City Council opposes sheriff's moratorium on law enforcement

■ Councilmembers voiced their disdain for Sheriff Villanueva's moratorium of law enforcement, and received updates on the state of the COVID-19 pandemic in Norwalk.

By Vincent Medina Contributor

NORWALK – The Norwalk City Council expressed their frustration over LA Sheriff Alex Villanueva's moratorium on the hire of LA County Sheriff deputies during Tuesday's city hall meeting.

Councilwoman Jennifer Perez explained that Villanueva's action prevents the hire of Sheriff deputies in the city. She explained that the move goes against Norwalk residents' vote to increase the sales tax to fund public safety.

"I do not like being told what we can or cannot do here in our city," said the councilwoman. "I'd like to ask our mayor and city manager to prepare a very strongly worded letter, and get involved with our city attorney, that we oppose this moratorium."

"I would like for that to happen sooner rather than later."

Councilmember Margarita Rios echoed Perez's message, citing her experience as a law enforcement professional.

supervisors know that this is unacceptable," said Rios. "I want everyone to understand the impact this has on our community and us."

Mayor Rick Ramirez and the council later took the time to recognize LA County Sheriff Department Homicide Detective Grant Oberle, Sergeant Daniel Rodriguez, and Sergeant Julio Saldana for their work to keep the community safe.

After thanking city employees and volunteers for their hard work during the winter holiday events such as Angel Tree and Stuff A Bus, the council expressed their condolences to the family of Shannon and Ashley Alvarez. The mother and young daughter were killed in a violent car accident on Public Safety Lieutenant Eric Wosick addressed the council and explained the proposed adoption of the Hazard Mitigation Plan.

Wosick detailed that the plan would help assess the risks and minimize property damage and public health risks during a natural or man-made disaster.

"I would like to take it a adapt to address any new issues," step further and let our county said the public safety lieutenant. "We will also update the plan every five years.

> The council voted to pass the Hazard Mitigation Plan.

Wosick continued to update the council on the state of the COVID-19 pandemic in the city.

According to the LA County Department of Public Health, 429 people in Norwalk have died from COVID and 26,822 people in the city have tested positive for COVID since the start of the pandemic.

On Jan. 16, LA County found 43,883 new cases of COVID and 53 people died from the virus.

"We've seen a significant increase since my last update. Cases are 20 times higher than in December when there were 20,000 new cases a day," said "Hospitalizations and deaths are the main concern. We are averaging 600 hospitalizations per day from COVID, and 27% of people in the ICU from the virus are on ventilators.'

He says 25% of all ICU patients are COVID positive, and 80% of all ICU beds in the county are occupied.

COVID positivity rate at schools slowly dropping in LA County

■ Fewer students and campus confirmed infections. stan are testing positive for the coronavirus, spurring guarded optimism.

By City News Service

NORWALK - With the Omicron fueling variant COVID-19 spread across the county, the number of school campuses reporting positive cases rose sharply as classes resumed this month, but the rate of students and staff testing positive for the virus has begun declining, health officials said Wednesday.

According to the county Department of Public Health, 1,032 K-12 schools reported positive cases last week, a 55% increase from the first week of December, when 665 campuses identified.

The low number of campus outbreaks indicates that the high number of infections are due to general virus spread in "Prioritizing and ensuring the community, rather than safety at schools during a surge a targeted cluster of cases at schools, according to the county.

County health officials said the rate of students and staff testing positive for the virus was 11% last week, down from 15% the previous week.

She urged parents to ensure and to follow quarantine and isolation rules.

Meanwhile, the number of COVID-positive patients in county hospitals continued rising Wednesday, with state figures putting the total at 4,799, up from 4,701 on Tuesday. The number of those patients being treated in intensive care rose to 700, up from 680 a day earlier.

With increased hospitalizations, higher death totals always follow, and the county reported 59 new virusrelated fatalities Wednesday. That brought the county's overall virus death toll to 28,181.

Another 31,018 infections were also confirmed, giving the county a cumulative pandemic total of 2,343,821.

While the overall COVID children and staff safe," county their children are participating in hospitalization number remains below last winter's peak of more than 8,000, health officials stressed that the rising patient President Jimmy Carter pardoned population is creating strain at hospitals that were already coping with staffing shortages. Those shortages have been exacerbated by COVID cases among healthcare workers, which have also been rising.

