including Freddy, a role created by Miranda. Ramirez does not have a background in music, but understands that versatility is essential for a career in theater.

"Theater is a tough field to enter, and I want to become familiar with all aspects of stagecraft," Ramirez said. "Tech is the real challenge here, and I will assist in helping cast members with lighting and sound. This is the most diverse cast that we've had at Rio Hondo and I am just getting a chance to meet them. Theater helps me think on my feet, plus it's really fun."

Rio Hondo is supporting the production by providing lighting fixtures and green screens for cast members to use at home. Students can also borrow a college computer if necessary, and the college will work to provide hot spots for students with Wi-Fi issues.

Downey prepares to host its first LGBTQ pride picnic

Downey's first picnic celebrating the gay and queer community is set for Saturday from 12-4 pm at Furman Park.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY - Downey's first ever LGBTQ Pride Family picnic will take place this Saturday at Furman Park.

The city's recognition of its LGBTQ community has been brought to the forefront of conversations over the past year, leading to the city declaring the month of June as "Pride Month," and raising the rainbow-colored flag over city hall.

The culminating picnic, which is officially being put on by the Los Angeles Centers for Alcohol and Drug Abuse (LA CADA), is expected to draw upwards of 1000 people. Attendees can expect food, music, and informational resources, as well as entertainment, including a petting zoo.

Councilman Mario Trujillo - who is openly gay - called the picnic "an opportunity for our families to have those teaching moments" and "is a step to changing hearts and minds."

"We're giving them a natural setting to be able to talk about sexuality and labels and things importantly, to let people know that it's okay, that we're part of the community and we're accepted."

It has not been a necessarily easy road to get to this point.

The path to Saturday's event began early this year, when Councilwoman Catherine Alvarez - who identifies as bisexual asked the council to consider throwing an event in support of the city's LGBTQ community.

Although initially shot down over health and safety and funding concerns, Trujillo would step in and suggest enlisting the help of LA CADA.

LA CADA would go on to partner with Supervisor Janice Hahn, who is the main sponsor of the event. The supervisor is providing all the staging, canopies, tables, and chairs, as well as providing LA CADA with over $12,000 in funding, and funding Downey Police officers to be at the site to provide security for the event.

No city funds have been used towards this event.

"This event is an opportunity for us to celebrate and show our support for the LGBTQ+ community here in Downey," said Hahn in a statement provided to the Downey Patriot. "I have made it a point to sponsor Pride events across my district because they are an important part of like that," said Trujillo. "Most making sure every resident feels attendance. welcome and included in their neighborhoods and knows they can be themselves openly and freely."

> The picnic would go on to be funded separate from the city, with Downey only waiving fees and providing the space, as well as Downey Police providing a patrol vehicle.

> Despite achieving victories in the last several months, the LGBTQ community has still met significant pushback from some, especially those in Downey's faith-based community.

Trujillo says that he expected some pushback, although had not "prepared himself for some of the words that were going to be used.

"I got through it and stayed focused on the idea that this could be a possibility, and if we were going to do it, it had to be done well," said Trujillo. "It had to be done well because this was our message to say that this about acceptance.'

According to Trujillo, the Council and several other public officials are anticipated to be in

In addition, Zoey Luna, a well-known transgender activist from Downey, will also be on hand to share her story, as well as be honored and recognized by the city.

Luna, who successfully took the Downey Unified School District to court over transgender rights in 2011, says that she is honored to be recognized.

"As a person who has been openly transgender in my city of Downey for years, it means the world to see Downey recognizing us and acknowledging our presence," said Luna. "...I really hope that we can - as a city -become more understanding of different identities, and be able to understand that even though these identities are surrounded in gender and sexuality, that it is something that should not be deterred from teaching kids about, because it's just ways of expression, and I don't think we need to sexualize or diminish any way of feeling and identifying."

The picnic will take place on Saturday from noon to 4 p.m.

The eviction moratorium needs to expire

By Steve Chapman

Emergency situations can justify actions that would normally be inexcusable. The social order is not damaged if a lost hiker breaks into an unoccupied cabin to avoid freezing to death. The damage comes if the exception becomes the norm and cabin owners lose all protection from intruders.

In the early months of the pandemic, the federal government was doing everything it could think of to limit the damage from COVID-19. One measure was a ban on evictions by landlords at a time when many renters were suddenly out of work and unable to pay.

