Pandemic financial help still available

■ Unemployment benefits have been reduced and eviction moratoriums are expiring but resources are still available for families in need.

LOS ANGELES - Enhanced federal unemployment insurance put in place during the coronavirus pandemic ended earlier this monty, after nearly a year and a half.

That means some 9 million people lost all benefits and another 3 million saw weekly checks reduced by $300, according to an estimate by The Century Foundation.

At the same time, a few other pandemic-era programs have recently been extended and may offer help to those still out of work, or offset some of the loss of the extra money. Many of these programs have specific eligibility requirements, so not all unemployed residents will be able to access them.

Here's what unemployed Americans may be able to rely on in the coming months.

1. State eviction protection

Though the Supreme Court struck down the most recent extension to the federal eviction ban, renters in some states may still be protected by local moratoriums.

California's eviction moratorium is scheduled to expire Sept. 30.

Those at risk of being evicted should apply for rental assistance if they haven't already. Even though the federal eviction moratorium is no longer in place, having just a pending application for government assistance could help renters High School football team stay in their homes longer.

2. Nutrition benefits

Starting in October, benefits through the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, or SNAP, will increase across the board for the first time since 1975. The average adjustment will be a roughly 25% bump from month, or about $1.19 more per day, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. the coronavirus Before pandemic, the average benefit was about $121 per person on a monthly basis.

SNAP benefits, no further action is needed to get the boost come

3. Student loan payment pause

The U.S. Department of Education in August extended the moratorium on payment and interest of federal student loans one final time, through Jan. 31.

That means that some 42 million borrowers with student debt don't have to make a payment on most federal loans until next February and won't see their balances grow.

4. Enhanced child tax credit

For those with eligible children, the child tax credit may be providing some additional unemployment as insurance ends. In August, the IRS and U.S. Department of the Treasury sent some $15 billion in monthly advance payments to 61 million kids.

That was the second of six payments from the enhanced child tax credit, which started in July. The enhanced credit boosted the existing benefit to $3,000 from $2,000 and added a $600 bonus for kids under the age of 6 for the 2021 tax year.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

Here I am, defending bees. I have been stung twice: once while swimming laps (guess what was on the edge of the pool when my hand reached out?), and once inside my mouth, while eating a chicken drumstick and distracted by a great conversation. However, we have all seen many fewer bees in the past several years. What has been happening?

tion. Grains are mostly pollinated by the wind, but fruits, nuts and vegetables are pollinated by bees. In fact, bees pollinate 70 of the top 100 human food crops, which supply about 90% of the world's nutrition. On top of that, they pollinate foods like wild berries and nuts, eaten by birds and other mammals, and alfalfa, eaten by domesticated livestock.

Typically, a beehive or colony will shrink by 5-10% over the winter, and those lost bees would be replaced in the spring. In a bad year, a bee colony might lose 15-20% of its bees. That rate of loss has accelerated to 30-50%, and in some cases even more, over the past 10 years. In fact, for domestic crops that require bee pollination, the number of bee colonies has declined by a whopping 90% since 1962.

This enormous loss of bees is due to multiple and complicated causes, including decreasing crop diversity, the use of certain pesticides, drought, habitat destruction, air pollution, and climate

Some examples: Wild bee habitats shrink every year as grasslands and forests are converted into farms or housing. Biologists have found more than 150 different chemical residues in bee pollen. A number of chemical companies are involved in making these pesticides, including Bayer, Syngenta, BASF, Dow, DuPont and Monsanto. The official position of these companies is that the loss of bees is far too complex to reverse.

It is likely that we would survive a loss of the bees, but that many types of food would disappear. It may be time...or past time...to start thinking about the bigger picture. Here are some achievable goals that scientists feel could make a difference:

- Ban the most dangerous pesticides
- Work to preserve the bee pollinator wild habitats
- Promote ecological agriculture
- Help to provide bees with shelter, including safe havens in our own backyards. Wild bees and honeybees love diverse habitats, so planting a variety of native plants in our backyards or balconies helps to support them.

Unfortunately, these measures will raise the cost of the foods we buy. The impact of this increase in prices, of course, needs to be balanced by the impact of the loss of food variety and the increased food costs, should the bees disappear.

I find it interesting that the nation of Bhutan has led the world in adopting a 100% organic farming policy. There are numerous examples of individual farms and countries implementing policies that work towards protecting their crops and habitats.

Let's all make the effort to think bigger than usual. This is our Earth, and it will not be the same if we don't make serious efforts to protect it.