> The average daily rate of people testing positive for the virus rose slightly Wednesday, to 16.9%, up from 16.3% on Tuesday. The rate had fallen each day since last week, when it topped 20%.

A month ago, the testingpositivity rate was just 2%.

Mayors head to Washington, D.C.

■ Downey Mayor Blanca Pacheco was in Washington this week for a national conference of mayors.

DOWNEY – Downey Mayor Blanca Pacheco is in Washington, D.C. this week for the 2022 U.S. Conference of Mayors Winter Meeting, where mayors from U.S. cities with more than 30,000 residents will hear from congressional leaders, Biden administration officials, foreign ambassadors and other experts.

Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti, who chairs the group's Infrastructure Task Force, spoke Wednesday morning at the opening news conference hosted by USCM President and Miami Mayor Francis Suarez.

The goal of the meeting is to discuss how to achieve the cities' 2022 goals, and Wednesday's sessions focus on metropolitan economies and immigration issues, as well as implementing the spending of American Rescue Plan Act funds and reducing gun violence and homelessness.

Ex-LBUSD safety officer ordered to stand trial on murder charge

■ Video footage shows the officer shooting at an 18-yearold woman as she fled in her vehicles.

LONG BEACH -- A former Long Beach Unified School District safety officer was ordered Wednesday to stand trial on a murder charge stemming from an 18- year-old woman's fatal shooting last year.

Eddie Gonzalez -- who was fired by the LBUSD about a week after shooting Manuela "Mona" Rodriguez in the head Sept. 27 as she sat inside a moving car -was charged a month later with her killing. He pleaded not guilty at a Dec. 8 court hearing.

Long Beach police responding to the scene found the woman with at least one gunshot wound.

> Shortly after announcement that the former school safety officer had been charged, one of the woman's brothers, Oscar Rodriguez, told reporters that it was the "first step of justice and hopefully our healing process."

> "I've waited a long time for something that is pretty obvious, but I guess this is how the justice system works," he said.

> In a letter sent to District Attorney George Gascon earlier urging charges against the officer, an attorney for the woman's family wrote that "various videos of the incident were captured by bystanders showing Officer Gonzalez taking reckless action when he shot into a moving

> "This officer had no justification to use deadly force against Ms. Rodriguez because Ms. Rodriguez did not pose an imminent threat to the officer when she was shot by the officer," attorney Luis Carrillo wrote in the letter to Gascon.

"The actions of this officer constitute a serious violation of state and federal constitutional rights. The unjustified use of deadly force by this officer also meet the threshold for criminal charges against the officer for murder or for manslaughter."

On Oct. 6, the school district announced that Gonzalez had violated district policies on use of force and had been fired.

"After our internal review, we clearly saw areas where the employee violated district policy and did not meet our standards and expectations," LBUSD Superintendent Jill Baker said.

"We believe the decision to terminate this officer's employment is warranted, justified and quite frankly, the right thing to do.

"The use-of-force policy used by our school safety office states officers shall not fire at a fleeing person, shall not fire at a moving vehicle and shall not fire through a vehicle window unless circumstances clearly warrant the use of a firearm as a final means of defense. Again, based on our review, we believe our internal policy was violated."

It is unclear whether Gonzalez is the first school safety officer to be charged with murder. Gascon said prosecutors were not able to find any other school safety officers who had faced a murder count, but added, "That's not to say that it hasn't occurred

Amid a national blood shortage, let gay men donate

By Steve Chapman

In 2016, a mass shooter at Pulse, a gay nightclub in Orlando, Florida, killed 49 people and wounded another 53. The need for blood was urgent, and thousands of people lined up to donate. But some of those most eager to give were turned away for one reason: They were sexually active gay

The Food and Drug Administration's rule barred blood donations from men who had engaged in carnal relations with other men in the previous year. In 2020, the agency reduced the time to three months. Today, the Red Cross reports the worst shortage of blood in more than 10 years due to the latest surge in COVID-19. But it is still obligated to reject many gay men who might donate. And the rationale for that ban grows less convincing all the time.