Originally part of the coronavirus relief package passed by Congress and signed by President Donald Trump, the moratorium was extended in September by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Congress later extended it again, and when that extension lapsed, the CDC renewed it until the end of June. Some states, including California, New York and Illinois, imposed their own bans.

The overall policy made sense during a grave public health crisis. Depositing millions of tenants onto the streets and into crowded shelters would have accelerated the spread of the virus. The moratorium originated when cities and states were enforcing lockdowns. People who lose their homes can't very well isolate at home.

But the ban created widespread hardship for the people who provide these homes: landlords. Many are small-business people who depend on rental payments to cover mortgages, property taxes, utilities and maintenance. They fill a vital role in the economy. Their reward has been to incur a burden that properly belongs to all of us.

But in June, a decision by the Supreme Court blocked any extension beyond July 31 without legislation. President Joe Biden has chosen to respect the ruling. In this, he parted ways with tenants rights groups and Rep. Maxine Waters, D-Calif., who urged him to defy the court and maintain it.

Biden said he wanted an extension to be approved by Congress, as the court requires. But that wouldn't fix the fundamental injustice of compelling property owners to provide free housing.

A lawsuit filed by Realtors associations in Alabama and Georgia says that landlords are losing $13 billion each month in unpaid rent, and the total damage could exceed $200 billion.

It may be worth these sums to avert a flood of evictions. If so, though, the cost should be borne by taxpayers at large, not loaded onto one disfavored group.

Our leaders have recognized as much, up to a point. Since December, Congress has approved $47 billion in assistance to renters so they could meet their obligations. But the amount falls well short of what is needed. Not only that, distribution has been glacially slow.

The Treasury Department recently reported that only 12% of the money found its way to tenants and landlords in the first half of this year. More than half of tenants are not even aware that they can get emergency aid, according to the Urban Institute.

"There can be no excuse for any state or locality not to promptly deploy the resources that Congress appropriated to meet this critical need of so many Americans," said White House press secretary Jen Psaki. A spokeswoman for the city of Los Angeles told The Washington Post that it stopped taking applications because of "unprecedented demand that far exceeded the program funding."

With inadequate resources and bureaucratic delays, landlords are required to keep going without compensation. They can't collect rent from millions of tenants, and they can't remove them to accommodate residents who will pay. Renters protected by the moratorium are still liable for back rent, but landlords will have a devil of a time trying to get what they are owed.

The main rationales for the moratorium are obsolete. The economy has rebounded strongly in recent months, allowing the majority of people who lost their jobs to return to the payrolls. The public health risks of evictions have declined since free vaccines became universally available.

The harm, however, remains — and it goes beyond the immediate financial loss to property owners. Rental housing is bound to be lost as some landlords are forced to sell. Potential buyers will have to weigh the risk of being victimized by future moratoriums. In the long run, tenants will also lose out.

The federal moratorium was intended to address a dire short-run calamity. But it may end up creating a permanent one.

How Cuomo got away with it for so long

By Elizabeth Spiers

There's a frequently recurring narrative that plays out when a public figure is accused of sexual harassment: a chorus of defenders inevitably emerges to assert that the accused is actually a nice guy, historically respectful of women, and where applicable, has daughters who don't appear to loathe him. Some of these defenders point out that the accused treated them well and never harassed them personally, as if that detracts from the credibility of the allegations.

When two former staffers accused New York's governor, Andrew Cuomo, of sexual harassment in February, this ritual chorus of defenders was nowhere to be found. Few people raced to his side — in part because the usual lines of defense just don't apply. Mr. Cuomo is not a nice guy, and he has mistreated so many people that the sexual harassment accusations seem like predictable transgressions in a litany of abuses stretching back years. (He does, however, have daughters, and they don't appear to loathe him.)

The 165-page report issued Tuesday by the office of State Attorney General Letitia James cites a pattern of abuse that contributed to a toxic work environment in the governor's office. Mr. Cuomo's team has claimed that a pernicious work environment is just a feature of working in politics, a profession that is not particularly polite. But plenty of government employees will attest that no boss or colleague has ever in a professional setting invited them to play strip poker on a work trip, groped them or asked whether they have ever had sex with older men. Mr. Cuomo stands accused of doing all three. (He denies making inappropriate sexual advances.)