Taxpayers shouldn't subsidize sports stadiums

By Steve Chapman

Like many sports franchises whose owners want to augment their already immense riches, the Chicago Bears are pondering a relocation. After a full century of playing in the city, the Monsters of the Midway could move to suburban Arlington Heights — unless, of course, Chicago wants to make it worth their while to stay.

Season ticket holder Lori Lightfoot, whose day job is mayor, concedes that Soldier Field has deficiencies when it comes to the "fan experience' and to "revenue-generating opportunities." While insisting any changes would have to be "fiscally prudent," she sounds as though she's willing to meet the Bears halfway. But she ought to flee as if Khalil Mack were Cities that bargain with team owners rarely profit from the experience. That's because the owners have all the negotiating advantages. Owning a business that enjoys a monopoly in their region, they can choose from an abundance of cities and towns that would love to have them. And they know the fans and TV revenues will keep coming regardless.

The Dallas Cowboys vacated Dallas 50 years ago. The New York Jets and Giants don't even play in the state of New York. The San Francisco 49ers host games in Santa Clara, 40 miles south of the city. The Atlanta Braves started in Boston, migrated to Milwaukee, moved to Atlanta and now reside in Cumberland.

public funds to renovate Soldier Field, for fear of losing the Bears, and generally far less lucrative. taxpayers are still shouldering the burden. Now they may get to pay again for something they already bought.

The mayor and her constituents would be better off if she gave the Bears a ticker-tape parade on their way out of town. New and refurbished sports arenas are billed as bringing alluring economic benefits to the surrounding area as well as the entire host city. But they rarely if ever live

In a survey for the Mercatus Center at George Mason University, economist Dennis Coates of the University of Maryland-Baltimore County found that the economic effects of stadium development tend to be small and negative. "Sports-led development is unlikely to succeed in making a community richer," he concluded.

Chicago is a good example. In the years after the Soldier Field renovation, the city lost population. Lightfoot unwittingly undermined the case for helping the Bears when she complained that fans lack options

"If you want to enjoy a nice meal or convene in another place," she said, "you've got to go outside of the stadium footprint." If the last deal didn't generate that sort of development, why would the next one?

She wants to make the stadium a "year-round destination," which is a vain hope for an outdoor venue in a frigid climate. The problem with Chicagoans should know better than to get pulled into this rigged an NFL arena is that the resident team plays 10 or so home games each contest. Less than 20 years ago, the city committed $432 million in year, leaving 355 days when it's unused or consigned to events that are

Soldier Field is also home to the Chicago Fire soccer club, which uses it only slightly more often than the Bears and typically fills less than 10,000 of the 61,500 seats. "A football facility is such an economic loser that no team wants to own its own," University of Chicago economist Allen Sanderson told me.

Chicago is one of many cities that have been fleeced by ruthless tycoons. Allegiant Stadium in Las Vegas was built with $750 million in public money, the price for getting the Raiders to abandon Oakland. The inhabitants of Arlington paid for a new stadium for the Texas Rangers in 1994 — and already, they're paying for another new one.

The city of Minneapolis and the state of Minnesota had to contribute nearly $500 million to the Viking's home, U.S. Bank Stadium. For LoanDepot Park in Miami, where the Marlins play, local taxpayers will have to come up with $2 billion before they are done.

All these arrangements turn out to be excellent policies — if your goal is to enrich a handful of wealthy team owners. The Bears have been a model of mediocrity on the field for a long time. But this is one game they know how to play

Democrats see a path to victory in 2022

By Froma Harrop

Gov. Gavin Newsom's massive victory in California's recall election should spray some water on overheated predictions that Democrats will lose big in the 2022 midterm elections. And that's not the only source of hope for the Democratic Party.

Newsom's win surprised few in a state where registered Democrats outnumber Republicans by nearly 2 to 1, but the size of the win - 64% to 36% - did. And of special interest to Democrats everywhere was Newsom's ability to nationalize the election. California was reeling from hideous fires and the relentless onslaught of COVID-19, but Newsom spent the last days of the campaign railing against the new abortion law

The law virtually bans abortion. More astounding, it offers $10,000 bounties to any creep who reports anyone deemed to have helped a woman end a pregnancy past six weeks. So offensive is the law's slippery attempt to avoid federal judicial review that many right-wingers condemned it.

'Sometimes we wonder if Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton (a Republican) is a progressive plant," a Wall Street Journal editorial board

Small wonder that Terry McAuliffe, the Democrat trying to get his old job back as Virginia governor, now vows to be a "brick wall" against any Texas-style abortion restriction. His Republican opponent, Glenn Youngkin, is waffling on this issue.

This is the kind of thing that could energize Democrats to show up in large numbers for special elections and the midterms — contests where Democratic turnout tends to drop dramatically from presidential years. Small wonder Democratic leaders fret over the party's ability to maintain majorities in both the House and Senate. Adding to their worries, the president's party traditionally loses ground in midterm elections.

