Embattled sheriff Villanueva heads for November runoff

■ Alex Villanueva faces opposition from retired Long Beach police chief Robert Luna, who finished second in Tuesday's primary.

By City News Service

LOS ANGELES - Los Angeles County Sheriff Alex Villanueva's bid for a second term will move to a November runoff election against former Long Beach police Chief Robert Luna, with the pair topping a nine-candidate field in Tuesday's

Over the past century, only one incumbent sheriff in the county has lost a re-election bid. That was four years ago, when Villanueva achieved a stunning upset of Sheriff Jim McDonnell, riding to an election victory with strong backing from reform-minded community groups and Democrats.

But over the past four years, Villanueva's support among those groups has waned as he repeatedly clashed with the Democratdominated Board of Supervisors over funding and policy matters, fought back against claims of "deputy gangs" within the agency, the Civilian Oversight Commission and refused to enforce the county's COVID-19 vaccination mandate among his deputies and department employees.

He has openly criticized "progressive" policies politicians, most notably District Attorney George Gascón, and assailed movements to "defund" law enforcement agencies.

Those stances, however, have helped solidify his support among many of those working for him, exemplified by his endorsement by the Association of Los Angeles Deputy Sheriffs.

In a campaign statement, Villanueva's campaign insists he has worked to restore public trust in the sheriff's department. pointing to the rollout of body-worn cameras and boosting minimum requirements for new deputies. The campaign also boasts the agency is "the most diverse in the nation."

"In his next term, Sheriff Villanueva will work to reduce violent crime, compassionately clean up homeless encampments and hold public officials accountable for their actions," according to his campaign.

Speaking to his supporters

Alex Villanueva, left, and Robert Luna will face off this November to see who runs the L.A. County Sheriff's Department.

"focusing on what matters to people -- homelessness and violent crime."

He said he has been "playing eight-on-one basketball" during the campaign, noting that his candidates were all running on anybody-but-him platforms.

"We're going to keep doing what we're doing, because it's the right thing to do," Villanueva said. .. My job is to keep the community safe. If that means I have to battle the Board of Supervisors, so be it."

Angeles, patrolled by the sheriff's department, opened my eyes to examples of both good and bad policing, and inspired my 36-year career in law enforcement," Luna said in a candidate statement.

He said he will work to "modernize" the sheriff's department and its jail system and improve the mental well-being of deputies and employees.

The other hopefuls in the race were sheriff's Lt. Eric Strong, "Growing up in East Los sheriff's Sgt. Karla Carranza, Los Angeles Airport Police Chief Cecil Rhambo, retired Sheriff's Capt. Matt Rodriguez, parole agent April Saucedo Hood, retired Sheriff's Capt. Britta Steinbrenner and retired sheriff's Cmdr. Eli Vera.

Norwalk man arrested for timeshare fraud

NORWALK - Four men were arrested Thursday on charges of timeshare fraud amounting to about $5 million in Orange County.

The four were named in an indictment alleging high-pressure tactics and false promises of financial relief for elderly timeshare owners,

The four defendants are:

-- Michael McDonagh, 41, of Long Beach, the accused ringleader who founded and operated several Orange County-based companies;

-- Antonio Duarte, 42, of Corona;

-- Christopher James Vannoy, 32, of Norwalk and;

-- Ruben Ortiz, 40, of Long Beach.

Authorities were searching for Frank Anthony Molina, 43, of San Pedro, a fifth defendant named in the indictment.

From 2015 through May 2019, the timeshare owners were contacted with offers to help terminate their timeshare interest if they paid a fee, prosecutors said. Weeks later, they would be dishonestly coaxed into paying more money such as a promise of a substantial settlement of litigation, prosecutors said.

The victims were pushed to sign phony non-disclosure agreements to keep them from contacting other timeshare companies about the bogus class- action settlement, prosecutors said.

McDonagh founded and managed Irvine-based Global Transfer Inc., Costa Mesa-based Global Transfer SoCal Inc., Santa Ana-based Nationwide Transfer Inc., and Signal Hill-based Nationwide Exit Specialist Inc., prosecutors said.

"A lot was at stake yesterday and unfortunately low voter turnout only set [Southeast L.A. County] back further."

