Norwalk works to meet organic waste law

■ A new California law requires cities to dramatically reduce the amount of organic waste they produce.

NORWALK - The Norwalk City Council approved an ordinance Oct. 5, by title only, that will continue the process of complying with Senate Bill 1383 (SB 1383), an unfunded mandate signed into law in 2016 by then Governor Jerry Brown to reduce organic waste disposal by 75% and increase edible food recovery by 20% by 2025.

SB 1383 targets pollutants that have potent effects on our climate. California has identified one of these pollutants to be methane, which is a powerful greenhouse gas that is produced when organics break down in landfills. Landfills are the third largest emitter of methane in the State of California.

Under SB 1383, organics are defined as lawn and landscaping debris, wood and lumber, food, food-soiled paper, and other paper and cardboard products. Currently, organics comprise two-thirds of the waste disposed in California landfills.

SB 1383 requires cities to adopt an enforceable ordinance to compel commercial businesses and residents to recycle their organic waste and to comply with other requirements of the bill. To meet this requirement, Norwalk's municipal code had to be updated.

"Given that SB 1383 is an unfunded mandate handed down to us by the state, it will affect all Norwalk residents and will be a challenge to implement these requirements," stated Mayor Jennifer Perez. "This leaves local governments in a position of ensuring compliance with the bill so that there are no fines handed down by the state."

As a result of SB 1383 and the regulations established by CalRecycle, Norwalk will have to implement certain practices to be in compliance. Examples include providing organic waste recycling services to all commercial, single-family, and multi-family properties; inspect and enforce compliance with SB 1383 by adopting an enforcement ordinance; and maintaining accurate and timely records of SB 1383 compliance for annual reporting requirements, among other things.

For now, Norwalk singlefamily residents will see no waste collection and recycling program jurisdictions are required to implement a mandatory organic recycling ordinance by January 1, 2022.

Norwalk volunteers gather to clean up Rosecrans off-ramp

■ A higher than expected turnout helps to clean up a freeway offramp; officials hope to have more clean-ups in the future.

NORWALK - The City of Norwalk, in partnership with CalTrans, held a successful community clean-up event this past week on Saturday, October 9. There were over 40 volunteers and staff that helped clean a portion of the southbound 605 Freeway near the Rosecrans Avenue off-ramp.

The event coincided with Clean California Day in the City of Norwalk, which is a day dedicated to improving the environment through litter collection, community engagement, and education ultimately protecting and cleaning the natural and built spaces while transforming unsightly roadsides into spaces of pride for all

"It's vital that the city is able to work with and coordinate these types of events with CalTrans. The off-ramps and on-ramps tend to get filled with debris from passing motorists," said Mayor Jennifer Perez. "Given the number of motorists that pass by daily and the fact that Norwalk has three freeways that pass through the city, it's important for them to be cleaned up regularly.'

Also assisting in the event were members from the California Conservation Corps, California Highway Patrol, Norwalk Public Safety, representatives from State Assemblymember Lisa Calderon's (57th District) office, and the Lions Club.

Event organizers were pleasantly surprised by the turnout of volunteers, having originally called for only 20-25 volunteers.

CalTrans provided masks, gloves, bags, pickers, eye protection, and transportation from the meeting point to the clean-up location. CalTrans also held a brief safety meeting before the start of the event.

"We applaud CalTrans for agreeing to schedule a clean-up of the 605-freeway off-ramp. This is essential to avoid any potential road hazards" said Mayor Perez.

The City of Norwalk hopes to hold monthly clean-up events with the help of CalTrans, which must agree to coordinate these events due to the possible closures of freeway roads and/or the on-ramps and off-ramps to the freeways.

Newsom signs law criminalizing secret condom removal during sex

■ The governor also signed legislation that enhances punishment for spousal rape.

NORWALK - California Governor Gavin Newsom signed two new laws on Thursday that provide more rights for victims of sexual assault and misconduct.

"stealthing" and the other spousal rape — were introduced by Assemblywoman Cristina unwanted pregnancy, they also physical disability. Garcia, who has been working on the laws for years and represents portions of Norwalk.