But do these political assumptions still apply? It was assumed that Democrats couldn't win two U.S. Senate seats in Georgia, but look what happened. A driving issue there was former President Donald Trump's attack on the sanctity of the Georgia vote, which slimly favored Joe Biden.

To illustrate a changed political reality, Republican Sen. David Perdue took Cobb County, a once-reliably Republican Atlanta suburb, by 13 percentage points in 2014. Last January, he lost to Democrat Jon Ossoff

The right-wing outrages keep piling up, appalling many independents as well as Democrats. They include the Republicans' continued flogging of the dangerous lie that Biden didn't win the 2020 election — and a widespread refusal to take seriously the criminal Jan. 6 rampage on the Capitol. Then there's the crusade in Republican-run states to make voting harder for groups likely to support Democrats, with special attention paid

In California, Larry Elder undoubtedly hurt his prospects by casting doubt on the results before the results were even in. His website, "StopCAFraud," was a nice Trumpian flourish but dumb politics. To his credit, Elder graciously accepted defeat and urged his supporters to do

The rejection of Biden's win appears to have partly prompted northeast Ohio Republican Rep. Anthony Gonzalez to announce he would not run for reelection. Gonzalez also cited threats to his family. Republicans can further help Democrats by replacing principled conservatives like Gonzalez with scary populists devoid of fixed beliefs beyond selling their incendiary brand.

Come November 2022, a strong economy could be smiling on Democrats. COVID-19's traumas should be way down in the headlines by then — and the restrictions that cost service workers their jobs will be a memory. Those workers would include Latinos who switched to the Republican Party for that reason.

What's happened before in American politics has been happening less and less of late. Riding on the wings of Republican excess, Democrats could well sail to an unexpectedly solid showing in 2022.

E-cigarettes are safer alternatives to tobacco. Government wants to take it away.

Electronic cigarettes, which deliver nicotine without tobacco or combustion, are the most important harm-reducing alternative to smoking ever developed — one that could prevent millions of premature deaths in the United States alone. Yet bureaucrats and politicians seem determined to negate that historic opportunity through regulations and taxes that threaten to cripple the industry.

When a court-set deadline for "premarket" approval of vaping products came and went on Sept. 9, the Food and Drug Administration had received millions of applications but had not approved any. As a result, the agency says, every vaping device and nicotine liquid sold in the U.S. is "marketed unlawfully" and "subject to enforcement action at the FDA's discretion."

Seven years after the FDA officially declared its intention to regulate "electronic nicotine delivery systems" as "tobacco products," the industry remains in legal limbo, existing only because of the agency's enforcement discretion and limited resources. Despite the FDA's promises of regulatory flexibility, it is perpetuating a situation in which manufacturers don't know whether they will still be in business next week, next month or next year.

The FDA has rejected millions of applications for nicotine liquids in flavors other than tobacco, which are the products that former smokers overwhelmingly prefer. Because those flavors also appeal to teenagers, the agency says, they will be approved only if manufacturers present recent trends suggest, the availability of e-cigarettes has accelerated the "robust," "reliable" and "product-specific" evidence that their benefits downward trend in adolescent smoking. in helping smokers quit outweigh the risk that they underage vaping.

No one really knows what that means, although the FDA says "the evidence of benefits to adult smokers for such products would likely be in the form of a randomized controlled trial or longitudinal cohort study. Such research is beyond the means of all but the largest companies, and even they may have trouble persuading the FDA that approval of their products is "appropriate for the protection of the public health," taking into account "the risks and benefits to the population as a whole.

Under that highly subjective standard, which is mandated by the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act of 2009, it is not enough for a manufacturer to show its products are far less hazardous than conventional cigarettes. Nor is it enough to show that nontobacco flavors are enormously popular among former smokers because the FDA might still conclude, however implausibly, that the risk of underage consumption outweighs the welfare of smokers interested in making the potentially lifesaving switch to vaping.

Survey data indicates that the vast majority of teenagers who vape regularly are current or former smokers, which means the FDA's fear that e-cigarettes are causing an "epidemic" of adolescent nicotine addiction is overblown. So is the fear that vaping is a "gateway" to smoking among teenagers who otherwise never would have tried nicotine; if anything,

The folly of the obsession with preventing underage vaping was apparent in San Francisco, where a ban on flavored e-cigarettes seemed to have boosted smoking by teenagers and young adults. That cautionary example has not deterred other jurisdictions from considering the same counterproductive policy.