Parents settle over son's motorcycle death

MONTEBELLO - The parents of a 20-year-old man killed when his motorcycle struck a metal chain stretched across a paved pathway near the Lincoln Dam in Montebello in 2018 have reached a tentative settlement in their lawsuit against Los Angeles County.

Lawyers for Alexandro Villaras and Diana Alvarez, the father and at Maywood mother of the late Lxandro Villar of Montebello, filed court papers on Thursday with Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Gail Killefer stating that a "conditional" accord had been reached. No terms were revealed and an attorney for the plaintiffs could not be immediately reached regarding whether the settlement is subject to approval by the Board of Supervisors.

The plaintiffs alleged in the suit brought in October 2019 that a dangerous condition of public property existed because there were no lights, reflectors or other warnings of the chain's presence. Los Angeles County owned the property where the accident occurred and knew of the dangerous condition created by the chain, but failed to warn visitors like the plaintiffs' son, according to the suit.

The plaintiffs also sued the city of Montebello, which was later dismissed as a defendant.

Lawyers for Los Angeles County argued in their court papers that the county was immune from liability under the state Government Code because the accident occurred on a trail rather than a roadway.

According to the suit, Villar's motorcycle hit the chain about 1:30 a.m. on Dec. 26, 2018, as he was approaching the parking lot of the Lincoln Dam. He fell off the motorcycle and his chest hit the

The large gate that normally was closed across the pathway was broken and the chain was put there in its place, according to the lawsuit.

Villar was taken to Beverly Hospital in Montebello, where doctors were unable to save him. A copy of the coroner's report attached to the lawsuit stated the cause of death was blunt torso trauma, and a copy of a page of Villar's medical records showed he was not wearing a helmet when the accident occurred.

Female janitor details abuse church

MAYWOOD - A former janitor at a Catholic church in Maywood who is suing the Archdiocese of Los Angeles, alleging she was forced to quit in 2019 after an associate pastor groped her in the rectory and tried to coerce her into his bed, describes the incident in detail in new court papers.

The Long Beach woman worked as a custodian at St. Rose of Lima Catholic Church, the grounds of which include a school and a rectory that housed the living areas and offices of Pastor Dario Miranda and Associate Pastor Primitivo Gonzalez, the suit filed in December of 2020 states.

On the morning of July 30, 2019, the plaintiff says she was directed to clean the parish rectory, including Gonzalez's private living space. She was normally assigned to maintain only the school and church, but the employee who normally maintained the rectory was absent that day, the

The plaintiff, who was unfamiliar with the rectory because she had not cleaned it before, encountered Gonzalez in the kitchen on the first floor and he showed her the various rooms, including his own quarters comprised of a bedroom with a private bathroom, according to the

"I was standing when suddenly I felt that my wrist, that someone was touching my wrist," the plaintiff says in a deposition given on March 4, portions of which are attached to her court papers filed on Friday in opposition to the Archdiocese's motion to dismiss her case. "After that, I froze. I didn't know who had grabbed my wrist. And then I turned around and his hands were touching my breast. I was walking backwards until I got stuck on the wall and I noticed that it was him and I just opened my mouth because I couldn't believe that the priest was doing this.'

The woman further states that Gonzalez put both of his hands against the wall and that he "put his body very close to mine and he was touching me. He wanted to kiss me and I was moving my head from one side to the other, and he would move his head from one side to the other doing the same thing that I

The plaintiff says she "stepped on my tiptoes so that I could be a little bit taller than him so that he couldn't kiss me, but he grabbed my neck. He was breathing hard, and after that, he moved one of his hands away from the wall and he put my blouse down and my bra."

The priest then said "Mamacita, dreamed of you. Let's go to bed," according to the plaintiff.

The clergyman continued rubbing his body against hers, the laintiff says.

"I couldn't move," she says. "I couldn't think at the moment."

The plaintiff says she was able to escape from the bathroom, turned around and saw the priest following her while exposing himself.

The alleged incident left the plaintiff with post-traumatic stress disorder and her psychiatrist says she is permanently unfit to resume employment within the archdiocese, according to her court

In their court papers urging dismissal of the plaintiff's suit, lawyers for the archdiocese state that she never actually quit her job.