It dates back to the early years of the AIDS epidemic, when the disease was taking a terrible toll. Some people contracted HIV from transfusions, and it took time to develop tests to detect it in blood. So the FDA implored gay men not to donate, and in 1986, it barred them outright. Because tests couldn't pick up all the infections, extreme caution was in order.

When AIDS emerged, it had the regrettable effect of aggravating homophobic views held by many Americans. Conservative polemicist Pat Buchanan wrote: "The poor homosexuals — they have declared war on nature, and now nature is exacting an awful retribution." So the FDA wasn't battling a tide of skepticism about a policy that singled out gay

But a lot has changed in the past 36 years. Medicines exist to make Those whose HIV has been suppressed by treatment can't pass it on to others. Improved tests mean the virus can be detected except when it was contracted within the previous 10 to 16 days.

Broader shifts have also occurred. In 1986, the Supreme Court upheld a Georgia law making gay sex a crime, as nearly half the states had done. Discrimination against gays was far more common.

In 2003, however, the court struck down all sodomy laws. In 2015, it held that same-sex couples are constitutionally entitled to marry. In 2020, it ruled that the 1964 Civil Rights Act protects gays from employment discrimination.

After all this time, though, the FDA retains the ban — not from any apparent animus against gays, but from an excess of caution. At times like these, though, it becomes clear that the policy imposes real costs by reducing donations of blood and does little to prevent disease.

restriction to three months, the number of blood donations contaminated with HIV did not increase. Tests, fortunately, serve to screen out the vast majority of the infected blood. The grounds for rejecting any gay man who hasn't been celibate for the past three months are shaky at best. The Human Rights Campaign, a LGBTQ advocacy group, argues that the FDA should focus on risky behaviors, not sexual orientation.

A study in 2020 found that when the agency reduced the 12-month

As things stand, it notes, "a man who has had protected oral sex with another man once in the 3 months currently barred from donating HIV a manageable condition rather than the death sentence it used to be. blood. Yet a woman who has had unprotected sex with multiple partners over the same time frame with no knowledge of their personal histories remains in the donor pool."

> Many countries no longer put any special restrictions on gay men. Among them are Britain, Italy, Israel and Spain — and, starting in March, France. "We are putting an end to an inequality that was no longer justified," tweeted the French health minister. Other nations, notably Germany and the Netherlands, allow donations from those in

> When the FDA cut the waiting period from 12 months to three, the American Medical Association gave one cheer. It urged the agency "to remove the categorical restrictions for blood donations by (men who have sex with men) so they are instead based on a person's individual risk, consistent with the latest scientific evidence, to ensure blood donation criteria is equitably applied across all people.'

> The American Red Cross agrees. Lifting the ban on sexually active gay men would undoubtedly attract more donors.

> The lives of patients are at risk when the supply fails to keep up with the demand, which is why we should remove obstacles that keep people from giving blood. There's never a downside in having too many donors. There's always a downside in having too few.

Bringing star athletes back to earth

By Froma Harrop

It was with dry eyes that Australians waved goodbye to Novak Djokovic, the tennis superstar their country sent packing because he wasn't vaccinated against COVID-19. Their laws require that foreigners entering the country be vaccinated. The Serbian, there to defend his Australian Open title, apparently assumed he'd fly past the rules governing mere Djokovic has endorsement deals worth an estimated $30 million a year. His arrogant refusal to follow the public health mandates imposed on ordinary Australians may cut into his commercial worth, as it should.

One sponsor, the French clothing brand Lacoste, has already said it would review the controversy. In not a good sign for Djokovic, it also thanked the Open's organizers "for all their efforts to ensure that the tournament is held in good conditions for players, staff and spectators."

As a very casual consumer of professional sports, it is has long mystified me how doing masterful things with a ball justified dumpsters of gold in compensation. As a taxpayer, I resent being asked to subsidize professional sports arenas. As a subscriber to cable TV, I resent the "sports fee" tacked onto my bill. This source of enrichment for professional teams and their players — sneakily made to look like a tax — is especially aggravating to we who don't care who is playing, where they are playing information fans, all the more reason to send him packing. or what they are playing.

