7-Eleven offers $100K reward for killer's arrest

■ A single gunman has been linked to a string of deadly 7-Eleven robberies across Southern California.

By City News Service

LA HABRA - The gunman who shot and killed two people and robbed 7- Eleven stores in three Southern California counties was still at-large Thursday, and the convenience store chain is offering a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the suspect.

The rash of violence -- carried out on July 11, or 7-11 -- prompted the 7-Eleven corporation to recommend that stores in Los Angeles, Riverside, Orange and San Bernardino counties temporarily close their doors Monday night and again on Tuesday night, and some stores also appeared to be closing early on Wednesday.

The company "is offering a $100,000 reward for information that leads to the arrest and conviction of the suspect," according to a 7-Eleven statement released Wednesday. "Tipsters may remain anonymous by contacting Orange County Crime Stoppers at 855-TIP-OCCŠ.

"Our hearts remain with the victims and their loved ones, and our focus continues to be on franchisee, associate and customer safety," according to a company statement Tuesday. "With that in mind, we have encouraged stores in the Los Angeles area to close again tonight.'

City News Service called several stores Wednesday evening. Some did not answer the phone. A clerk in Inglewood said the store planned to close before midnight. A clerk at a Hollywood store on Santa Monica Boulevard said the store would stay open all night but with new

"We're only letting one person in (at) a time and we've added more security," said the clerk, who declined to give his name.

Investigations were continuing in six cities, but the same suspect may have been involved in a crime spree that stretched from San Bernardino County, to Riverside County, then to Orange County -all involving 7-Eleven stores.

The first 7-Eleven holdup in the crime spree may have occurred in Ontario. Police said just after midnight Monday, the 7-Eleven at 636 N. Vine Ave. was robbed. The suspect held up the store with a handgun, but no shots were fired and no one was injured, police said.

At 12:40 a.m. Monday in Upland, the 7-Eleven store at 2410 W. Arrow Route was robbed at 12:40 a.m. Monday, police said.

At 1:50 a.m., a 7-Eleven store at 5102 La Sierra Ave. in Riverside was robbed by a gunman. That robbery escalated, with the suspect shooting a customer, who was hospitalized in what was described as grave condition.

"The suspect entered the store, brandished a firearm and robbed the clerk, then shot a customer before fleeing the store on foot," Riverside police Officer Ryan Railsback said.

Santa Ana police said 24-yearold Matthew Rule of Santa Ana was fatally shot at 3:25 a.m. Monday outside the 7-Eleven store in the 300 block of East 17th Street. Police found Rule in the parking lot with a gunshot wound to the upper body, Santa Ana Police Department Sgt. Maria Lopez said. The victim was pronounced dead at the scene.

The suspect apparently never entered the store in Santa Ana and it appears he robbed Rule, Lopez said. It wasn't clear if Rule was a customer of the store or why he was there, Lopez said.

Brea police said they responded at 4:17 a.m. Monday to the 7-Eleven store at Lambert Road and North Brea Boulevard and found a male store clerk fatally shot in what officers determined to be a robbery.

The clerk was later identified as 40-year-old Matthew Hirsch, who died at the scene, police said.

About a half-hour later, the 7-Eleven store at 381 E. Whittier Blvd. in La Habra was robbed, and two people were shot, according to La Habra police Sgt. Eric Roy. Both victims were taken to a hospital, and both were expected to survive. Police said the victims were a clerk and a customer.

Based on surveillance images, police have said the same suspect is believed to have been involved in the heists in Riverside, Santa Ana, Brea and La Habra. Investigations were continuing in the San Bernardino County robberies.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Police Department announced Tuesday afternoon that detectives are investigating a similar string of robberies at two convenience stores and two doughnut shops within the LAPD's Devonshire Division occurred between 3:55 and 5:30 a.m. Saturday.

The four businesses that were robbed were located in the 16000 block of Parthenia Street, the 16000 block of Nordhoff Street, the 16000 block of Devonshire Street and the 16000 block of San Fernando Mission Boulevard.

The suspect in those four robberies was described as a man between 25 and 30 years old, 5-feet-7 inches to 5-feet-10 inches tall and weighing between 160 and 180 pounds. He was last seen wearing a black hooded sweatshirt, a black face covering and dark jeans, and was armed with a black semiautomatic handgun.

No injuries were reported in the robberies, and LAPD detectives were working with other agencies to determine if the suspect in the four robberies is linked to Monday's 7-Eleven heists.

The Brea location where Hirsch was fatally shot was one of several stores that was closed Monday evening and early Tuesday morning. Yellow police tape was strung along the parking lot in the early morning hours and a makeshift memorial next to the parking was created for Anyone with information was asked to contact Brea Police Department Detective Alfred Rodriguez at 714-671-4438 or alfredr@cityofbrea.net.

Downey votes to give healthcare workers $25 per hour mınımum wage

■ Downey joins Los Angeles in skipping the ballot and giving eligible healthcare workers a higher minimum wage.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY Members in the San Fernando Valley that of local medical labor groups when the Downey City Council $70,000 a year." voted 4-0 to establish a $25 per hour minimum wage for eligible healthcare workers working in Downey's private hospitals.

> The new ordinance applies to privately-owned healthcare facilities located within the city, including licensed general acute and psychiatric hospitals, hospital-based facilities, licensed dialysis clinics and psychiatric health facilities, and all facilities that are part of an Integrated Delivery System.

While the measure relates to both clinical and non-clinical staff, it does not apply to managers and supervisors.

The law also forbids cuts in hours, staffing, or services to raise

The decision follows a successful petition campaign (requiring 6,500 nearly signatures) by proponents of the wage change.