"Plaintiff is currently employed on a leave of absence," the archdiocese attorneys state in their court papers. "She continued to work for three months after the incident before beginning her leave. At plaintiff's deposition, she testified that she has not resigned and has not told anyone that she will not be returning from her

When the plaintiff reported the incident, the archdiocese the next day took action so that Gonzalez court papers. could no longer function as a priest and he was removed from the parish within 24 hours, according to the archdiocese attorneys' court admitted Gonzalez wrongdoing and the archdiocese reported the woman's accusations to the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, according to the defense attorneys' court papers. Gonzalez was kept out of the ministry, moved to Northern California to live with his brother in August 2019 and died in December 2020 of complications related to dementia, according to the archdiocese attorneys' court

Prior to the alleged attack on the plaintiff, Gonzalez was a priest in good standing, the archdiocese attorneys state in their court

"In short, (the archdiocese) had no knowledge of any complaints by anyone against Father Gonzalez related to inappropriate conduct," the archdiocese lawyers further state in their court papers.

A hearing on the archdiocese's dismissal motion is scheduled June 17 before Judge Christopher K. Lui.

Get in, we're going to save the American shopping mall

By Alexandra Lange

It is easy to think of indoor and even outdoor malls as anti-landscape: big asphalt parking lots, blank walls, artificial lighting, manufactured scents, digital sounds. But the origin of mall architecture was in the European 19th-century conservatory, where cast-iron and glass roofs covered expensive, nonnative plants. Early mall innovators like Victor Gruen emphasized the year-round good weather of indoor shopping, and leading landscape architects like Lawrence Halprin made sure the plantings were as up-to-date as the goods for sale.

As America contemplates mass mall die-off — analysts predict that a quarter of the United States' roughly 1,000 malls will close in the next three to five years — reminding ourselves of the mall's garden origins offers clues as to how they might be transformed. Some should be demolished and returned to nature, but more should be rethought from an ecological point of view. While malls are a wasteful use of land, replacement with new stand-alone buildings with space-hogging parking lots only compounds that wastefulness: Better to add (perimeter buildings, solar panels, trees) and to swap (markets for department stores, classrooms for boutiques).

Ground cleared and buildings constructed for one kind of community benefit — shopping — could be reduced, reused and recycled to serve a broader and greener community purpose, with pedestrian open space as part of a mix of public uses. While the mall was designed to showcase products intended for obsolescence, in the best-case scenario it is also a building designed to change.

Malls represent heavy investments in infrastructure, construction materials and place making that should not be discarded. The popularity of dead malls as sites for Covid testing and eventually vaccinations underlines these essential qualities: Easy road access, unencumbered indoor space, instant name recognition. Contemplating the mall's roots in the garden is an opportunity not for picturesque nostalgia but for new solutions.

The most famous conservatory of all wasn't labeled as such, but the designer of London's Crystal Palace for the Great Exhibition of 1851, the English architect Joseph Paxton, had cut his teeth on lightweight, all-weather architecture in the gardens at Chatsworth House, the seat of the Duke of Devonshire. The Crystal Palace's barrel-vaulted glass roof sheltered elm trees, as well as natural and human-made goods from around the world exhibited in booths and browsed by six million visitors.

The connection between glass architecture, plants and shopping was further developed by the department stores that proliferated in European and American cities in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The grandest of these were organized around central light courts, where plants would soften the lines of iron staircases and, eventually, escalators.

The history of American gardens is also deeply entwined with the mall. At Southdale in Edina, Minn., the first enclosed mall in America, which opened in 1956, Mr. Gruen named the central court the Garden of Perpetual Spring, to underline the luxury of climate control, and topped the plants, water feature and aviary with fraternal twin "Golden Trees" sculptures by Harry Bertoia. Mr. Halprin, better known for the weathered, hippie modern style of Sea Ranch, in Sonoma County, Calif., cut his teeth bringing curves, water and casual plantings to shopping malls, from Old Orchard Shopping Center in Skokie, Ill. to NorthPark Center in Dallas, an outdoor mall where children still treat his and his associate Richard Vignola's 1965 tiled fountain as a giant climbing structure and turtles and ducks still find a home.

Tending community has been the impetus behind many malls' longstanding walking programs, considered so important for public health that the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention published a booklet to encourage the practice. Just as teenagers taste adult freedom in the food court, older Americans use malls as a softened version of the city park, with flatter terrain, more benches, more bathrooms and less traffic.