This much-shared irritation with entitled sports celebrities precedes the row over COVID-19 vaccinations. But when you add other bad behaviors to contempt for public health measures, you wonder how long before a hole is blown in their inflated value

Another prominent example is Kyrie Irving, the Brooklyn Nets' guard. New York City mandates that professional athletes be vaccinated if they Irving was to be paid more than $35 million this season but is not on the court because he refuses to get his shots. Irving says he doesn't object to the vaccine. He just doesn't want to be told to get it — this in a city where delivery guys can't enter a diner without proof of vaccination.

In November, Mayor-elect Eric Adams said that New York would not make an exemption for Irving. And although the Nets could let Irving play Brooklyn home games if they pay a (paltry) fine of $5,000 per violation, the NBA refused to give a green light. The NBA holds that teams must follow local laws, probably for the sport's own good.

The assumption that sports heroes are unconditionally venerated reached a ridiculous height when Djokovic's lawyers argued that Froma Harrop is a syndicated columnist who writes about politics, culture and by cancelling his visa, Australia could be stoking hostility toward vaccinations. Really, if his refusal to get his shots influences low-

Look. I've seen the emotional powers of sports heroes. My home used to be a house of worship for Tom Brady. Those days are gone.

ESPN writer Howard Bryant worries what this outlandish sense of entitlement will ultimately do to professional sports. Bryant noted that the usually admirable Los Angeles Lakers forward LeBron James has posted memes likening COVID-19 to the flu. Green Bay Packers quarterback Aaron Rodgers lied about being vaccinated and then trolled his critics with the claim that he was some sort of Ayn Rand

Some insist that the Australian government was making an example of Djokovic. Actually, the government was simply not making an exception for him. The pedestal on which sport celebrities stand is

Being sick changed my healthcare views

By Ross Douthat

Often around the turn of the year I perform an act of pundit accountability, looking back on the previous year's columns to assess the things that I got wrong. For this January's edition, though, I'm going to take a different kind of backward glance, and try to answer one of the frequent questions I received when I wrote, last fall, about my experience with chronic illness: Namely, has being sick altered any of my views on health care policy?

It's a good question; the answer, like health policy itself, is

For an example of my pre-illness views, consider a column I wrote in 2013, in the midst of the endless Obamacare debates. Titled "What Health Insurance Doesn't Do," it looked at evidence from an Oregon study tracing the effects of a Medicaid expansion that happened via lottery, creating a genuine randomization in the population that had the chance to enroll.

The results, after a couple of years, showed that access to Medicaid helped people avoid "catastrophic expenditures" and reduced their depression rates. The program did not, however, seem to have much impact on recipients' physical health. This was a counterintuitive finding but not necessarily a surprising one: From a famous RAND experiment in the 1970s and early 1980s down to a recent National Bureau of Economic Research paper looking at the effects of insurance in India, it's common to get results suggesting that the relationship between health insurance spending and physical health is relatively weak.

With these findings in mind, my 2013 self warned against health insurance profligacy, on the grounds that if we try to provision everyone with comprehensive coverage, we'll probably end up encouraging overspending on unnecessary care. Instead, the ideal insurance system would cover genuinely catastrophic expenses, helping people avoid bankruptcy and the worst kind of mental stress — but avoiding the overtreatment and cost inflation that you get when you earmark too many public dollars for health and health alone.

I was healthy then; two years later I began my strange descent. And one part of the experience took those pre-illness views — I'd call them center-right with a libertarian flavor — and pushed them to the left.

This was the part of the experience where I was sick and had absolutely no idea what was wrong with me — which meant that I went from doctor to doctor, specialist to specialist, submitting to tests that succeeded only in ruling out various plausible diagnoses, without actually pinning down the source of all my blazing pain.

In these months I was given an object lesson in the ambiguities contained in terms like "overtreatment" and "unnecessary care." Because considering my ultimate diagnosis, all of these visits were a form of overtreatment. What I really had, though I didn't know it, was a tickborne illness. Yet here I was undergoing tilt-table tests and going in for a CT scan and an endoscopy, running up a huge tab on my New York Times Company insurance policy for tests and procedures that did nothing direct or immediate for my health.