In case heavy-handed federal and local regulations are not enough to stop smokers from quitting, House Democrats have proposed excise taxes that would double or triple the price of e-liquids. "This tax will not only kill my business," a Georgia vape shop owner told my Reason colleague Christian Britschgi, "it will kill Americans."

Last month in the American Journal of Public Health, 15 prominent tobacco researchers warned that "policies intended to reduce adolescent vaping may also reduce adult smokers' use of e-cigarettes in quit attempts." They emphasized that "the potential lifesaving benefits of e-cigarettes for adult smokers deserve attention equal to the risks to

Although the FDA acknowledges the harm-reducing potential of e-cigarettes, in practice, it is giving that benefit short shrift. Other policymakers, meanwhile, are proceeding as if the lives of smokers count for nothing.

Twitter gives Biden a pass

By Tim Graham

Twitter makes it easy to realize that the purpose of "fact-checkers" is most commonly rushing to defend President Joe Biden from misinterpretation... and mockery.

On Sept. 20, Twitter warned, "A video of President Biden discussing hurricane preparedness has been edited out of context, according to fact-

Tweets aired this clip of Biden from Aug. 10: "Let me be clear: If you're in a state where hurricanes often strike — like Florida or the Gulf Coast or into Texas — a vital part of preparing for hurricane season is to get

This message was later mocked with humor and sarcasm, and the protective "fact-checkers" are very sensitive about viral hot takes against Biden. Twitter cited "fact checks" from Snopes, the Associated Press and PolitiFact. Line them up!

Twitter also added to the thread a Reuters dispatch from Aug. 10, which reported, "The president said a spike in COVID-19 infections would exacerbate the already difficult challenges involved in preparing statements and actions are edited to "remove key portions." They'll for hurricane season, adding: 'It's likely serious hurricanes are going to come this month."

They added, "Biden's remarks echo hurricane preparedness tips published by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention." Twitter wants us to understand all the experts and facts inevitably line up for

It had an "all hands on deck" sound to it. Everyone leapt on defense. The defense was plausible, but the energy felt very personal.

Snopes cited a tweet from the account "Rich Kids of Tehran" that included the video clip and the words, "Biden: Get vaccinated to protect Michigan." No, the video shows it's what came out of his mouth, but yourselves from hurricanes! This is the leader of the world's most powerful country!" Biden's actual message is there. But then they mocked it with a clip from the movie "Billy Madison" about how dumb Biden sounds. Snopes declared, "Biden did not say that vaccines protect people from hurricanes.'

AP was protesting a TikTok video — something popular with young people. This video also ran the Biden sentence and then joked in text at the bottom of the video, "Get vaccinated to protect yourselves from hurricanes y'all." AP ruled: "False. The video clip, first posted on TikTok, was edited to remove key portions of Biden's comments.

It's always interesting when the media complains that presidential pretend this never happens in media coverage of Republicans.

PolitiFact also jumped on the TikTok video: "The video takes Biden of context and misleadingly captions his remarks.'

Just in the last year, Twitter has pounced on nine TikTok videos critical of Biden. On Election Day, they protested a Biden bumble: "Biden says he doesn't need voters to get elected." That's the way words actually came out of his mouth — "I don't need you to get me elected" — but they were upset it was mocked.

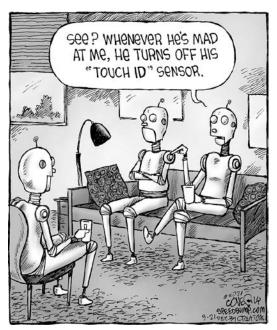

Their headline read, "Video misrepresents Biden's speech in their energy was, "You know what he meant!"

We've shown that Biden can uncork lies, such as calling the GOPbacked Georgia election integrity law "Jim Crow on steroids," and get a free pass. If Twitter and their affiliated fact police were half as energetic in reviewing Biden's remarks for false and misleading statements and missing contexts, they wouldn't seem so transparently partisan. But their emotionally overwrought defenses are a fact that's easily checked.

Tax changes are looming. Here's how they could affect your bottom line.

■ Depending on your financial situation, these proposed changes to the tax code could have a significant impact on your own tax liability.

Just when Americans think they understand how to calculate their income taxes - the rules evolve again.

That's happening now as President Joe Biden has proposed a number of tax changes as part of his American Families Plan. Just how those changes might play out for any specific individual remains a work in progress, though.

"There is still time for plenty of wrangling in Washington over the final plan, so the ultimate tax implications are hard to predict," says Rob Cordasco, author of "A Framework for Growth: Smart Financial and Tax Planning Strategies Throughout the Entrepreneurial Life Cycle."

especially because of the even split in the Senate between Democrats and Republicans.

