Toddler dies of Covid virus

■ The child becomes the youngest pandemic victim in L.A. County; infection numbers are trending downward overall.

By City News Service

LOS ANGELES - The COVID-19 pandemic has claimed its youngest victim in Los Angeles County, with health officials confirming that a 15-monthold child was among 91 newly reported deaths from the virus.

Details about the 15-monthold child were not released by the county Department of Public Health, but the agency confirmed the child is the "youngest resident to die of COVID-19 since the pandemic began, and a stark reminder that the virus can cause devastating outcomes among those most vulnerable, including young children not yet eligible for vaccinations."

The 91 total new deaths reported Wednesday is among the highest daily totals reported in the past year, raising the county's overall virus death toll to 28,630.

The county also confirmed 20,866 new COVID cases on bringing Wednesday, cumulative pandemic total to 2,560,768. Wednesday marked the two- year anniversary of the county's first confirmed COVID

According to state figures, there were 4,534 COVID-positive patients in county hospitals as of Wednesday, down from 4,554 on Tuesday. The number of those patients being treated in intensive care was 780, a slight drop from 785 a day earlier.

The rolling daily average people testing positive for the virus in the county was 13.6% as of Wednesday.

Health officials noted that the positivity rate is noticeably lower in schools. For the week that ended Sunday, testing of students and school staff across the county was at 7%, one-third lower than the previous week.

The Los Angeles Unified School District, which represents the bulk of school COVID testing in the county, reported late Wednesday that students were testing positive for the virus at an average rate of 8.1% over the past week, while the positivity rate for school staff was 5%.

According to the county, 11 new school outbreaks were reported between Jan. 16-22, an increase from the prior week but still "relatively low" given the large number of cases occurring in the county at large.

The Department of Public Health plans to distribute another 1 million at-home COVID test kits to school districts over the next two weeks to facilitate College to four, expanding academy graduates go on to easy access to testing.

Ferrer told the county Board of Supervisors Tuesday that daily COVID case numbers and the testing-positivity rate have been trending downward, indicating the county has "passed the peak" of the Omicron-variant-fueled surge of cases.

She said the seven-day average rate of new cases in the county was about 310 per 100,000 residents as of Monday, down from 380 per 100,000 residents a week ago. The testing-positivity rate has fallen from about 17% a week ago to roughly 14% this

But she said the county is still averaging about 32,000 new cases per day, and roughly one of every seven people who gets tested for the virus turns up positive.

According to the county, 81% of eligible county residents aged 5 and above have received at least one dose of vaccine, and 72% are fully vaccinated. Only 32% are fully vaccinated with a booster shot.

Mike's Liquor owners also tried to present a petition to alcohol sales. The owners also asked for an extension on the issue to receive legal counsel.

Despite the city attorney advising the commissioners to allow the extension, the planning commission passed the resolution to revoke their nonconforming use of alcohol

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

My male patients often stress, poor sleep, alcohol or drug problems, diabetes, smoking, thyroid function, and hypertension), but what patients most often blame is low testosterone. The American Urology Association states that roughly 40% of men over the age of 45 are affected by low testosterone. Let's look at this critical hormone.

Everybody produces testosterone, regardless of gender. It is made in the testes in men, in the ovaries in women, and in the adrenal glands in both men and women. In the interests of keeping my remarks (somewhat) brief, today I will focus on men.

Starting at the fetal stage, testosterone guides the development of the male external and internal organs.

During puberty, testosterone is responsible for growth spurts, deepening of the voice, and growth of hair in the pubic region, face, and underarms.
Testosterone is also associated with aggression and sex drive, and, of course, it enables men to produce sperm for reproduction.

What does low testosterone in adult men look like? Symptoms include reduced body and facial hair; loss of muscle mass and higher levels of stomach fat; low libido, impotence, small testicles, reduced sperm count and infertility; increased breast size; hot flashes; irritability, poor concentration and depression; brittle bones; and insulin resistance, which can lead to diabetes.