Privatizing the garden isn't an unmixed blessing, however. The Crystal Palace was a colonial project, gathering the fruits (and in later exhibitions, the people) from the British Empire under one industrialized roof as a show of power. So, too, have shopping malls historically cultivated specific audiences by virtue of their locations sometimes in segregated suburbs and, later, by codes of conduct designed to limit the impact of groups of teenagers.

A series of U.S. and state Supreme Court cases, from 1968 on, have sought to limit free speech protections in malls by claiming them as private property; the plaintiffs in these cases have been union members and antiwar and anti-fur demonstrators. In Amalgamated Food Employees Union Local 590 v. Logan Valley Plaza Inc. in 1968, one of the first of these cases, Justice Thurgood Marshall, writing for the majority, argued that "businesses situated in the suburbs could largely immunize themselves" from criticism — which went against the public interest in a suburbanizing nation.

The whiteness of malls, at least, is changing. The geographer Wei Li coined the term "ethnoburb" in 1997, studying the rise of majority-Asian American suburbs. Willow Lung-Amam has chronicled the rise of shopping centers and malls curated for this demographic, and formerly white-serving malls across the South have been reborn as mercados offering Latinx food, fashion and entertainment and fulfilling other community service functions.

What these Asian and Latin American projects have in common is a responsiveness to changing residential patterns and a willingness to support local businesses — displays of creative management beyond attracting the latest hot national brand. The approach of these culturally responsive mall managers is more akin to the revolution promised by the festival marketplaces of the 1970s than of the peak mall 1990s. The architect Ben Thompson — a creator, with his wife, Jane Thompson, and the developer James Rouse of the urban marketplaces Faneuil Hall, Harborplace and South Street Seaport — wrote, "Everything we build must inject the affirmative values human beings need as much as food — the pleasure of tactile and visual things, assurance of physical security and freedom, variety of stimulating impressions and experience."

Ethnocentric mall revamps are only one of a bouquet of strategies deployed in successful retrofits, resurfacings and replacements of malls. June Williamson and Ellen Dunham-Jones have been chronicling suburban reuse for more than a decade. Their database and 2021 book, "Case Studies in Retrofitting Suburbia," includes malls that have become civic centers, schools, churches and medical facilities — sometimes in tandem, reversing the single-use zoning common to the postwar burb.

The more uses added to the sites, the more likely they are to have added green space, whether those are the outdoor courtyards on the former parking lot at Austin Community College's Highland Campus or the great lawn at the Promenade of Wayzata in Minnesota, which combines senior housing, a hotel and offices. Renderings for the Rise, the under-construction redevelopment of Vallco Shopping Mall in California, designed by Rafael Vinoly Architects, hype the 29-acre green roof as "the world's largest" and claim it "restores the predevelopment character of the Cupertino landscape."

Some have even become parks. The second wave of mall building in the 1970s often targeted low-lying areas that were difficult to develop for residential or other uses, and rightly so, as they were bottoms, or stream beds prone to flooding. Meriden Hub Mall in Meriden, Conn., was one such site. In 2007 the city began working on a plan, using local, state and federal funds, to replace the mall with a 14-acre park, opening access to Harbor Creek, creating a public space that also functions as a water retention basin and building a bridge and amphitheater. Mixed-income housing and an upgraded transit center now front the park, known as Meriden Green.

My favorite rebirth-of-the-mall story comes from Detroit. Before Mr. Gruen designed Southdale, he worked out some of his ideas for the new suburban Main Street in Southfield, Mich., just north of the city. Northland, which opened in 1954, had landscaped outdoor courtyards with modern sculptures connecting rows of shops and a branch of the city's leading department store, J.L. Hudson. The planted spaces offered room for women and children or anyone else isolated in their homes, to come together and shop, chat and play.

In 2021 a developer, Contour Companies, bought the dead mall from the city for $11.1 million. Published plans show 1,500 housing units in new buildings on the parking lots, with lofts, shops and offices in the old mall's ground level retail spaces and a market in the old department store.

While most of the post-1950s additions will be torn down, the 1954 core, exemplifying Mr. Gruen's dream of bringing downtown to the edge of town, will stay. Oh, and so will the gardens. In 2022 people still need spaces — between errands or Zooms or classes or meals — to stop and touch grass.