"For the first time in my career, you have a Senate stacked up where every senator has pull," he says. "Everyone has negotiating power for this bill."

Still, as things unfold, Cordasco says some areas worth knowing about or keeping an eye up in basis. Biden also wants to

The top income tax rate. The Biden plan would increase to 39.6% the top tax rate for ordinary income, up from the current top rate of 37%. That move restores the rate to what it was before the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act of 2017, Cordasco says.

With this possibility looming, some financial professionals have been recommending that their clients convert traditional IRAs to Roth IRAs. With a Roth, you can withdraw earnings tax free in retirement. You do pay taxes when you make the under the current lower rate for anyone who acted soon.

be to accelerate income into 2021 and defer expenses into 2022," Cordasco savs.

Special capital gain rates. Right now, the income tax on capital gains and dividends is lower than the rate for ordinary income. Under the Biden proposal, that would change for households making more than $1

But if the person left the stock to an heir, that heir would 'step into" the current market value of $1.5 million, so if the heir sold the stock, they would conversion, but that would be owe taxes only on any capital gains above $1.5 million.

Interest rates expected to climb

In a vote of confidence in nation's strengthening economy, the majority of the Federal Reserve members now anticipate raising the interest rates twice in 2023. And while this wonky monetary projection may sound like a long way off, it could have a real impact on today's overheated housing

In response to the news, mortgage interest rates could tick up a little in response. This could result in the scorching-hot and ultracompetitive real estate market softening just a touch.

The projections came out of a Federal Open Market Committee meeting held on Tuesday and Wednesday.

"With [housing] prices as high as they are, higher mortgage rates are going to make homes more difficult to afford," says Realtor.com Chief Economist Danielle Hale.

The equation: If fewer people have the means to buy, it could ease the pressure on the market. Less competition could lead to fewer bidding wars and mindboggling offers over asking price.

Hale anticipates mortgage rates edging up just past 3% over the next few weeks for a 30-year fixed-rate loan. Rates averaged 2.96% in the week ending June 10, according to Freddie Mac.

If the Fed goes ahead and raises rates in 2023, Hale expects rates could climb to the mid-3% range or even as high as 4%.

While this may not sound like much of an increase, even fractions of a percentage point can have a substantial impact on a buyer's bottom line. A single percentage point can add more than a $100 to a homeowner's monthly payment and tens of thousands of dollars over the life of a 30-year loan, depending on the rate and size of the mortgage.

That could further slow down the market as more potential buyers could simply be priced

Mortgage interest rates are typically influenced by the Federal Reserve's short-term interest rates. But they are more closely aligned with the 10-year U.S. Treasury bonds.

That's because lenders typically bundle up mortgages they make and sell these mortgage-backed securities in the secondary mortgage market. This frees up cash they can use to make new loans.

Investors view Treasury and mortgage bonds as safer, less lucrative investments than the stock market. If the economy is weaker, these bonds become more appealing. When it's stronger or inflation is stronger, as it is now, investors aren't as worth less if inflation is moving up quickly.

Mortgage rates typically move in the opposite direction of bond prices. So if the economy improves enough for the Fed Realtor.com

AHEAD to raise interest rates, fewer investors will be tempted to put money in bonds. That means mortgage rates will rise, but likely not by much—at least for "People on the Federal Reserve think the economy is going to grow and be stronger faster," says Hale. They are also expecting inflation to remain high through the year before it settles down.

"We know that the economy is rebounding remarkably well," says Hale. "We know the labor market is healing interested because the bonds are remarkably well. There's still room for improvement and plenty of people out of work. But considering where we were a year ago, the progress has been pretty phenomenal.

1982 ZX Spectrum. The ZX Spectrum was a hit with video gamers, who coded their own games for the machine that was an early inspiration for the explosion of video gaming as well as the rival of the popular Commodore 64.

Later, Sinclair invented a small electric car, the Sinclair C5, which was not well received but was a precursor to today's electric auto industry.

Jo Lasorda, wife of late Dodgers manager

Jo Lasorda, the widow of longtime Los Angeles Dodgers manager and Hall of Famer Tommy Lasorda, has died at the age of 91, the Dodgers announced Tuesday.

Jo Lasorda died surrounded by her loved ones just before 9 p.m. Monday at her Fullerton home, the team announced in a news release.

Born on March 14, 1930, in Greenville, South Carolina, Joan Miller met Tommy Lasorda at a Greenville Spinners minor league baseball game, the team said.

The two were married for 70 years before Tommy Lasorda's death on Jan. 7 of this year.

Jo Lasorda leaves behind a daughter, a granddaughter, and is survived by one sister.

Funeral services are still pending, according to the team.