Common causes of low testosterone include chronic diseases like diabetes; damage to the testes from physical trauma, alcoholism, or viral diseases; genetic diseases such as Klinefelter, Kallman, or Prader-Willi syndromes; hypothalamic or pituitary diseases or tumors; and testicular failure.

What does abnormally high testosterone look like? Symptoms includes a low sperm count; shrinking of the testicles and impotence; heart muscle damage and increased risk of heart attack; prostate enlargement with difficulty urinating; liver disease; acne; fluid retention with swelling of the legs and feet; weight gain; high blood pressure and cholesterol; insomnia; headaches; increased muscle mass; increased red blood cell levels, increased risk of blood clots; stunted growth in adolescents; uncharacteristically aggressive behavior (although this is not well studied); and mood swings, euphoria, irritability, impaired judgment, and delusions.

Causes of excess testosterone include congenital adrenal hyperplasia, taking anabolic steroids, or tumors of the testicles or adrenal glands. Some medications can also increase testosterone levels, including anticonvulsants, barbiturates, and estrogen therapy.

Testosterone levels in men typically peak at around age 30, and then gradually decrease from that age forward. So, lower testosterone levels are more common among older men, and this helps to explain other agerelated changes, such as loss of muscle mass.

If treatment for low testosterone is necessary, choices include topical gels, patches, injectable testosterone, and implantable testosterone. However, side effects can include acne, breast tenderness or enlargement, elevated red blood cells, infertility, small testicles, swelling of the lower extremities, and emotional effects such as anger, anxiety, and aggression. As you would expect, these treatments require careful monitoring by a physician.

There is no evidence that testosterone replacement therapy increases the risk of prostate cancer. However, since reducing the testosterone level is one form of treating prostate cancer, testosterone therapy is not recommended for men with known or previously treated prostate cancer.

Checking testosterone levels is easy; it's a simple blood test.

The difficult part is interpreting the result. The optimal amount of testosterone is far from clear. Levels vary over the course of the day, and a single low level may be meaningless if there are no symptoms, especially if it is normal at another time. Research continues to determine when to measure testosterone, how best to respond to the results, and when it makes sense to accept the risks of treatment. I urge you to speak with your doctor if you believe that you have a problem with testosterone.

Can you get COVID-19 twice?

Contributed by the Cleveland

You made it through COVID-19 and made it to the other side, and now you're feeling invincible. Surely you're not going to get it again, right? Especially after you got vaccinated?

Sorry to be the bearer of bad news, but that's not exactly true. Experts say you're not in the clear just because you've already contracted and recovered from the virus. Breakthrough cases are possible even in previously ill people who are fully vaccinated — and in fact, if you've had COVID-19 already but are not vaccinated, you may be at an even higher risk of getting sick again.

Pediatric infectious disease specialist Frank Esper, MD, answers your questions about COVID-19 reinfection, including how you can best protect yourself from getting the virus again.

Yes, you can get COVID-19 more than once. "We're seeing more reinfections now than during the start of the pandemic, which is not necessarily surprising," Dr. Esper says. He breaks down the reasons behind reinfection.

The pandemic has been happening for a while: In December 2021, the U.S. surpassed 50 million cases of COVID-19 since the start of the pandemic. "At this point, many of those infections happened months ago or more than a year ago," Dr. Esper says. "The immunity from those initial infections begins to wane over time."

Vaccine immunity diminishes with time, too: For Americans who got vaccinated as early as winter 2020, immunity may be starting to wane, as well. This is one reason why it's critical to receive your third dose.

We've stopped being as careful: Gone are the early days of mass vigilance around safety precautions such as masking, handwashing and social distancing — all the things that initially kept the virus at bay.

New variants are extracontagious: COVID-19 variants are more infectious than the first wave of coronavirus. "These variants are able to overcome some of the existing immunity people developed via vaccination or a previous infection," Dr. Esper explains.