Yet from my perspective as a patient it was all reasonable and necessary, because my illness was severe and needed treatment, and there was no way at the time to know which specialist would be the one who helped, which test or scan would be the one that revealed what was really going on. Nor was I in any position to act as a discerning consumer or a or cardiologists while my legs burned and my chest blazed. Instead, as disease once commonly dismissed as a species of "hysteria," is caused by a patient I was simply too vulnerable and desperate to do anything save throw myself on the medical system's mercy.

So my desperate self gained a new appreciation for the things that make health care unique among the burdens that the welfare state is intended to alleviate, and the limits of a libertarian vision of the patient as a cost-sensitive consumer. And I also gained a greater appreciation for the thing that, in the Oregon study, Medicaid spending clearly did seem to achieve — the importance of insurance coverage for stable mental health, greater peace of mind, in situations where you're worried that not only your body might be ravaged but also your finances as well.

But then comes the complicating factor, the part of my experience that turned me more right-wing. Because in the second phase of my illness, once I knew roughly what was wrong with me and the problem was how to treat it, I very quickly entered a world where the official medical consensus had little to offer me. It was only outside that consensus, among Lyme disease doctors whose approach to treatment lacked any C.D.C. or F.D.A. imprimatur, that I found real help and real hope.

And this experience made me more libertarian in various ways, more skeptical not just of our own medical bureaucracy, but of any centralized approach to health care policy and medical treatment.

This was true even though the help I found was often expensive and it generally wasn't covered by insurance; like many patients with chronic Lyme, I had to pay in cash. But if I couldn't trust the C.D.C. to recognize the effectiveness of these treatments, why would I trust a more socialized system to cover them? After all, in socialized systems cost control often epends on some centralized authority — like Britain's National Institute for Health and Care Excellence or the controversial, stillborn Independent Payment Advisory Board envisioned by Obamacare — setting rules or guidelines for the system as a whole. And if you're seeking a treatment that official expertise does not endorse, I wouldn't expect such an authority to be particularly flexible and open-minded about paying for it.

Quite the reverse, in fact, given the trade-off that often shows up in health policy, where more free-market systems yield more inequalities but also more experiments, while more socialist systems tend to achieve their egalitarian advantages at some cost to innovation. Thus many European countries have cheaper prescription drugs than we do, but at a meaningful cost to drug development. Americans spend obscene, unnecessary-seeming amounts of money on our system; America also produces an outsize share of medical innovations.

And if being mysteriously sick made me more appreciative of the value of an equalizing floor of health-insurance coverage, it also made me aware of the incredible value of those breakthroughs and discoveries, the importance of having incentives that lead researchers down unexpected paths, even the value of the unusual personality types that become doctors in the first place. (Are American doctors overpaid relative to their developed-world peers? Maybe. Am I glad that American medicine is remunerative enough to attract weird Type A egomaniacs who like to buck consensus? Definitely.)

Whatever everyday health insurance coverage is worth to the sick person, a cure for a heretofore-incurable disease is worth more. The cancer patient has more to gain from a single drug that sends their disease into remission than a single-payer plan that covers a hundred drugs that don't. Or to take an example from the realm of chronic illness, just last good capitalist, to do price comparisons between different neurologists week researchers reported strong evidence that multiple sclerosis, a the Epstein-Barr virus. If that discovery someday yields an actual cure for MS, it will be worth more to people suffering from the disease than any insurance coverage a government might currently offer them.

So if the weakness of the libertarian perspective on health insurance is its tendency minimize the strange distinctiveness of illness, to treat patients too much like consumers and medical coverage too much like any other benefit, the weakness of the liberal focus on equalizing cost and coverage is the implicit sense that medical care is a fixed pie in need of careful divvying, rather than a zone where vast benefits await outside the realm of what's already available.

Alas, I don't have some perfect policy regime that synthesizes these insights — the value of solid coverage that doesn't require too much of individual patients, the value of decentralization and innovation and experiments. It's precisely the challenge of synthesizing them that makes health policy so difficult.

But if I was an Obamacare skeptic before I got sick, today I'm relatively comfortable with the uneasy, unfinished place where the 2010 health care reform has ended up.