Clive Sinclair, created first affordable home computer

Clive Sinclair, an English inventor who helped revolutionize the computer industry with his creation of the first home computer available for less than $200, died Sept. 16 at his home in London after a long illness at the age of 81.

Among Sinclair's notable early inventions was the first slimline pocket calculator, the Sinclair Executive, in 1972. He would go on to create small versions of other products, including a wristwatch and a pocket television.

But Sinclair is best remembered for computers, beginning with the ZX80 in 1980. It was small enough to fit in the user's hand, and it became an early example of an affordable personal computer, with a price tag under $200.

It was followed by the even cheaper ZX81 and then by the

George Holliday, videotaped Rodney King beating

George Holliday, a plumber who videotaped the 1991 police beating of Rodney King that led to riots in Los Angeles, died Sept. 19 of complications of COVID-19 at the age of 61.

Holliday was asleep on the early morning of March 3, 1991, when he was awakened by the sounds of sirens and a helicopter. He stepped out onto his apartment's balcony, grabbing his new camcorder on impulse.

When he saw police severely beating King, who had been pulled over after a chase, Holliday began recording what he saw. He later contacted news station KTLA, which aired his video in a story on the beating that soon became a major nationwide headline.

After three of the officers were acquitted despite the video evidence and a fourth's case resulted in a mistrial, riots erupted, resulting in 63 deaths and thousands of injuries.

Holliday's video was one of the first recordings of police brutality against an unarmed Black person, an early example of the citizen journalism that would become common in the 21st century. The video was also a major factor in the widespread attention on King's story.

Some people blamed Holliday for the violence and rioting that followed the trial, and he received death threats for his involvement.

Sarah Dash, founding member of Labelle

Sarah Dash, a singer who was a founding member of Labelle, best known for their 1974 hit "Lady Marmalade," died Sept. 20

Dash began singing with Patti LaBelle, Nona Hendryx, and Sundray Tucker in the early 1960s, forming the girl group the Ordettes. They evolved to become the Bluebelles, then Patti LaBelle and the Bluebelles, and finally renamed themselves to Labelle in the early '70s.

The group had several minor hits in their earlier days, including "I Sold My Heart to the Junkman" in 1962 and "Down the Aisle (The Wedding Song)" in 1963. But it was as Labelle that they achieved major fame, after retooling their look and sound. They added a funk vibe and began dressing in space-age costumes.

Labelle became influential on the development of disco, as well as scoring a No. 1 hit with the suggestive song "Lady Marmalade." Just a few years after their biggest success, Labelle broke up, though Dash would reunite with her former bandmates in later years for albums and tours.

After Labelle's 1977 breakup, Dash began a solo career. She had dance club hits with "Sinner Man," "Ohh La La, Too Soon," and "Lucky Tonight." Dash toured with the Rolling Stones in the 1980s as well as touring and recording with Keith Richards.

In the 1990s, she toured with her one-woman show, Dash of

Anthony Johnson, comdian and actor on 'Friday'

Anthony "A.J." Johnson, an actor and comedian known for roles in movies including "Friday" and "House Party," died Sept. 6 at age 55.

Johnson's breakthrough role was E.Z.E. in "House Party" (1990). It was followed by roles in "Lethal Weapon 3" (1992) and "Menace II Society" (1993) before his best-known role came in 1995. He played petty thief Ezal in "Friday" alongside Ice Cube and Chris Tucker.

Johnson's other movies include "Panther" (1995), "B.A.P.S." (1997), and "I Got the Hook Up" (1998). He was also featured in music videos by Dr. Dre and Eazy-E, and he made TV appearances in "Martin," "The Parent 'Hood," and "Malcolm & Eddie."

Johnson was also a stand-up comedian who was featured on "Def Comedy Jam" in 1994.

Johnson is survived by his wife Lexis, three children, and his two siblings.

"The world of comedy has truly been shaken, again," his agent, LyNea Bell, said in a statement. "Our BH Talent family is heartbroken about the loss of the iconic legend of stage and screen Mr. Anthony "AJ" Johnson. He has left with us amazing memories of his laughter, dynamic acting skills, but most of all his enormous personality and heart of gold."

Roger Brown, NFL star and member of Rams' 'Fearsome Foursome'

Roger Brown, a defensive tackle and six-time Pro Bowler with the Detroit Lions and Los Angeles Rams in the 1960s, died Sept. 17 at age 84.

Brown played college football at the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, where he was a two-time NAIA All-American. He was inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 2009.

After graduating, he was a fourth-round pick in the 1960 NFL Draft for the Detroit Lions. He went on to play for the Lions until 1966, going to the Pro Bowl five times.