The first law, AB 453, makes it a civil sexual battery offense for eliminates an existing provision someone to engage in stealthing, or removing a condom during sex without verbal consent from their partner. The state is the first in the country to prohibit the act, according to the Associated

Under the new law, which Garcia has been advocating for since 2017, victims of stealthing can sue the person who commits the violation for damages and

"Sexual assaults, especially those on women of color, are perpetually swept under the rug," Garcia said in a statement. "...It's communities that defend and encourage stealthing and give advice on how to get away with removing the condom without the consent of their partner."

Newsom's office pointed to a 2017 Yale study that found both men and women have been the victim of stealthing. The researchers found that Both bills — one tackling along with victims being fearful described the experience as a "disempowering, "disempowering, demeaning violation of a sexual agreement."

The second law, AB 1171, that does not acknowledge spousal rape as the same as non-spousal rape. Spousal rape is illegal in every state, but California is one of nine states that differentiated it from nonspousal rape.

Prior to the bill's signing, California law defined rape as an "act of sexual intercourse accomplished with a person not the spouse of the perpetrator under certain circumstances."

Those circumstances include an inability to give legal consent because of a disorder or disability

Grocery store shelves aren't going back to normal this year

■ A variety of factors have limited food makers' abilities to keep their products in stock.

(CNN BUSINESS) - If you hoped grocery stores this fall and winter would look like they did in the Before Times, with limitless options stretching out before you in the snack, drink, candy and frozen foods aisles, get ready for some disappointing news.

Many of the country's biggest food makers are telling grocers that they will have limited quantities of a number of their products, including items such as Rice Krispies Treats, Sour Patch Kids, some Ben & Jerry's ice cream flavors, McCormick gourmet spices and Marie Callender's pot pies because of labor, commodity and transportation constraints throttling supply chains, according to emails viewed by CNN and interviews with grocers. These latest limits mean that stores won't have all things for all customers heading into the holidays, and shoppers may not be able to find some of their favorite products, flavors or niche items. ## Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

Everybody loves to snack. Today's question isn't so much

There is nothing wrong with snacking - in fact, it is generally better to eat small, frequent nutritious meals, as opposed to just a few enormous ones. This provides a steady flow of nutrients, and minimizes peaks and valleys. Those of us with very long work or school days will particularly benefit from good snacking. And, if you are among those who get ravenously hungry or suffer from low blood sugar between main meals, then snacking is an especially good idea.

However, a snack food or beverage does not need to be fast food, high in sugar, salty, or have poor nutritional value. It may be unrealistic to assume that all snacks should be highly nourishing, but let's see how we can shift them to the healthful side.

The proper number of snacks? It depends. A snack is best consumed before you feel too hungry, and certainly before you become hypoglycemic. Two to three per day is fine, as long as the portion size doesn't get in the way of eating your main meals. Avoid nighttime snacks if you are prone to acid reflux, or if you are not actually hungry. Diabetics generally find that at least a small nutritionally-balanced bedtime snack works well.

So, let's be specific. Snacks should be enjoyable, easy to prepare, and nutritious. Stick with natural foods, rather than highly processed foods. Read labels! Foods with high fiber, complex carbohydrates, and protein make good choices. Fast foods and highly processed foods tend to be low in nutritional value, and high in salt, fat, sugar, and calories. Undesirable choices include soda, chips, cookies, candy, donuts, and ice cream.

Here are a few examples of great snacks:

· Nuts: A mixture of nuts packs a lot of nutrition, and is linked to a reduction in diseases like heart disease. They provide a balance of healthy fat, protein, and fiber, and are very filling.

· Plain yogurt with mixed berries: It's delicious, a great source of calcium and potassium, and high in protein and antioxi-

· Apple slices with peanut butter: Apples and natural peanut butter taste just great together. Apples are high in fiber and antioxidants. Peanut butter raises the good cholesterol HDL, and reduces the bad cholesterol LDL and triglycerides.

· Cottage cheese with fruit: The cottage cheese provides fat and protein, and the fruit adds complex carbohydrates.