The governor has also been known to retaliate gleefully against people who get in his way, as he did against one of his accusers, Lindsey Boylan, a former aide, trying to discredit her testimony and damage her professional reputation. His bottomless stamina for prosecuting his critics in this way creates an environment where other employees are afraid to hold him accountable, lest they find themselves on the receiving end of one of his aggressive payback campaigns.

All of these things have given people around Mr. Cuomo — and often, the general public — a sense that he operates like a macho Machiavelli who views other people as instruments for accumulating power and that he believes he is entitled to that power regardless of what the public thinks or wants. It is his political birthright, and public service appears to be a secondary consideration.

It's unsurprising, then, that this sense of entitlement would extend to Mr. Cuomo's treatment of women. Men who unapologetically harass women believe on some level that they are entitled to sexual attention from the women they harass. Instead, they offer mealy-mouthed statements that technically include the words "I'm sorry" but terminate in some variation of "that your feelings were hurt."

"I never touched anyone inappropriately or made inappropriate sexual advances," Mr. Cuomo still maintains.

Perversely, his abrasiveness may have given him a sort of immunity to consequences until now, at least when it comes to his public image. Any time he exhibits terrible interpersonal behavior, it can be regarded as an intrinsic part of his personality. He's established a reputation as a jerk who treats people badly, so people shrug when he proves, yet again, that he is a jerk who treats people badly. His behavior is normalized because it seems normal for Andrew Cuomo.

Mr. Cuomo himself reinforces this perception. When accused of bestowing an unwanted kiss upon a woman at a wedding in 2019, he said, "You can find hundreds of pictures of me kissing people." And "It is my way of greeting people," as though the fact that he has always behaved this way excuses his actions. He will even point out that his father, one of his predecessors as governor, Mario Cuomo, did the same.

There's a bit of grudging admiration in some circles for his tactics. Over his 10 years as governor, he has employed those tactics to get what he wants, from reportedly working to help Republicans maintain power in the State Senate to allegedly undermining an anticorruption commission his own office created once it became apparent that it was also scrutinizing groups with ties to him. There are people who have benefited from those victories. But being good at consolidating and buttressing power is not synonymous with good governance, and Mr. Cuomo's strategic belligerence often masks his failures.

It's also worth noting that some New Yorkers like the idea of a tough guy with sharp elbows in office because they conflate toughness with resiliency and sometimes fail to notice that what appears to be toughness may just be a lack of empathy. If the stereotype of New Yorkers is that they are all rude, brash, in-your-face personalities with New York City-size egos, Mr. Cuomo fits the bill.

Whether he'll resign or risk impeachment remains to be seen. But for now, he remains defiant. Resigning would mean admitting that the power he has accumulated can be taken away as a consequence of his inappropriate behavior, a reality the governor appears to find inconceivable. It would also force him to acknowledge wrongdoing and possibly issue a real apology. And this tough guy may be too weak to own up to his failings.

It's past time to act on climate change

By Kate Brown

If you are on the East Coast, the sunrises you saw last week were probably tinged with a bit of red. That haze was the smoke from the fires scorching the West, including the 400,000-acre-plus Bootleg Fire in southern Oregon, the largest in the country at the moment and the latest in a string of climate-related natural disasters to befall my state.

We are no strangers to forest fires in the West. About half of Oregon, some 30 million acres, is forestland. But in the past decade, as our summers have grown longer, hotter and drier, our lush forests have turned into tinderboxes. I have declared drought emergencies in 22 of our 36 counties already this year, as rivers and reservoirs run low because of insufficient snowpack and the lack of rainfall. Last summer, Oregon experienced its most devastating fire season in many years, when more than 2,000 fires burned 1.2 million acres. We lost at least nine lives and more than 5,000 homes and commercial structures. Fires burned in Clackamas County outside the Portland metro area, causing the area to have some of the world's worst air quality for several days, and through Santiam Canyon, on the outskirts of Salem, our state capital.

This summer, we are already on pace to eclipse last year's totals, and it's only the first few days of August. In June, Portland set a 116-degree high-temperature record, while Salem reached 117 degrees, also a record. About 200 people lost their lives in Oregon and Washington. In February, Oregon was hit by unseasonably harsh ice and wind storms that knocked out power to hundreds of thousands of households. Before that, counties were hit by flooding. A recent climate assessment of the state by the Oregon Climate Change Research Institute at Oregon State University warned that "the number and intensity of heavy precipitation events, particularly in winter, is projected to increase throughout the 21st century."