"You put all four of those things together, and it's not too surprising that we're seeing more and more people becoming infected for a second time," Dr. Esper says.

The CDC reports that the delta variant is at least twice as contagious as previous variants, and in December, omicron became the dominant variant in the U.S. It's even more contagious than delta.

But you may be surprised to learn that the coronavirus actually doesn't mutate nearly as much as the flu, which changes nearly everything about its appearance from one year to the next. Rather, Dr. Esper says, it's COVID-19's contagiousness that makes it so, well, contagious.

"This variant's infectiousness — including its ability to evade immune systems and prevent longlasting immunity for those people who are infected with it — is one of the reasons why it's been able to persist and come back," he explains.

By now, we know that anyone can get COVID-19 — the vaccinated and unvaccinated, those who have had it already and those who haven't. In the same vein, anyone can get COVID-19 again.

"It's important to note that we're still learning a lot about reinfections and who's at risk for those reinfections," Dr. Esper says. But doctors do know that some people are at a higher risk than others.

He's referencing a study that shows that unvaccinated people are 2.34 times more likely to be reinfected with COVID-19 than those who are fully vaccinated — which drives home the importance of being vaccinated, even if you've already had the virus.

"Almost all the severe cases that we're seeing right now are people who have not been vaccinated," he says.

War with Russia? This country has its own problems

By Jamie Stiehm

Now is not a good time to go to war with Russia.

The United States just ended a 20-year lost war in Afghanistan five months ago, returning the ragged country to the Taliban's control.

Still suffering from the pandemic and rocky politics, we need to get our own house in order.

Ukraine is just not worth it, I'm not sorry to say. It does not belong to the European alliance, NATO, and has a shady reputation for corruption, as President Joe Biden declared bluntly when he was vice president.

I might add that we need a major course correction in dealing with Russian President Vladimir Putin, who understands America a lot better than we understand him. This is how he outplays us every time.

Seizing on a weakened president and divided moment for American democracy, Putin has heightened tensions by building up military exercises encircling the Ukrainian border. This is unnerving, to be sure. Is this Putin's revenge, a long time coming?

Fears of a Russian land invasion are rising, as it's well-known Putin deeply resents the loss of Ukraine when the Soviet Union fell apart. We can and must do everything possible to reach a diplomatic solution.

peacekeeping and justice in an unruly world? Let Russia defend itself in an international court or forum.

But you can see the voluble retired generals amping up on cable, the Pentagon alerting the 82nd Airborne amid 8,500 "response troops" for NATO, while Congress is out of town leaving the president to act freely — and rashly — without authorization. Ordering our embassy families home is another step in this weary dance of war by both sides.

I hope Secretary of State Antony Blinken has the chops to deftly deal with seasoned and wily old Russian counterparts. I think he does.

It's not like America hasn't helped Ukraine. Under former President Donald Trump, we recently sent Ukraine a staggering $400 million in military aid for its ongoing shadow war with Russia. That's a good chunk of President Biden's Build Back Better agenda.

Putin has to be handled carefully and respected as a shrewd adversary. He cannot be dismissed outright as an evil force, even if the former KGB agent does commit cagey, evil deeds.

The worst of these was interfering in the 2016 presidential election in Donald Trump's favor. Trump was putty — or puppet — in Putin's hands Ukraine's brash leader, President Volodymyr Zelensky, is acting as if his nation is entitled to the protection of the transatlantic alliance. No, it's not, and there should be no vague promises about entering NATO's ʻopen door" someday soon.

Zelensky was on the world stage during Trump's first impeachment for bribery, way back in 2019. Speaking on the phone, Trump demanded "a favor though." He wanted Zelensky to announce an investigation into his likely opponent, Biden, and his son Hunter, in return for the $400

Very nice. Zelensky was apparently willing to go along, as he desperately wanted a White House visit. I remember the hearings all too well. Trump also trashed the distinguished American ambassador, Marie Yovanovitch, for being too tough on Ukrainian corruption. He drove her out of the country.