- · Hard-boiled eggs: Eggs are a healthy and weight-loss friendly food. They are loaded with protein and vitamins. While the yolk has a high cholesterol content, recent studies suggest that moderate egg consumption doesn't increase the risk of heart disease.
- · Beef jerky: Beef jerky makes a great high protein snack.
- · Edamame: Steamed raw soybeans are loaded with antioxidants, vitamins, minerals and fiber.
- · Toasted 100% whole grain English muffin with peanut butter: Another choice that is loaded with protein and fiber.
- · Trail mix: You can find many combinations of raw or toasted nuts and dried fruit - or, it's easy to make your own wellbalanced mix of good fats, fiber, and protein.
- Raw vegetables with guacamole or hummus: That crunch is enormously satisfying. This is a great blend of complex carbohydrates, protein, and fiber.
- · Dark chocolate with almonds: Need I say more? Well, sure: It's rich, satisfying and portable, and loaded with flavanols, monounsaturated fat, fiber, magnesium, and antioxidants.

Snacking can be a very good thing. It helps to level out the blood sugar, and is a good way to add more servings of fruits and vegetables to the diet. I urge you to do your best to avoid fast food and processed foods, and to focus on natural foods and a balance of nutrients. Enjoy!

Confused by Medicare options?

Each year, an important window of opportunity arrives for current Medicare beneficiaries as well as those about to enroll in the government's health insurance program for older Americans.

It's the Medicare open enrollment period, which runs annually from Oct. 15 to Dec. 7. During that time, new enrollments are allowed and current recipients can make changes to their plans.

The enrollment period is definitely not something to be taken lightly, says Chris Orestis, president of Retirement Genius (www.retirementgenius.com) and an authority on retirement planning, long-term care and financial health.

Orestis notes that Medicare, which covers more than 61 million people, is the most important payer of healthcare services in the United States for those 65 and older. Medicare spends more than $800 billion annually, which is almost a quarter of the country's healthcare spending.

If you are enrolling in Medicare for the first time, or need to change your plan, Orestis says a few important things to know include:

Traditional Medicare.

Traditional Medicare provides the same level of coverage to all enrollees across the country. There are no pre-existing condition limitations or wait periods. Every medical provider who accepts Medicare will treat a patient on traditional Medicare in any part of the country. "People who travel a lot or split time living in more than one state will typically enroll in traditional coverage, and then buy a Medicare Supplemental policy to limit their out-ofpocket exposure," Orestis says.

Medicare Parts A, B, C and D. Here's how the alphabet soup of Medicare coverage breaks down, Orestis says. Medicare Part A pays for hospital and skilled nursing facility care. Medicare Part B pays 80 percent of costs for doctors, outpatient services and medical equipment. Medicare Part C is private Advantage Plans. Medicare Part D provides a variety of options to pay for prescriptions.

Medicare Advantage.

Medicare Advantage Plans are managed as HMO or PPO programs by private health insurance companies. They have lower out-of-pocket costs for staying in-network. They also offer prescription services (replacing Medicare Part D), and extra services such as dental, vision, hearing, care-related home improvements, transportation and even meal services.

The costs. Understanding Medicare premiums and outof-pocket costs could mean the difference in thousands of dollars for enrollees, Orestis says. Most people will not pay a premium for Part A, but they will for Part B, Part C, and Part D. In 2021, the premium for Part B is $148.50 a month. The average Part D premium is $30.50 a month. Anyone who enrolls in a Medicare Advantage Plan or purchases a Medigap policy (which pays for any gaps in coverage), will pay premiums to the insurance company. Medicare Advantage enrollees still pay the Part B premium in addition to their Advantage Plan premiums. Medigap plans, sold by insurance companies, have a range of monthly premiums based on the plan type.

Prescription coverage. In addition to a monthly premium, Medicare Part D prescription coverage also has out-of-pocket costs. As of 2021, once out-ofpocket costs reach $4,130 the recipient is responsible for 25% of costs for the remainder of that year. If prescription drug costs reach $6,550 in the same year, the share paid by the individual will then decrease to 5%. "There are numerous Part D plans,' Orestis says, "so it is important to compare and contrast what drugs are covered and the associated costs so any needed changes can be made during the open enrollment period."