In the 1962 "Thanksgiving Day Massacre" game against the Green Bay Packers, Brown famously sacked quarterback Bart Starr seven times. He was inducted into the Pride of the Lions in 2018, and in 2019, the Detroit Free Press ranked him No. 19 among the Lions' top 100 players of all time.

Brown was traded to the Rams in 1967, where he became part of the formidable "Fearsome Foursome" defensive line along with Deacon Jones, Lamar Lundy, and Merlin Olsen. With the Rams, he went to the Pro Bowl again in 1967 before his retirement in 1969.

After his playing career, Brown became a restaurateur, first in Chicago and later in the Hampton Roads area of Virginia.

"In my 10 years with the Lions and the Rams, I never missed a game," Brown said in 2010. "I had broken hands and broken bones. But probably not as many as I caused."

Jane Powell, actress of Hollywood's Golden Age

Jane Powell, an actress and singer who starred in musicals of Hollywood's Golden Age, including "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," died Sept. 16 at Powell began performing as a young child, steered into it by parents who saw in their daughter the potential to be the next Shirley Temple. After working in radio throughout her young life, Powell auditioned for MGM when she was 14 years old, and she was immediately cast in a starring role in "Song of the Open Road" (1944).

A variety of musical roles followed, with Powell typically cast in girl-next-door roles: "Holiday in Mexico" (1946), "Three Daring Daughters" (1948), and "Nancy Goes to Rio" (1950).

Powell's breakthrough film was 1951's "Royal Wedding," a Stanley Donen musical in which she starred opposite Fred

When she starred as Milly Pontipee in 1954's "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," it looked as though she was headed for career greatness, but the musical proved to be the peak of her career instead. Only a few more films followed, including "The Girl Most Likely" (1958) and "The Female Animal" (1958).

In later years, Powell toured with productions of musicals including "My Fair Lady" and "Carousel," and she starred on Broadway in the 1974 revival of "Irene."

On television, she had a recurring role on "Growing Pains" as well as guest spots on shows including "The Love Boat," "Murder, She Wrote," and "Law & Order: Special Victims Unit."

Fred Dakota, revolutionized Indian casinos

Fred Dakota, a businessman who founded the first full-scale Native American casino in the United States, died Sept. 13 at age 84.

Dakota was out of work in the 1980s when he had the idea to open a small casino in his brother-in-law's two-car garage. They lived in the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community, on Michigan's Upper Peninsula, where bingo was already legal.

When Dakota applied with the tribal council for a gambling license, they agreed, and he began remodeling the garage into a casino. After building a bar and blackjack tables, and buying a craps table and poker machines, Dakota opened The Pines on New Years' Eve 1983 to great success. It was the first Native American gambling operation to offer more than small-scale games like bingo, and it set the stage for the development of the Native American casino industry.

The Pines was shut down in 1985 after Dakota expanded to a larger location, with the challenge based on charges that Dakota was violating Michigan's gambling laws. However, within a few years, Native American casinos were legalized via 1988's Indian Gaming Regulatory Act, and Dakota later worked in larger casinos.

Leonard Gibbs, band leader on 'Emeril Live'

Leonard "Doc" Gibbs, a master percussionist known for his time as the leader of the house band on "Emeril Live," died Sept. 15 of prostate cancer at the age of 73.

Gibbs was part of jazz saxophonist Grover Washington's backing band in the 1970s. He went on to perform with notable artists including Whitney Houston, Anita Baker, Wyclef Jean, and Erykah Badu.

In 1997, Gibbs became the musical director and bandleader for "Emeril Live," the Food Network show hosted by celebrity chef Emeril Lagasse. He remained with "Emeril Live" until its 2007 cancellation.

For the past 25 years, he had been an educator, teaching the arts of hand-drumming and percussion. In Philadelphia, he worked with two organizations presenting music in schools, Musicopia and Artreach.

In 2015, he relocated to Los Angeles to bring his knowledge and experience to the West Coast, once again getting involved in teaching drum and percussion instruments. In LA, he also created Baba Doc's Healing Sound therapy, a practice that uses percussion as a form of healing and reconnecting.

Willie Garson, starred in 'Sex and the City'

Willie Garson, an actor best known for playing Stanford Blatch on "Sex and the City," died Sept. 21 after a battle with pancreatic cancer at the age of 57.

Garson's "Sex and the City" character was a close friend of Sarah Jessica Parker's character, Carrie Bradshaw.

He was one of the show's most prominent supporting characters, and he also appeared in the 2008 "Sex and the City" movie and its 2010 sequel.