A decade ago, if you'd told me that the law's clearest legacy was its Medicaid expansion, and that the attempts to build a thriving individualinsurance market and rein in unnecessary spending had met with less success, I might have looked at its architects' grand ambitions and called that outcome a failure.

Today, though, I have more appreciation for the reassuring simplicity of the basic Medicaid guarantee, and more skepticism about the patientas-consumer hopes that undergird Obamacare's exchanges. And as for all the American-style bloat and unnecessary spending that the Obama technocrats hoped to purge from the system and mostly didn't — well, I have a little more appreciation for that as well.

Don't get me wrong: If I had a simple way to take a scalpel to hospital monopolies and their profits I'd still do it. If you presented me with a blueprint to expand means-testing in Medicare and use the savings to fund new research programs, I'd embrace it. If you offered me a plan to reduce prescription-drug costs by reducing regulatory burdens on new treatments, I'd celebrate it.

But once you've become part of the American pattern of trying anything, absolutely anything in order to feel better — and found that spirit essential to your own recovery — the idea of medical cost control as a primary policy goal inevitably loses some of its allure, and the American way of medical spending looks a little more defensible. To just try things without counting the cost can absolutely run to excess. But sometimes what seems like waste on the technocrat's ledger is the lifeline that a desperate patient needs.

Eagles fall to Westcliff, 61-54, in nonconference game

■ Covid protocols stunted Biola, who chased Westcliff for most of the game

By John M. Sherrard Contributor

LA MIRADA - After a successful road trip to Hawaii recently, the Biola Women's Basketball team came back to the mainland for a non-conference game slightly short-handed.

The Eagles, who are off to a good start this season with an overall 8-5 record, are in the playoff hunt with an early 4-2 PacWest record in fourth place in the 11-team conference.

The team was a bit short with two players left behind on their recent Hawaii trip Jan. 6-8, due to Covid quarantine.

In addition, coach Alan Nakamura was absent from Tuesday's (Jan. 18) 61-54 loss to visiting Westcliff University (Irvine), as he stayed behind with the two players

The Eagles defeated both Hawaii Pacific (72-65) and Chaminade (65-53) on the island

Initially, the opening game of the trip was scheduled to be the Hawaii Hilo game, but due to Covid protocols at the Hilo campus, the game was moved to the back end of the three-game trip. Unfortunately, Biola landed in protocols and that game was cancelled. Multiple players had to stay back, with all but two back on the La Mirada campus.

Last Saturday's game against Point Loma was also postponed due to Covid protocols.

The Westcliff contest was the first of seven consecutive home games for the Eagles - three of which are the Hawaii schools, freshman guard Amiah Simmons beginning Saturday (Jan. 22)

"There's an awful lot going on, but we just had to deal with the circumstances that were dealt with," Biola assistant coach Gamal Smalley said. "We're praising God that we at least had a game to play.

"Our head coach and our starting point guard are locked in a room in Hilo, Hawaii watching the game on the computer.'

It only got worse for the Lady Eagles team, explained Smalley.

"Our leading scorer just got off of a plane on Monday and hadn't touched a ball in a week," players are also in the same predicament."

That all led to a subpar performance in the game against Westcliff, which came into the game with a 5-7 record.

Biola, which only led briefly in the early going of the opening quarter, trailed by a handful of points for most of the game.

The Warriors built up their largest lead of the game, 16 points, 50-34, with eight minutes left in rebounds (8 ORE, 7 DRB). the fourth quarter.

With 2:23 left in the game and trailing by 13 points, 56-43 and with the game seemingly out of reach for Biola, the Eagles began a comeback

"I was pleased with the effort at the end," said Smalley, of the late comeback. "We just never gave up and I love that about our team to have character and so they fought to the end. Unfortunately, it wasn't enough to overcome that deficit and we were handed a

Biola outscored Westcliff, 11-5, in those last couple of minutes to end the game on a positive note, as leading scorer for Biola, and redshirt sophomore forward Jordan Rabe scored four and three points, respectively, in that time

In the opening quarter, it was a low-scoring affair, with the Warriors holding a 14-8 lead.

Both teams stepped up the scoring the remainder of the way, as Westcliff built up a nine-point halftime lead, 31-22.