If you are confused, know that assistance is available, Orestis says. Free assistance also can be obtained through the State Health Insurance Assistance Program and the Medicare Rights Center. Also, the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services provides a wealth of information and resources.

There is only one way to save the Republican party from pro-Trump extremists

By Miles Taylor and Christine Todd Whitman

After Donald Trump's defeat, there was a measure of hope among Republicans who opposed him that control of the G.O.P. would be up for grabs, and that conservative pragmatists could take back the party. But it's become obvious that political extremists maintain a viselike grip on the national G.O.P., the state parties and the process for fielding and championing House and Senate candidates in next year's elections.

Rational Republicans are losing the G.O.P. civil war. And the only near-term way to battle pro-Trump extremists is for all of us to team up on key races and overarching political goals with our longtime political opponents: the Democratic Party.

This year we joined more than 150 conservatives — including former governors, senators, congressmen, cabinet secretaries, and party leaders - in calling for the Republican Party to divorce itself from Trumpism or else lose our support, perhaps by forming a new political party. Rather than return to founding ideals, G.O.P. leaders in the House and in many states have now turned belief in conspiracy theories and lies about stolen elections into a litmus test for membership and running for office.

Breaking away from the G.O.P. and starting a new center-right party may prove in time to be the last resort if Trump-backed candidates continue to win Republican primaries. We and our allies have debated the option of starting a new party for months and will continue to explore its viability in the long run. Unfortunately, history is littered with examples of failed attempts at breaking the two-party system, and in most states today the laws do not lend themselves easily to the creation and success of third parties.

So for now, the best hope for the rational remnants of the G.O.P. is for us to form an alliance with Democrats to defend American institutions, defeat far-right candidates, and elect honorable representatives next year — including a strong contingent of moderate Democrats.

It's a strategy that has worked. Mr. Trump lost re-election in large part because Republicans nationwide defected, with 7 percent who voted for Mr. Trump in 2016 flipping to support Joe Biden, a margin big enough to have made some difference in key swing states.

Even still, we don't take this position lightly. Many of us have spent years battling the left over government's role in society, and we will continue to have disagreements on fundamental issues like infrastructure spending, taxes and national security. Similarly, some Democrats will be wary of any pact with the political right.

But we agree on something more foundational — democracy. We cannot tolerate the continued hijacking of a major U.S. political party by those who seek to tear down our Republic's guardrails or who are willing to put one man's interests ahead of the country. We cannot tolerate the leaders of the G.O.P. — in 2022 or in the presidential election in 2024 refusing to accept the results of elections or undermining the certification of those results should they lose.

To that end, concerned conservatives must join forces with Democrats  $\,$ on the most essential near-term imperative: blocking Republican leaders from regaining control of the U.S. House of Representatives. Some of us have worked in the past with the House Republican leader, Kevin McCarthy, but as long as he embraces Mr. Trump's lies, he cannot be trusted to lead the chamber, especially in the run-up to the next presidential election.

And while many of us support and respect the Senate Republican leader, Mitch McConnell, it is far from clear that he can keep Mr. Trump's allies at bay, which is why the Senate may be safer remaining as a divided body rather than under Republican control.

For these reasons, we will endorse and support bipartisan-oriented moderate Democrats in difficult races, like Representative Abigail panberger of Virginia and Elissa Slotkin of Michigan and Senator Mark Kelly of Arizona, where they will undoubtedly be challenged by Trumpbacked candidates. And we will defend a small nucleus of courageous Republicans, such as Liz Cheney, Adam Kinzinger, Peter Meijer and others who are unafraid to speak the truth.

In addition to these leaders, this week we are coming together around a political idea — the Renew America Movement — and will release a slate of nearly two dozen Democratic, independent and Republican candidates

These "renewers" must be protected and elected if we want to restore a common-sense coalition in Washington. But merely holding the line will be insufficient. To defeat the extremist insurgency in our political system and pressure the Republican Party to reform, voters and candidates must be willing to form nontraditional alliances.