Installing rooftop solar can be a breeze. Just look at Australia.

By Saul Griffith

WOLLONGONG, Australia — I recently moved back here to my home country partly because I believe Australians can show the world how much money households can save through simple climate solutions like rooftop solar

How is it that Australia, a country that historically has been a coal-burning climate pariah, is leading the world on solar? The four-bedroom house we recently bought provides a hint: It came with two rooftop solar systems of 11 kilowatts of combined capacity and a battery with 16 kilowatt-hours of storage. This system should produce more than enough to power my family's home, one electric car and both of our electric bikes with some left over to send back to the grid.

Solar is now so prevalent in Australia that over a quarter of households here have rooftop panels, compared with roughly 2.5 percent of American households.

Australia pays its solar installers salaries comparable to those in the United States, and it buys most of its solar modules from China at 25 cents per watt, just a little less than what American buyers pay. Our houses are mostly detached single-family, like America, too. But unlike in the United States, it's easy to get permits and install rooftop solar in Australia.

Australia's rooftop solar success is a function partly of luck, partly of design. In the early 1990s, regulators considered rooftop solar a hobby, and no one stood in the way of efforts to make the rules favorable to small-scale solar. Looking for a good headline to varnish over Australia's refusal to agree to the same greenhouse emissions reductions as the rest of the world in the 1997 Kyoto climate agreement, the federal government embraced renewable energy policies that set the stage for rooftop solar. Households were given rebates for the upfront costs, and were paid to send excess electricity back to the grid. In 2007, Prime Minister John Howard doubled the rebate, a move that is credited with kick-starting a solar installation boom.

Why has America been significantly slower to adopt this solution to high energy costs? The failures are mostly regulatory: local building codes and zoning laws, state rules that govern the grid connection and liability issues.

Permitting can take as little as a day in Australia and is done over the web; in the United States permitting and connecting to the grid can take as long as six months. Many customers just give up. America also generally requires a metal conduit around the wiring; in Australia, the connections can be less expensive soft cables, similar to extension cords.

The cost of rooftop solar in the United States depends on many things, including the latitude, tree cover and federal and state incentives. Installation costs can also vary quite a bit, depending on what laborers charge and the local permitting and inspection policies.

My friend Andrew Birch, co-founder of the solar and solar software companies OpenSolar in Sydney and Sungevity in the United States, wrote an excellent critique of American rooftop solar and its high price in 2018. Mr. Birch then created a consortium that worked with the National Renewable Energy Laboratory to make a free tool called SolarAPP+, or Solar Automated Permitting Process. That user-friendly process could now be adopted by any willing city. Solar could be faster to install tomorrow.

The policy prescriptions for the United States are straightforward: simplify regulations and promote fair access to the grid, allowing every generator, big or small, to connect as equals and supply electricity and battery storage without burdensome connection rules.

According to my calculations, more than half of the energy needed to run America's cars and households could be generated on the roofs of its households. Some states are moving in the right direction: In April, Gov. Ron DeSantis of Florida protected solar incentives by blocking legislation that would have slashed "net metering," which allows solar customers to sell excess power to utilities. California, however, is considering taxing residential solar customers connected to the grid, the opposite of the kind of policy that's

On Monday, the Biden administration took a significant step toward increasing solar capacity by issuing an executive order that will use the Defense Production Act to produce more clean energy appliances and solar cells. He also announced a two-year suspension of tariffs for solar panels from four countries to support faster adoption of solar energy. With support for training, this means hundreds of thousands of new jobs in solar installation.

But the administration could do even more: Through an executive order, it could expand its efforts to encourage cities to use SolarAPP+ as the permitting process, further inducing a surge in solar installations.

If a regulatory world existed where you could run an American electric pickup truck on Australian rooftop solar, it would cost 2 cents per mile, rather than the current 20 cents per mile using gasoline or diesel. When solar is used to run a hot water heater with a heat pump, my calculations show, it can cut the cost of a shower by half compared to a gas heater. Even boiling water for a cup of coffee comes in at a quarter the price when compared to using natural gas.