Great Britain is champing for a showdown with Russia over Ukraine. If they want to fight that battle, let our best ally do it. But the United States should be on the side of seeking peace.

Oh, there are larger concerns at stake. The national security establishment — including pundits — is searching for something to do without a war.

Ukraine could be just the beginning of Russia reclaiming its old sovereignty and land mass, so they say.

Here's something for the experts: rethink NATO enlargement. We made a strategic error back in the 1990s, by crowing that America "won" the Cold War. Enlarging NATO with Hungary, Poland and the Czech Republic (former Soviet bloc nations) was seen as taunting and threatening the humbled Russia.

We didn't need that. Then-President Bill Clinton's top diplomats could have simply stated the Cold War "ended," and what a blessing that was, writ large, for the world.

Gloating and expanding East was rubbing salt in a young Putin's wound — which hasn't healed yet.

Biden continues presidential killings

By Judge Andrew Napolitano

Secretly and quietly, the Biden administration has continued to use the killing machine crafted by President George W. Bush, expanded by President Barack Obama and employed from time to time by President Donald Trump. These presidents have used drones and other unmanned missiles and projectiles to target persons in foreign countries with which the United States is not at war.

They have done this notwithstanding the prohibition of taking life, liberty or property from any person — not just any American, but any person — in the Constitution each has sworn to uphold, and they have done so pursuant to secret rules that they themselves have established for these killings.

Last week, 11 senators and 39 members of the House of Representatives — Democrats all — to their credit sent a harshly worded letter to President Joseph R. Biden asking him to stop the killings. As of this writing, he has not publicly replied.

Here is the backstory.

The purpose of the Bill of Rights — the first 10 amendments to the Constitution — is to protect personal liberty by restraining the

The Fifth Amendment prohibits killing persons, restraining liberty and taking property without due process; that means a jury trial at which the government must prove fault. Until President Abraham Lincoln waged war on half the country, the operative clause in the Fifth Amendment was understood to prohibit all federal killing without a declaration of war or due process.

If the country is at war — lawfully and constitutionally declared by Congress — obviously the president can use the U.S. military to kill the military of the opposing country. And if an attack on the U.S. is imminent, the president can strike the first blow against the military of the entity whose attack is just about to occur.

All this changed — culturally, not constitutionally — when President Harry Truman targeted Japanese civilians in Japan as the Japanese government was within days of surrendering in World War calculate what he thinks he can politically get away with II. Truman was, of course, not the first American president to target civilians, as Lincoln criminally targeted American civilians during the War between the States.

Notwithstanding his unprosecuted war crimes, and with the government's version of Pearl Harbor still fresh in many Americans' minds, Truman was regarded as heroic for ordering the profoundly immoral, militarily useless, criminal mass killings against the hated Japanese using atomic bombs.

Fast-forward to the 9/11 era, and Bush had precedent to begin his own presidential killings of people the government wanted Americans to hate. While Congress did authorize him to use force against those who caused or aided the 9/11 attacks, we all know that his thirst for Middle Eastern blood knew no regard for the Constitution, evidence, proportionality, civilian lives, morality or human decency.

Julian Assange sits in a British dungeon awaiting decisions on vecause ne courageously, lawfully and constitutionally published documents and videos demonstrating conclusively that Bush's use of drones targeted and murdered Afghan and Iraqi civilians, and his administration covered it up.

Obama took this to another level when he targeted and killed Anwar al-Awlaki and his 16-year-old son, both of whom were born in the U.S. Obama's attorney general, Eric Holder, advised Obama that the killings were lawful, as al-Awlaki had encouraged folks in the Middle East to fight against American soldiers there. Holder likened killing al-Awlaki to a shooting at a bank robber who is being chased by police and shooting at them.

Holder forgot that al-Awlaki was not charged or indicted for any crime, was never accused of violence and was not even the subject of an arrest warrant when a drone evaporated him while sitting at an outdoor cafe in Yemen.