For disaffected Republicans, this means an openness to backing centrist Democrats. It will be difficult for lifelong G.O.P. members to do this — akin to rooting for the other team out of fear that your own is ruining the sport entirely — but democracy is not a game, which is why when push comes to shove, patriotic conservatives should put country

One of those races is in Pennsylvania, where a bevy of pro-Trump candidates are vying to replace the outgoing Republican senator, Pat

Toomey. The only prominent moderate in the G.O.P. primary, Craig Snyder, recently bowed out, and if no one takes his place, it will increase the urgency for Republican voters to stand behind a Democrat, such as centrist Representative Conor Lamb, who is running for the seat.

For Democrats, this similarly means being open to conceding that there are certain races where progressives simply cannot win and acknowledging that it makes more sense to throw their lot in with a center-right candidate who can take out a more radical conservative.

Utah is a prime example, where the best hope of defeating Senator Mike Lee, a Republican who defended Mr. Trump's refusal to concede the election, is not a Democrat but an independent and former Republican, Evan McMullin, a member of our group, who announced last week that he was entering the race.

We need more candidates like him prepared to challenge politicians who have sought to subvert our Constitution from the comfort of their 'safe" seats in Congress, and we are encouraged to note that additional independent-minded leaders are considering entering the fray in places like Texas, Arizona and North Carolina, targeting seats that Trumpist Republicans think are secure.

More broadly, this experiment in "coalition campaigning" — uniting concerned conservatives and patriotic progressives — could remake American politics and serve as an antidote to hyper-partisanship and

To work, it will require trust building between both camps, especially while fighting side by side in the toughest races around the country by learning to collaborate on voter outreach, sharing sensitive polling data, and synchronizing campaign messaging.

A compact between the center-right and the left may seem like an unnatural fit, but in the battle for the soul of America's political system, we cannot retreat to our ideological corners.

A great deal depends on our willingness to consider new paths of political reform. From the halls of Congress to our own communities, the fate of our Republic might well rest on forming alliances with those we

Miles Taylor served at the Department of Homeland Security from 2017 to 2019, including as chief of staff, under President Donald Trump. Christine Todd Whitman was the Republican governor of New Jersey from 1994 to 2001 and served as E.P.A. administrator under President George W. Bush.

Let Medicare negotiate its drug prices

By Froma Harrop

There's a drug war on TV. It has nothing to do with cocaine or heroin but does involve an addiction — the pharmaceutical industry's compulsion to charge Americans an average 3.4 times more for brandname drugs than people in other countries pay. Step 1 in the rehab program is to let Medicare negotiate prescription drug prices.

The drug makers, represented by Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America, or PhRMA, the main industry lobbying group, are running scare ads where seniors fret that they'd be denied lifesaving drugs if Congress applies brakes on what they can charge Medicare. In opposition, the leading interest group for older Americans is sponsoring ads in support of price negotiations. The AARP insists its elderly members would still get the drugs they need, pay lower premiums and get new

The AARP is right. Most Democrats agree, and so did Donald Trump when he first ran for president.

Upon getting elected, Trump made a top drug-company executive head of Health and Human Services, and the campaign promise vanished. stop drug makers from charging the federal health insurance program for

But we can now update his figure on savings to at least $450 billion over the elderly whatever they want "should enrage every senior who relies on 10 years, based on Congressional Budget Office numbers.

Most of those savings wouldn't leave the Medicare program but, as the budget plan says, go to providing dental, hearing and vision coverage. And beneficiaries would enjoy a $14 billion cut in their Part D premiums by 2029, according to the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation.