And, as is the case with the Covid-19 pandemic, our most vulnerable communities are hardest hit by these disasters: rural and low-income ones and communities of color that are already disproportionately affected by longstanding disparities and systemic racism. Because of that, our Black, Indigenous, Latino, Asian and Pacific Islander residents face a disproportionate burden of the economic, health and safety impacts of climate change.

We are taking steps in the short term to adapt to this new normal of harsh weather and a fire season that never ends. But over the long term, we must take concerted, nationwide action to address climate change. It's one climate. We need to put politics aside and act as we watch its changes play out.

We are working to lead the way in Oregon, with some of the most ambitious goals among the states for reductions in greenhouse gas emissions and the adoption of electric vehicles. In 2020, I signed an executive order to reduce carbon dioxide emissions, and Oregon is finalizing rules to cap emissions from our largest transportation, industrial and natural gas sources. Last week, I signed into law Oregon's clean energy bill, mandating 100 percent clean electricity by 2040 — one of the fastest state timelines in the nation. The bill is rooted in the idea that our electric infrastructure should support opportunities for living-wage jobs, work force equity and energy resilience.

I signed the bill at Electric Island, the first publicly accessible fast-charging station designed especially for heavy-duty electric trucks and buses near the Interstate 5 freight corridor — the product of a partnership between Daimler Trucks North America and Portland General Electric. As chair of the Western Governors' Association, I worked with my fellow governors to expand access to electric vehicles and charging infrastructure across the West, prioritizing rural and low-income areas and communities of color.

We have a strong partnership with the Biden administration, which has combined a collaborative approach with my state to wildfire response and preparedness with investments in clean energy, climate action and environmental justice.

What we need now is bold action from Congress. The recently announced infrastructure deal, which includes the largest ever investment in electric vehicle infrastructure, is a great start, but we must continue to do more. As the bills are finalized in the legislative process, lawmakers must look for opportunities to reduce emissions and modernize the electrical grid. We have an opportunity right now to get millions of Americans back to work in clean energy jobs, address the climate crisis and center equity in our investments.

Building back better means building a more just and equitable country for all. In Oregon, we have taken decisive action on climate while still growing our economy, with many green technology companies choosing Oregon for their operations.

States and cities are on the front lines of the climate crisis. But this is a problem that knows no borders. Climate change is playing out here now, with a fury, but it will be in your backyard next. People are dying. Congress must act, now.

Jeff Bezos is proof we need a wealth tax

By Jim Hightower

When I was just a tyke, cowboy television actors were marketed as role models and heroes for little backyard cowpokes like me, and we could send off a cereal box top to get a certificate making us "Pals of the Saddle" or some-such with Roy Rogers, Hopalong Cassidy or other "heroes."

Cute for a 4-year-old. Less so for 57-year-old Jeff "Space Boy" Bezos.

Yet there he was in July — the gabillionaire profiteer, labor exploiter and tax scofflaw who heads the Amazon online retail syndicate — all dressed up and playacting as a heroic conqueror of space. Marketed as some combination of the Wright brothers' innovation and the Apollo 11 moon landing, Little Jeff's trip on his private Blue Origin rocket ship was essentially a very expensive, hightech carnival ride. The whole thing took only 11 minutes, barely got into suborbital space, achieved no scientific purpose and did zero to enhance American prestige in the world.

As for personal genius or heroics, Bezos didn't invent or build the spacecraft, didn't have any role in flying it (the trip up and down was fully automated) and didn't face any cosmic unknowns (he didn't even have to wear a spacesuit). All he really did was buy the spacecraft — a cheap bauble for the world's richest man.

But he did get to dress up in a sort of space-style jogging outfit with his name and his Blue Origin corporate logo emblazoned on it. Then, like a little boy getting a cereal-box certificate proclaiming him a cowboy, when the diminutive megabillionaire floated back to terra firma, he held a fake ceremony at which some former NASA official pinned a set of phony "astronaut wings" on him, custom designed by his own corporation. More pathetically, his corporate lobbyists are said to be appealing to Washington officials to award official astronaut wings to this uber-rich space tourist.