The exercise of power by the federal government is largely There are no other constitutional circumstances under which a based on precedent and politics. Whenever a president wants to kill secretly, he need only find an example of a predecessor having killed secretly with impunity — without due process, without a declaration of war and without an imminent attack. And then he needs only to Stated differently, Joe Biden — whose drones in 2021 targeted innocent civilians in Afghanistan, killing dozens — is using unlawful powers that his modern predecessors used and got away with to target and kill unsympathetic persons.

The nature of political power is to expand so that it fills a perceived need, unless there are mechanisms in place to restrain its expansion.

The founding generation believed that British monarchs had no limits on their power and that was a good enough reason for the 13 colonies to secede. They also believed that they had crafted founding documents — the Constitution and the Bill of Rights — for the new nation that imposed sufficient restraints on the federal government.

After all, the Constitution is the supreme law of the land. Its language is clear that only Congress writes laws and declares war, and presidents can kill only troops in wartime or civilians consistent with due process.

Moreover, every president takes an oath to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution as it was written, not as they may wish it to Sadly, the Founders were wrong.

Today, the president writes laws and rules that let him restrain personal liberty and kill with impunity, and Congress and the American people let him get away with it. Formally, we still have a Constitution. Functionally, it has utterly failed to restrain the government.

Ultimately, we have ourselves to blame for these killings. Why do we repose the Constitution for safekeeping into the hands of those who subvert it? If a future president uses Bush's lust and Obama's logic and Biden's stealth to kill Americans in America, no one's life, liberty or property will be secure.

Politicians, media thrive on divisive tactics

By Froma Harrop

Virginia's new Republican governor, Glenn Youngkin, raced into office bearing two culture war baubles. One was a ban on teaching critical race theory. The other was a prohibition on mask mandates in public schools.

Each came in the form of an executive order. Neither costs anything. And both are of little consequence.

In terms of politics, however, they serve the function of provoking liberals, to the delight of the right wing. Youngkin's first week in office, The Washington Post headline read, "leaves Republicans jubilant, Democrats fuming.

Bear in mind that the Post, as much of the liberal-friendly media does, profits on the ability to raise its audience's anxiety level and thereby keep its customers glued. CNN does that, too.

The day Newt Gingrich threatened Jan. 6 committee members with jail if Republicans regain the majority, CNN featured the menacing video about every hour. The former House speaker has been out of office for 23 years, but his moronic comment, amplified by "respectable" media, made him seem relevant again. (The smartest response came from Rep. Zoe Lofgren, a California Democrat on the committee, who brushed it off, saying that the notably gaunt Gingrich looked "unwell.")

Take a closer look at Youngkin's executive orders. Critical race theory is not taught in Virginia's K-12 schools, so banning it is an backed letting local school districts make policy on masks, which is what a real conservative would do.

Now at least seven school boards have filed lawsuits against Youngkin, arguing that the state constitution empowers local school boards to run their districts. Also, state law requires schools to follow federal health guidelines.

Naturally, this has raised to a boil conflicts that were just simmering before. One woman in Page County threatened to bring a gun to a school that had instituted a mask requirement. This inconveniently comes at a time when schools are already struggling with the loss of teachers sick with COVID-19 or quitting the profession. Meanwhile, children who have already missed so much school might benefit from some months of peace in the classroom.

Youngkin did temper his position on critical race theory. (Almost no one understands this controversial academic concept, which portrays racism as systemic.) He noted that Virginia's history contains "ugly" chapters, thus suggesting that America's painful history on race would be honestly taught.

Youngkin got elected in this generally Democratic state by portraying himself as a not-scary Republican who would fight off the left's excesses. The political press has since been raking his words for evidence of how moderate he would be.

Despite his reckless (or naive) stirring of turmoil early on, the exercise in virtue signaling, Trump style. As a candidate, Youngkin political press still doesn't know. It's possible that Youngkin took what he thought were some insignificant swipes at the left to appease the right before he embarks on the course of normal governance.