Then there are the taxpayers. General revenues — that is, federal income taxes — cover 71% of the costs of Medicare Part D, and states

This proposal hardly starves the pharmaceutical companies of revenues. It would cap the prices charged Medicare at 120% of those paid in Australia, Canada, France, Germany, Japan and the United Kingdom. In other words, we could still be paying more than these other rich countries. The difference is that drug makers could no longer gouge Americans with

The proposed Medicare cap would have reduced U.S. spending on "We are not allowed to negotiate drug prices. Can you believe it?" insulins and 50 top brand-name drugs by 52% during 2020 — a savings candidate Trump said in 2016. "We pay about $300 billion more than we of $83.5 billion, according to a RAND Corporation report. (The Veterans insulins and 50 top brand-name drugs by 52% during 2020 — a savings are supposed to, than if we negotiated the price. So there's $300 billion Administration has long negotiated prices and pays 54% less for drugs

PhRMA's public relations department recently wrote that efforts to Medicare for their life-saving medicines.

Actually, they're not enraged. An AARP survey finds that 87% of Americans 50 and older support letting Medicare negotiate drug prices. And nearly 90% of the general public wants it, according to a Kaiser Family Foundation poll.

One PhRMA ad falsely claims that politicians will "decide which medicines you can and can't get." The budget bill does no such thing. It would not require a prescription drug formulary. Insurers offering Medicare drug plans would still decide what drugs to cover. The negotiations would apply to only a few drugs that account for the highest spending and that lack generic competitors.

Lawmakers intent on protecting the drug-pricing racket include some Democrats. What most have in common with like-minded Republicans is open palms at the bottom of Big Pharma's money chute.

At some point, Americans will stop playing the world's suckers. Letting Medicare negotiate drug prices would be a fine place to start recovering our self-respect.

When are secrets not secret?

By Judge Andrew Napolitano

Last week, President George W. Bush's torture regime reared its head in an unusual argument before the U.S. Supreme Court.

In 2002, Abu Zubaydah was captured by a militia in Pakistan and handed over to the CIA, which brought him to Poland where, under the supervision of CIA agents and American psychologists, he was brutally tortured until his removal to the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base in Cuba in

The Bush administration argued that Zubaydah was a high-ranking member of al-Qaida who possessed information needed to fight the war on terror. After his torture produced no actionable information, the CIA told the Department of Justice and the Senate that Zubaydah was not a member of al-Qaida, and it had no evidence of wrongdoing by him

His lawyers filed a criminal complaint with the European Court of Human Rights against the CIA, its psychologists and the Polish intelligence agents who carried out the torture.

That court concluded that the torture did occur, and it referred the matter to Polish prosecutors to proceed criminally against the defendants. During that criminal proceeding, Polish prosecutors asked the DOJ for the names of those who tortured Zubaydah and documentation of what they

In the Supreme Court last week, the government's lawyer conceded that the names of the torturers and the nature of their grisly deeds are already known — the psychologists wrote a book about it — but the government will not confirm any of it because it constitutes state secrets.

So, if these so-called secrets are now publicly known, why does the government refuse to confirm them?

Here is the backstory.

On Oct. 6, 1948, a U.S. government plane was leaving from Robins Air Force Base in Warner Robins, Georgia, for a round-trip flight to Orlando, Florida, when it crashed, killing its crew. When surviving family members sued the government to determine who manufactured the plane and why it crashed, the feds declined to provide any information asserting that what was sought constituted state secrets.

In 1953, when the Supreme Court upheld this novel argument, it effectively changed the rules of evidence by permitting the federal government — without disclosing to a judge what the secrets are — to withhold evidence merely by making this claim.

Since 1953, the government has successfully asserted the state secrets claim dozens of times, each time claiming that the revelation of the socalled secrets will adversely affect national security.

In 2001, after the statute of limitations had long expired for any litigation over the 1948 crash, and reporters filed Freedom of Information Act requests for the alleged state secrets, a judge ordered the government to reveal them

There were none.

The entire state secrets doctrine was based on covering up government embarrassment and wrongdoing, not the retention of legitimate secrets.

Now, back to the Zubaydah case in which he subpoenaed the DOJ for the records of his torture. Everyone involved in the oral argument knew that the state secrets doctrine was based on material misrepresentations the feds made to at least a dozen federal judges, yet the government treated it as if it were legitimate and compelling. The government argued that in wartime, its powers to keep its behavior secret are enhanced.

When Justice Brett Kavanaugh asked what war the U.S. is currently fighting that underlies its state secrets claim, the DOJ lawyer answered that the U.S. is still at war in Afghanistan!