So, there you have the new pantheon of America's flight heroes: the Wright brothers, Amelia Earhart, John Glenn, Neil Armstrong ... and Jeff "Space Boy" Bezos. Did I mention "pathetic"?

I cheered when Bezos, the richest man on Earth, had himself rocketed into space. But then he came back down.

There's nothing irredeemably wrong about being rich — indeed, as Mark Twain put it, "I'm opposed to millionaires, but it would be dangerous to offer me the position." One good role model for handling wealth, rather than letting it handle you, is music superstar Dolly Parton. She donated a cool million bucks to the Vanderbilt University Medical Center in 2020 to help finance its development of the Moderna vaccine that's now preventing millions of people from dying with COVID-19.

Then there's ugly rich, like Amazon kingpin "Space Boy" Bezos, who keeps spending gobs of his unsurpassed net worth on vainglorious purchases that end up revealing his essential worthlessness. Last year, he paid half a billion dollars for a yacht that's three football fields long and still not big enough to float his ego. So, last month, combining cluelessness with callousness, he actually ran a global media campaign to glorify himself for spending untold billions on his ego trip up to the edge of space. Back on Earth, he publicly blurted out that Amazon's underpaid and abused workforce should be applauded, because "you guys paid for all this."

Meanwhile, Wall Street speculators keep bloating Space Boy's personal fortune. On just one day last year, his wealth was jacked up by $8 billion ! One day! For doing nothing — he didn't work longer, harder or smarter. Well, he has been diligent about one task: tax dodging. Even though his wealth now tops $162 billion, he's had years in which he's paid zero income tax for the support of our nation.

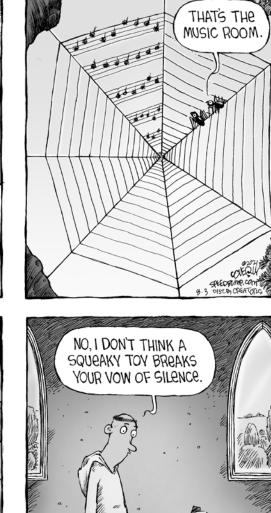

But this year, Jeff suddenly became a philanthropist! Increasingly ridiculed as a self-indulgent rich jerk, he loudly announced he was giving $200 million to charitable causes. Wow — how generous. Except ... that's no sacrifice for Jeff, it's pocket change — doling out two big bills means he still has $161.8 billion in his vault.

We don't need his self-serving "charity"; we need a wealth tax to restore a bit of fairness and to support America's common good.

Rainey Twins: Water polo players and sisters together forever

Samantha and Shyanne Rainey have played together since age 12. Now in college, they've become competitors.

By John M. Sherrard Contributor or the first time in the lives of the Rainey twins, they will be going their separate ways in college and the sport they love - water polo.

Samantha and Shyanne Rainey, who have been on the same water polo teams since the age of 12, are attending Biola and APU, respectively.

Shyanne, a sophomore this coming season at APU, and Samantha, a freshman on the inaugural Biola team beginning in 2022, will be on opposite sides when the two NCAA DII teams meet in a friendly next year.

"As this season approaches, I'm excited to compete against Samantha and the Biola water polo team," Shyanne said. "APU will be ready to play Biola. Competition is engraved in everyone, and when a game happens against Samantha and Biola, both teams will bring their A-game."

Samantha simply said, "Game on."

Even though they have always played the game of water polo together, there is a very competitive edge in just about every other facet of life between them.

"Competition between twins is bound to happen," said Shyanne, who has been at APU for two seasons. "For Samantha and I, our competition ranges from who can eat the most pizza, if we sit on the ground, which dog will come to us first, and who can name the most dog breeds and NFL teams."

The twins learned about the sports marketing. ame of water polo from their babysitter, Hailey Kavern, and took to it like fish to water.

They received valuable experience when they would show up to practice at Porterville High under then coach Richard Taylor, after the varsity team finished and participated with other players that weren't in high school yet.

And so it began.

Both Shyanne and Samantha took advantage of the lessons from Kavern and eventually became an integral part of the varsity team at Porterville.

It all culminated with a CIF-Central Section D 2 title in their senior year with a 10-7 win over Redwood under coach Evan Thomas. Shyanne, during the season, scored 100 goals for the team in route to a 25-5 record. In addition to playing goalie for the Panthers, Samantha also had 11 goals and 11 assists.