> But here is where Youngkin's first days may come back to haunt his party. Whether he intends to be more Trumpian or less, Youngkin has probably hurt the chances of Republicans who hoped to win in Democratic states by playing the moderate.

> The models, Govs. Charlie Baker of Massachusetts and Larry Hogan of Maryland, avoid the kind of political nastiness that's now making civic life in Virginia so unpleasant. Having campaigned as one of them, Youngkin is making that sales pitch harder to pull off.

> Democrats, meanwhile, would do well to quietly govern and let the opposition fuel the division that drives the public crazy. We all should be mindful that Youngkin won the governorship by only two

Santa Fe senior is honored for academics, leadership

SANTA FE SPRINGS - Santa Fe High School senior Geneveve Castañeda will never forget the feeling of stepping on the football field for the first time as a freshman member of the Chieftain Tribe Marching Band, waiting for the drum major's signals.

The camaraderie Castañeda experienced, along with love from her family, would inspire her to become a campus leader and eventually rise to the position of drum major in her senior year.

Castañeda, who has a 4.26 GPA, is poised to graduate at the top of her class while also serving in the Associated Student Body (ASB) and as vice president of Santa Fe's Filipino culture club, Barkada, all of which contributed to her being named Santa Fe High's standout student for the 2021-22 year.

For her academic and leadership abilities, Castañeda was recognized by the Whittier Union Board of Trustees with an Award of Merit during its Jan. 11 board meeting.

"I am so thankful to everyone who has gotten me here," Castañeda said. "To my sister, who motivates me; to my brother, for being forgiving and kind; to my fellow ASB and band members, who give me confidence to do what I love without fear; to my teachers, who taught me to be resourceful and confident; and most importantly to my parents, who have supported me every step of the way.

Castañeda credits her parents for giving her the skills to find her moral compass, and bestowing her with a love that drove them to help her without hesitancy, whether picking her up from school at 1 a.m. or chauffeuring her and her friends to a band performance. According to Castañeda, her parents can even intuit her needs.

"They always know what to do," Castañeda said. "Like a hug, words of advice, eggs and weenies on Saturday mornings, or Vitamin D after a long school day. Vitamin donuts that is.

Castañeda has thrived by pursuing challenging courses, completing eight semesters of honors and Advanced Placement (AP) classes, including AP Calculus, AP English Literature, AP Physics and AP Government. Castañeda is also part of Santa Fe High's Top 100 students.

Castañeda is a member of Jazz Band, Yearbook and ROP Video Production, as well as serving as Web and Media Designer for ASB. Castañeda also received two opportunities to study abroad in South Korea, including one opportunity funded by the State Department's Bureau of Education and Cultural Affairs. However, both opportunities were canceled due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Castañeda is looking toward earning a degree in music business and pursuing a career in the entertainment industry. The colleges she has applied to include UC Irvine, UC Berkeley, New York University and several Cal State schools, although her dream college is USC.

"As a result of her great work in and out of the classroom, we know that Geneveve is going to continue to attain great success throughout her lifetime," Santa Fe High Principal Craig Campbell said. "Geneveve's strong work ethic, drive and desire to excel gives us great certainty that she will be successful in whatever path she takes. Geneveve is an amazing young woman who exemplifies everything we want from a Santa Fe High graduate.

SOUTH GATE - Los Angeles County Supervisor Janice Hahn on Monday directed county officials to monitor pop-up testing sites and close fraudulent sites that are defrauding residents.

In recent days, officials in South Gate and Bell Gardens shut down six fraudulent testing sites. Some sites are charging people for tests that they never receive results for, and others are asking people to give them their social security number.

"It is despicable that people are taking advantage of communities during a deadly pandemic," said Hahn, who wrote a letter to the Director of the Department of Consumer and Business Affairs Rafael Carbajal. "I am directing the County's Department of Consumer and Business Affairs to monitor pop-up testing sites across the county and shut down any sites that are defrauding the public.