The government's argument that the U.S. is still at war in Afghanistan  $\cdot$  this must be news to President Joseph R. Biden - is, of course, absurd. Yet its cavalier assertion raises serious constitutional questions about war, torture and secrets.

The state secrets doctrine is a fraud and has been used by the feds to cover up embarrassments and unlawful behavior for 68 years. And its employment by federal judges who have declined to require that the government produce the secrets for a judicial examination in secret — so the courts can determine if these secrets do exist and if their revelation would harm national security - is a craven rejection of a core judicial function.

That function is to assure that trials are fair and their outcome is based on evidence, not deception.

The claim that somehow the existence of war — in this case, a war that the whole world, except one federal prosecutor, knows is over somehow justifies the detention without charges of a person as to whom the government has no evidence of wrongdoing, and that somehow war justifies torture, and that somehow all of this can be kept secret are claims that violate the Constitution and the federal anti-torture statutes that all who work for the government have sworn to uphold.

The Fifth Amendment guarantees Zubaydah due process, and the First Amendment guarantees transparency.

The government does not want to confront this. That Zubaydah was tortured for four years before the CIA and its Polish collaborators concluded that he was truthful demonstrates not only the reality of the government's resort to criminal and medieval means to gather facts but also that torture as a means to the truth is useless and ruinous.

For all we know, Bush pardoned the psychologists and CIA agents who monitored the torture, but he could not pardon the Polish agents whose names and methods may soon be revealed.

At the end of the oral argument, Justice Neil Gorsuch asked the DOJ lawyer why the DOJ doesn't permit Zubaydah to testify in the Polish proceedings. The same lawyer who had just told Kavanaugh that the U.S. is still fighting in Afghanistan had no answer.

The government undermines the Constitution when it lies and when it tortures. What kind of society enforces criminal laws against harmless drug users but not against harmful government torturers

Groceries are in limited supply across the nation

Around 18% of beverages, 15% of frozen foods, 16% of snacks, 15% of candy and 18% of bakery items were out of stock at stores during the week ending on October 3, according to the latest data from IRI, which tracks in-stock levels at leading US grocery chains, big box stores, pharmacies and wholesale clubs.

Before the pandemic, 7% to 10% of products were typically out of stock on shelves, according to IRI.

When supply is tight, manufacturers often eliminate some of their fringe items to focus on ramping up production of top-selling products, said Krishnakumar Davey, president of IRI's strategic analytics practice. They also tend to cut products that are more expensive to make, according to Davey.

'The new norm'

Some food brands are imposing allocations, or purchase caps, for certain products on grocery stores and distributors, while other vendors are warning more generally of limited availability. Suppliers typically put products on allocation when there are supply shortfalls.

The allocations have not been confined to one area of the country or a single type of retailer, said an executive at a leading regional wholesaler. Instead, they are happening nationally, according to the executive, who spoke on the condition of anonymity to protect the company's relationships with suppliers and other wholesalers. But the limits could pose particular challenges for independent grocers, who have raised concerns in the past year that suppliers prioritize larger competitors over small stores.

Kellogg told at least four grocery distributors last month in an email that Pringles Snacks Stacks, Eggo pancakes and MorningStar Farms plant-based hot dogs and bacon will be on allocation and Rice Krispies Treats snacks "will remain below service expectations" through the end of the year. The company also requested that stores cancel their promotions for Rice Krispies and Corn Pops cereal "to allow for recovery." Kellogg said in the email that it was experiencing "constraints" in capacity and packaging materials and labor pressure.

(This was before 1,400 Kellogg cereal factory workers went on strike distribution," a Unilever spokesperson told CNN said in an email. Tuesday.)

The four distributors shared the email with CNN Business on the condition of anonymity to avoid jeopardizing their relationships with Kris Bahner, a spokesperson for Kellogg, said in an email that the company has seen increased demand since the start of the pandemic as people eat more meals at home. Bahner said the company works with retailers "to ensure our food flows through their systems" and, in instances where capacity is tight, it limits orders over certain time periods. The company did not say how many retailers received allocation notifications.