"It (winning the title) was really fun," Shyanne said. "Her sister, like she does so much, finished the sentence. "It was so much fun and we had been playing since we were 12," Samantha added. "To see us both grow in the sport that we love so much together and win a CIF Championship and to take it home to our home town was just special."

A "third sister" and teammate, Rosemary Chapman, was also a big part of the championship. She is now currently at Fresno Pacific.

Both Shyanne and Samantha credit Thomas for bringing their abilities to the next level. "He literally taught me everything I know about being a goalie and he was a big asset to our water polo careers," Samantha added.

After high school, Shyanne was accepted to play at APU (kinesiology major), but Samantha didn't initially look into water polo in college due to her interest in her major,

Both players are getting ready for the fall season workout and preparing for the 2022 season.

"I'm so happy to get started and get ready for that game-day experience and waking up and wearing the (APU) shirt," Shyanne said.

Samantha, who hasn't had an actual practice with a team in two years, was just as excited to get started. "I'm excited for this whole new journey and I already know four of the players.'

Sam Rainey, father and swim instructor

"I taught them to swim when they were five and then water polo in junior high school and the championship game in high school," Sam Rainey said. "It's an ongoing story and I'm looking forward to it.'

Sam was asked how excited he was to see Samantha play again. After a short pause, he said, "I'm excited and looking forward to it and we'll see how it goes."

He has already put APU on notice of the Biola women's water polo program when he attended one of Shyanne's games.

"I already wore a Biola shirt to an APU game just to get everybody's attention," he said. "We'll probably have to switch shirts at the games."

Deborah Rainey, the twins' mom, also was excited to get to the games, including the one APU-Biola match.

"We know some of the parents at APU and Biola and will probably get razzed on who we are cheering for," she said.

And, to top it off, the stands are all on one side at APU. Stay tuned.

"It's going to be really exciting because we've been doing it with them for so many ' Deborah Rainey said.

free-throw line, the box, and the three-point line.

Samantha was the postup player. But, after practice and the game, the most competition I think was with ourselves.

After practice they would go home and practice free throws and layups hours after hours, and they wouldn't bow out until the other one called it a day.

With swimming, competition was still the same. "It picked up in high school when we were in the same lane and then swimming against each other in meets," Shyanne said. "During a recreational swim meet around the age of 17, we were both ready to swim the Individual Medley.

"Out of the two of us, I was the best at backstroke and freestyle, while Samantha was the best at butterfly and breaststroke."

Deborah Rainey was win.

"Having a built-in best friend, training partner, and sister, is the best thing I could ever have," Shyanne added. "When we go to the local Cross Fit gym (D's Xtreme Fitness), we push each other to train the best and see who can finish the workout first."

Both players may be going to different colleges, but will remain close as ever doing their workouts. "We honestly could not have the competitive gene if it weren't for our parents, Shyanne said. "They push us every day to be our best and are amazing parents to have as our support team."

"I always won at the freethrow line and the three-point line."

watching on the sideline, and noticed the butterfly was so in sync, she couldn't even tell if another person was swimming. It was a close race, but Shyanne came out with the Kavern had previously been a goalie on the Porterville varsity team.

"We first learned about water polo when our babysitter took us out in our backyard pool and said, 'I'm going to teach you how to do the egg beater," Shyanne said.

The twins, who started swimming at the age of five, eventually found themselves on a club water polo team. Things got really serious after their mom, Deborah, started a club team (16 U) with another mom when the twins were in middle school.

"My mom jumped in feet first and said 'I'll do anything for my girls to play water polo,'" Samantha said.

Samantha, who had interest from other colleges, decided to enroll at California State University, San Bernardino, but didn't play water polo.

That all changed when Shyanne found out that Sarah Orozco (former UCLA player and NCAA champion) was named coach at Biola in May of 2020.

Samantha then got in contact with Orozco and it was the beginning of a whole new direction for her.

Each of the girls are preparing for the season and are getting ready for practice.

"We already have a game plan to work out together before college," Samantha said. "We're just motivating ourselves to just get better and be a better player."

"I followed them through each level - from seventh grade to high school. Finally we got to a point: now that we've done everything we can for you, now it's your turn. It's come to see if all of that money and traveling to games is finally paid off.