Garson had a broad career outside the HBO hit, starring in "White Collar" as well as taking recurring TV roles in "Mr. Belvedere," "NYPD Blue," "Hawaii Five-o," and "Supergirl."

He also made guest appearances on a wide variety of TV shows, including "Family Ties," "Twin Peaks," "Buffy the Vampire Slayer," "Medium," and "Two and a Half Men."

His movies include "Troop Beverly Hills," "Soapdish," "There's Something About Mary," "Being John Malkovich," and "Fever Pitch."

Short Story: A Heartfelt Visit

By Sharon Benson Smith

My second son, Mark, visited recently (July 16-19, 2021) from Santa Rosa in Northern California. He was hosted by his older brother and wife, Steve and Shawna, in their lovely home in Rossmoor. I was invited daily for breakfast, lunch or dinner (my choice), or at any time I chose to be there.

And, as you all know by now, Shawna is an excellent cook. She is so good that she should author a cookbook or go on one of those TV chef shows. I just know she could teach them a thing or two.

We drank wine and had her delish charcuterie between meals and, as usual when family gets together, we talked, talked, and talked some more. Their cozy backyard with pool and spa, plus all the plush furnishings, lush greenery and yard umbrellas, was so welcoming.

One thing Mark really wanted to do while he was here was to go to The Hat for their "World-Famous Pastrami!" The closest location was in Brea, so just the two of us headed north to Brea. Steve and Shawna chose to stay home in Rossmoor to prepare for our evening meal.

I insisted on buying and gave Mark a $50 bill. We each ordered a pastrami (plus one to take home to Cindy), plus Mark ordered fries and we each had a drink (mine was their stillfamous Cherry Coke).

When the change was a mere $1 plus change, we laughed and chuckled about how things had changed. The pastramis were $12 each...a whopping at least $8 more than when I was a kid serving them.

I grabbed a table for us as the place was packed, as usual. We sat and ate and chit-chatted some more. The Hat has photos on the wall of their various locations, and I pointed out to Mark the one I worked at when I was a teenager in East L.A. (Ford Boulevard and Third Street - or Beverly).

I also pointed out the gas station where Woody Strode worked. That very same photo appears in the school album of that vear.

Anyway, it was great being with him at one of our favorite eateries. His visit was (for this mother anyway) so long overdue.

Alas, Monday rolled around, time for him to head home. He came by my home to give me a last hug and to say goodbye at about 9 am. I asked him to call me when he arrived safely at home, and figured I would hear from him by 6 pm (he joked about how I had him call me every hour when he was on his way to Solvang when he was a teenager on his first "long-haul" drive).

This time the tables were turned, I called him every few hours while he was driving to make sure that all was well. I worried as it was so hot and the air conditioning was not working in his BMW. But he said he was fine as he kept the windows

When he finally called me, it was after 8 pm. He said he took a detour to say hello. That detour turned out to be the Rose Hills cemetery where my mom and dad, his grandparents, are buried side by side. He left flowers at each grave side, and even sent me a photo on my phone.

Was I blown away! You better believe it. Did I tear up? Again, you can believe that too.

It was truly a heartfelt visit that this mother will always

Short Story: A Vibrating Experience

By Helen Hampton

Years ago in 1961, when my babies were 2-1/2 years old, I was working at a small hospital in Bellflower called St. Helen's. I worked the 7 am to 3 pm shift in the office. I was single at the time, so when one of the doctors asked me out, I decided to go.

We had a lovely dinner at the Lafayette Hotel in Long Beach. We talked and laughed and had a delightful evening. On the way home, he asked me if I would like to see his office with his brand-new vibrating table. He was so proud of it, as it was very expensive and the latest thing.

So I said yes, and we then proceeded to his office. We went in, and he turned the lights on, took my coat, and hung it on the coat tree.

He walked me through the office, showing me the business office, the kitchen where the nurses would make coffee and have lunch, and Examining Rooms #1, #2, and #3. Then we came to the room with the vibrating table, and I exclaimed how beautiful it was.

He asked if I would like to lie down on it and try it out.

I said, "Sure, why not?"

When I was resting comfortably on it, he started it up. It was vibrating slowly and felt really nice. He cranked up the power and it was vibrating so much that I was flopping all over the table. Then he tried to jump on top of me, and I let out this ungodly scream and pushed

He got really mad, stopped the table from vibrating, and curtly told me that he would take me home. He stomped out of the room and started turning off all the lights as he went along, leaving me to find my way out in

He let me out two blocks from my house, sped off with tires squealing, and left me to walk the rest of the way home.

Needless to say, it was a bit awkward back at the hospital whenever I would see him in the hallway or break room

At least it taught me a lesson: never go see anyone's office at night, especially if they have a vibrating table.