Mondelez is experiencing "limited availability" on items such as Sour Patch Kids and Swedish fish candy, Toblerone chocolate and Halls cough drops "due to supply chain constraints," the company said in an October 1 email to a distributor. Mondelez estimated in the email that the "recovery date" for these items will be in February or March of next year.

A spokesperson for the multinational food and beverage company said in an email that the company is facing "high demand for labor" and "logistics challenges." Mondelez believes it is "relatively wellpositioned to face the marketplace challenges and will continue to keep a close eye on things" to get products to retail customers and shoppers on time. The company also did not say how many retailers received limits on such items, but said "we prepare communications which our sales team has the ability to use, as appropriate, as they engaged with their customers.'

Unilever told a distributor in an email on September 14 that "labor shortages continue to drive a limited ability to meet demand" and it was de-prioritizing production on certain products including Ben & Jerry's Cold Brew Caramel Latte and Ice Cream Sammie flavors, Breyers vanilla fudge twirl ice cream and Firecracker popsicles "until we are able to return to a supply steady-state." The company said it would instead "focus labor hours on our top-selling items.

"Like many sectors, at times there are challenges in getting all our product to stores, for a variety of reasons related to supply and

Packaging issues also continue to be a problem. For example, some seasonings are in tight supply due to challenges procuring glass

A McCormick representative said in an email to two distributors on September 20 that "our U.S. bottle supplier shut down due to a Covid related issue and we have not received bottles for several weeks" for its gourmet spices line. "The lack of bottles has impacted our production and is eroding our safety stock across the entire line," the representative said. As a result, McCormick said, it would ship approximately 70% of what it had previously forecast, and the company was encouraging customers to cancel their promotions in November and December for the spices line.

Lori Robinson, a spokesperson for McCormick, said in an email to CNN Business that "Gourmet is the only product line impacted by this packaging shortage," and the company's more recognizable red-cap spices will be fully in-stock throughout the holidays, which customers can use as a substitute for the gourmet spices, she said. The company did not say how many retailers received allocation notifications on gourmet seasonings.

And some sizes of Marie Callender's frozen pot pies could be harder to find.

Conagra said in a September 27 email to a distributor that it was putting an allocation on Marie Callender's 10 ounce and 15 ounce pot pies until November 29 because it "encountered packing material challenges from our tray and carton supplier resulting in a production

Conagra did not respond to requests for comment.

"I don't feel like I'm free," she said at a 2015 rally. "I'm not out International Photographers Union, Local 659 of the IATSE. She was Chieh Huang, CEO of online bulk goods retailer Boxed, said "allocations are the new norm" from food and packaged goods' makers and are impacting the levels of products in stock at Boxed. Still, he said, "the industry is better off than we were this time last year.

The La Mirada Matadores are the game of the week, as they just fell short to host Mayfair, 15-10, Friday (Oct. 8).

St. Paul, which had a bye last week, is atop the heap of those teams with a perfect, 6-0 record and will take on St. Francis (5-1) for the first of three Angelus League games.

Norwalk (6-2, 2-0) is unbeaten in the Suburban League with a 54-0 win over Firebaugh last week. They will play La Mirada tonight (Oct. 15).

Santa Fe and John Glenn both suffered shutout losses last week, against La Serna (55o) and Garden Grove (49-0), respectively.

Mayfair outside linebacker, Jake Snow (12 tackles, 6 solo), made two big plays to thwart La Mirada from scoring.

The junior stopped freshman running back Matt Gallegos on third-and-goal at the five and then sacked La Mirada junior quarterback Neheul Garcia to end the game.

"We're really struggling offensively," Moschetti said.

"Our D-line really played well and kept us in the game.

After Mayfair opened with the first possession of the game, La Mirada sophomore outside linebacker Frank Torres intercepted a pass from junior quarterback Evan Tomich (12 for 17, 124 yards, TD) at the Monsoons 38-yard line.

Three minutes later, La Mirada senior kicker Aidan Petruescu gave the Matadores the early, 3-0 lead with a 32-yard field goal with seven minutes left