"It's actually exciting to see your kids grow and see their accomplishments."

The early years

The twins grew up playing basketball and swimming before they dedicated their time to water polo.

"We found most competition in basketball even when we were on the same team," Shyanne said.

Students need to be in classrooms with masks this fall, Education Secretary says

• The U.S. Education Deparment released a roadmap for schools to keep kids safe on campus.

U.S. Education Secretary Miguel Cardona has a message for schools across the country ahead of the new school year: Students need to be in classrooms.

"That's where students learn best," Cardona told NPR's A Martínez. "Schools are more than just places where students learn how to read and write they're communities. They're like second families to our students."

On Monday, the U.S. Education Department will release a roadmap for the return to school, encouraging districts to invest in social and emotional support for students and outlining ways to "accelerate academic achievement."

The roadmap also recommends that school systems follow the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's masking guidance for K-12 schools, which the agency revised last week, recommending "universal indoor masking for all teachers, staff, students, and visitors to schools, regardless of vaccination status."

Mask mandate bans will make it hard for some schools to follow the roadmap

Following those masking recommendations will be next to impossible for some districts where state legislators have stepped in. Texas, South Carolina and Iowa have all passed laws banning schools from requiring students and staff to wear masks. Iowa Gov. Kim Reynolds said last week that the CDC's recommendations wouldn't change that. In South Carolina, Gov. Henry McMaster tweeted that "personal responsibility" was the answer.

"I know that there are some folks making decisions that are less based on science and more on their ideology," Cardona said. "But at the end of the day, our educators, their that we're following mitigation strategies and creating safe learning environments for students."

It's on schools to communicate with hesitant families about the steps they're taking, Cardona said. If they're not taking the right steps, "what's going to happen is those families that don't feel comfortable will not be sending their children to school."

Cardona added that he knows some school leaders are "going to be running up against challenges from elected officials. And that's sad and that's unfortunate."

South Carolina's largest school district, Greenville County Schools, is strongly encouraging mask wearing but district spokesperson Tim Waller said that's about all they can do to get students and staff to use face coverings. "The legislature has passed a number of provisos which have tied the hands of school districts in South Carolina," he said. If cases rise or high numbers of students and staff must quarantine, "It is my hope that elected officials who have placed these restrictions on public school districts in South Carolina will do the right thing and ease up on some of those restrictions.'

Cardona said the department is having daily conversations with governors and elected officials about best practices — but "in those places where they're most resistant, that's where we're seeing the most spread of COVID-19."

Meanwhile, public health leaders are warning Americans about the fast-spreading delta variant of the coronavirus. On Friday, the CDC published data showing that vaccinated people infected with the delta variant are just as likely as unvaccinated people to spread the virus to others.

"I don't have to tell you, the rising delta variant is creating some concern across the country," Cardona said. But he added, "We know that mask wearing and mitigation strategies allow [schools] to reopen safely." If increased spread of the virus prohibits failure of adults."

Schools should "hit the reset button" this fall

The roadmap also recommends that school leaders encourage and provide access to vaccination for all eligible students and staff members.

Vaccines are currently approved for children 12 years old and up — so, regardless of how many students and families heed public health advice, elementary schools will be filled with unvaccinated students at the start of school. And while most middle schoolage students are eligible for the vaccine, just 28% of the country's 12- to 15-year-olds were fully vaccinated as of Thursday, according to data from the CDC.

Vaccinated or not, Cardona said students need to be able to return to classrooms, where they have access to school meals and "where they can access the social and emotional support and mental health support professionals that are available in the school."

That social-emotional support is another area the department is encouraging schools to invest in with the pandemic relief funding provided by the federal government. "I would be as concerned about the social and emotional well-being of our students as much as the academic loss," Cardona said.

Schools have an opportunity "to hit the reset button" — but he worried the one thing holding them back is "complacency."

"You know, before the pandemic, we had wide opportunity gaps in our country," Cardona said. "We had the cost of college preventing people from thinking about college because they didn't want to be buried in debt. We must do better."

For Cardona, that future might include some expanded remote learning options for students. "But post pandemic, I really feel like students need to be in a classroom learning with their peers, engaging with an educator in person."

That's what many school leaders are focused on right now. Still, in-person school is a complicated goal when, in many places, the desires of state leaders, public health officials and families all look different.