A layup by Rabe at the 3:12 mark of the second quarter brough the Eagles within two points, 24-22, but Westcliff finished the half with seven consecutive points.

Westcliff stretched the lead to explained Smalley. "Three other 16 points by the end of the third quarter, 48-32, but the fourth quarter was a different story for the Eagles with a 22-point

> Rabe led the way in the quarter with nine points.

As a team, the Biola bench outscored Westcliff, 25-3, in the

In the game, Rabe (8-17 FGM-A, 2 Blks, 2 Stls) had a teamhigh 17 points and a game-high 15

Rabe was one of the players who just returned from Hawaii and had minimal practice.

"I actually just got back on Friday (Jan. 14), so I had two practices before this game," Rabe said. "The team had been practicing with three people before four of us returned.

"Now, just to be here and have two practices was good.

As for the Hawaii trip, Rabe said, "It was super fun and it's always a good bonding trip for the team. It was an experience and just having the whole team together was really good for us. It didn't end up like we wanted to with quarantine and all."

Simmons, who was still getting in some running after the game for additional work, added 11 points in the game. She is the leading scorer with a 17.1 average per game so far this season.

shirt sophomore Stephanie Lee (1-3 3PM-A, 2-2 FTM-A, 5 RB, 1 Blk, 1 Stl) added nine points, while graduate student Autumn Hopson (4-4 FTM-A, 5 RB, 1 Stl, 1 Blk) and redshirt junior Aysia Johnson (2-2 FTM-A, 7 RB, 3 Stls) had six points

"Obviously dealing with the Covid situation and the end of our Hawaii trip was kind of crazy and a lot to go through," said Lee, who along with the team last year played only 13 games. "We've been trying to do our best to work together as a team and come out here and play better.

"I think this is the first time we haven't had the head coach the whole time I've been here.

Lee commented on the last few minutes of the Westcliff game and the brief comeback, saying, "Our coaches were trying to give us a little boost and have us amp up our energy. We tried pressing at the end which helped give us a little more energy for us. I feel like it was a good decision by the coaches and just press full court."

Leading the way for Westcliff with a pair of 20-plus points scored was Trinity Vasquez and Bailey Hawkins, with 21 and 20 points, respectively.

On the boards for Westcliff, junior Remy Hare and Hawkins grabbed 11 each.

What they said

Aysia Johnson, Biola junior guard: "The game was tough and we had a lot of tough circumstances. We had about five girls that were able to practice during the week. Mentally, think we were all ready to go and prepared but just didn't get it together.

"It definitely is nice to play full season (this year) and I think we'll have a good run in the playoffs."

guard: "It's been interesting. I up, but it's obviously not the same was one of the first ones to come as game time. It was definitely an back from Hawaii. We had three adjustment, not an excuse, but we (players) the first day and four should be better moving forward. (players) the second day. DOWNEY – Lil' Libros Publishing has acquired world rights to a bilingual five-board book STEAM series, Dr. Ochoa's Stellar World, researched and written by Dr. Ellen Ochoa, American engineer who became the first Latina woman to go to

Inspired by her experiences a NASA astronaut, Dr. Ochoa's books will celebrate the joy of scientific curiosity, the fundamentals of STEAM topics, and the American Latino experience for the youngest of

"I wish I had known when I was little that science [or STEAM] is all about curiosity and creativity, said Dr. Ochoa. "Those skills come naturally to young kids, and I hope this series engages kids and parents alike, in both English and Spanish, about STEAM concepts and excites them about exploring the world they inhabit."

"We are excited to work alongside Dr. Ochoa to help create an environment where our littlest readers are introduced to STEAM concepts confidently and in two languages," said Patty Rodriguez, publisher at Lil' Libros. "Becoming a scientist is no longer just a dream for our children, it is a possibility and Dr. Ellen Ochoa is an example of that."

"It is an honor to welcome Dr. Ellen Ochoa to the Lil' Libros family. Bringing bilingual STEAM topics to children will open a world of possibilities," added Ariana Stein, Lil' Libros co-founder. "We are confident that Dr. Ochoa's Stellar World will inspire curiosity and leave a lasting impact on children."

Publication for the first book, Dr. Ochoa's Stellar World: We Are All Scientists, is set for August 30,