Rooftop solar alone can't solve climate change. We will still need wind, industrial solar farms, hydroelectricity and probably nuclear power. But rooftop solar could make the entire energy system cheaper in America forever. The more solar we put on roofs, the fewer fields and wild spaces we need to cover with large-scale installations. Australia has shown the world the way to cheap, renewable energy, and the United States needs to head toward that same all-electrified future.

SANTA FE SPRINGS - With all of the outstanding athletes that adorn the halls of St. Paul High School, two seniors stood out this year as Jordan Williams and Rebecca Topete were named the Don Ward Male and Female Athletes of the Year.

The two were named at the annual senior awards night, which were held on May 20 at the Knotts Berry Farm Hotel in Buena Park.

In addition to Williams and Topete, Scholar Athletes of the Year were awarded to Alyssa Ledezma and Isaiah Dunn. (Story in a future issue).

"Both Rebecca and Jordan were intimidating forces in their sport," St. Paul Athletic Director Rich Avina said. "Both extremely powerful athletes that imposed themselves on their opponents.

"More importantly, they are loved and respected by their peers on the teams, as well in the St. Paul community. These are great kids that have impacted St. Paul High School both on and off the field and

The award was named after Ward, who passed away last September and was a longtime supporter of St. Paul athletics.

"He was loved and respected by hundreds and even thousands of athletes that walked the campus at St. Paul from the 70's, 80's, 90's, and 2000's," said Avina, of his introduction of the history of Ward at the senior awards. "He captured memorable moments through photography.

Don Ward represented all that is great in athletics at St. Paul High School - commitment, passion, persistence, but most importantly, Mr. Ward was genuinely a great human being that left his imprint on our community. One of his big moments during the playoffs was a highlight dunk over the Hillcrest 7-footer, during their 66-60, second-round win.

"I told everybody that I was going to dunk on the seven-footer and I did that," he said, with a smile.

"At St. Paul, it was a very high competition level. As far as basketball, we had the toughest schedule and played against Damien, Serra and a lot of strong "I and many others to this teams. It made me a better player."

Another highlight was and meeting Hall of Famer Paul that too. Pierce and working with kids.

"I remember, as a kid, going to a Kawhi (Leonard) camp," he added. "It was a fun experience and all the players got to compete. Now, I get to come and show the kids (at the Paul Pierce clinic) what I learned and hopefully they find the love for the basketball game too. It's great seeing the smiles on their face.

Williams said that during the Paul Pierce basketball camp before the season started in October.

"He is a young man that made an impact, not only on the multiple teams he competed with, but also on the campus as a whole," added Avina. "He has earned the respect of all his teammates through his competitive fire, work ethic, and play-making abilities.'

He was named 1st team All-Angelus League in Football, 1st team All-Camino Real League in Basketball, Camino Real League Champion in the 100 meter, and Camino Real League Champion in the High Jump.

Topete is tops

"The Female recipient of the Outstanding Athlete of the Year is a young lady that exemplifies determination," said Avina, of Topete. "She is a hard-working athlete that has made an immediate impact in our sports program by starting since her freshman year. She is motivated, committed, and driven to accomplish her goals. She was an intimidating force on the volleyball court with power and Topete was named 1st Team All-league and Most Valuable Player of the Camino Real League in Volleyball.

Topete spoke of her experience and leadership in the volleyball program - "I showed my talents all four years at St. Paul High School on varsity even as a freshman and starting and showing life values to my team and being a great example of what it was to be a great volleyball player on the court.

"My job as the captain is to show responsibility to the team and showed how we could make it through with what we had and we came out as league champs this Topete, who said one of her best moments of her volleyball experience was beating Bishop Amat, will be continuing her academic and athletic career at Cal State University Los Angeles. She will be playing outside hitter and the right side position.

"Honestly, this year beating Bishop Amat on senior night."

The Swordsmen went to five sets as it was a struggle. They won the first two sets and then lost the next two sets.

"In the fifth set, we just brought everyone together and told everyone that we needed to get through this and we could win and we did," Topete said.

Topete summed up her career at St. Paul saying, ".....It has prepared me by showing what I can be when I struggled and how I can rise above that and how I can show my talents at the right time."

"St. Paul has been there for me all four years and it's what I've known and it showed me how to be a great athlete," Topete said. "Volleyball brings out my strengths and fiery personality and it really shows who I am as a person and shows that I can be a leader."