Council members were given the option to send the initiative to November's ballot for voter approval, approve it outright as an ordinance, or order an impact report to be returned within 30 days, after which they would be required to make a decision.

The push for improved wages comes as some healthcare workers weary from working through the pandemic - argued that they were struggling to make ends meet in addition to coping with the physical, emotional, and mental burdens of their jobs.

"Healthcare workers have a unique job; this pandemic has shown that our job is unique, and that we deal with diseases that are communicable like Covid-19," said Gabriel Montoya, who works at Kaiser Permanente and is a member of the SEIU-UHW union.

"We also deal with patients who are going through mental health crisis, and we have to be there to take care of them. We deal with parents whose children are ill, and we have to be the ones to comfort them and take care of

"We want to do that job, we love serving our communities, but it doesn't make sense to have healthcare workers doing that $16, $18 dollars an hour when representatives. we know in LA County just to pay celebrated at city hall on Tuesday rent a family has to make at least

> Not all in attendance were in favor of the initiative.

Critics called the initiative "inequitable," "flawed" and healthcare staff in Downey would not be eligible.

"[The Hospital Association of Southern California] strongly urges the city council to refer this measure to the ballot for the Downey voters to decide," said Adena Tessler, regional vice president of HASC.

"We also request the city order an economic analysis prior to taking any action, so that the city council and voters are fully informed of the potential economic impacts."

"[The initiative] targets only private hospital facilities and their workers, excluding many providers serving the most vulnerable communities in Downey," she continued. "Our research has found that the workers at 65% of the healthcare facilities in Downey would be excluded from this benefit."

Councilman Mario Trujillo said that Downey's hospitals "will

"These last two years, the healthcare industry has come under the microscope, and the plight of the health workers, we hear you," said Trujillo.

"I remember clearly, the intersection of Bellflower and Imperial Highway, 'Heroes work here'...In thinking of healthcare workers, either we think they're heroes or they're not. The fact of the matter is, they were going to work while some of us had the luxury of being able to work behind a computer.'

"I'm convinced that Kaiser and PIH will be okay, even if this ordinance is passed," he continued. "I have an obligation to do what's best for the residents and for the future of the city.

Will this deter some clinics, maybe other healthcare providers from coming into the city? Perhaps. But I cannot stop thinking about the workers that had to go day in and day out towards danger."

Councilman Donald La work, and having them make Plante clapped back at hospital

> "When I first heard of this, my initial reaction was to put this to naming it after his colleague Alois the voters, and sort of wondered Alzheimer. we should be doing, frankly, decent wages sector by sector," said La Plante.

"I would be very happy arguing that a majority of to support an ordinance that includes the rest of the healthcare workers, as apparently our hospital association thinks we should do. We can't mandate public hospitals for the county, or the University of California, or the federal government what they pay; that's a duplicitous statement by the hospital council."

> La Plante, holding up a mailer he had received in opposition of the wage increase, said "he knew exactly how [the hospital association] would have treated this thing if we put it on the ballot."

> "They would have been putting out things like, 'Reject the unequal pay measure.' Instead of talking about whether healthcare workers deserve a fair wage, they'd be trying to play healthcare workers against each other, the same way negative campaigns work on everything else," said La Plante.

it to the voters changed the minute I got your mailing; you put me on the other side."

Councilwoman Claudia Frometa was forced to remove herself from the discussion due to her employment with Kaiser Permanente.

There were 10 potential cities where the initiative was filed, including Los Angeles, Anaheim, Inglewood, Long Beach, Monterey Park, Culver City, Baldwin Park, Duarte, and Lynwood.

Downey joins Los Angeles in setting the $25 wage minimum, after Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti signed it into law last

The ordinance goes into effect 10 days after approval.

Geovana Ramos, Jimmy Torres named John Glenn Scholar Athletes of the Year

NORWALK – Two top scholars and athletes have been named Scholar Athletes of the Year for John Glenn High School for the year 2021-22 at the school's senior awards night.

Geovana Ramos and Jimmy Torres have received the awards, along with seniors Natanael Jacobo and Gabriela Ortega, who were awarded the 2021-22 Athletes of the Year (See story in June 3, 2022 issue).

"But. it is was all thanks to the support from my family, teachers, coaches, and teammates. I wish the future athletes the best and I hope they too can earn this "Being the Scholar Athlete of the Year is very special to me because it shows that I was able to accomplish a lot of things while still playing the sports that I love," said Torres, who also played two years of varsity football. All my hard work and dedication of being a student athlete has now been noticed."

Glenn Athletic Director Linda Parra praised the two athletes and how they balanced their school work and athletics.

and played volleyball in the Fall on the frosh-soph team. As volleyball ended, she went right into soccer and played the first of her four years on varsity.

Ramos usually played midfield and center mid.

Her favorite memory came in her senior year on soccer.

"I remember in my senior year winning our first game against Bassett," she said. "The enthusiasm and the excitement from all of my teammates was really heartfelt. I really enjoyed "Geovana and Jimmy have that because it was our first win of the season."

"She plays center attacking middle and that is not an easy position to play. She communicates and moves the game around helping out her teammates in all areas.

"Geo works hard on and off the field. She is very organized with her studies and manages to balance homework, soccer, and and helps run different activities on for the soccer team. around school. Geovana has a great future ahead of her."

The third year was interrupted by the pandemic, and this last season Ramos was on varsity for volleyball playing for coach Daniel

"Geovana is a very humble, and hard-working athlete," Reyes said. "She always does what's asked of her, without any hesitation."

John Glenn History and AVID teacher Veronica Lorenzana said of Ramos, "There aren't many students like Geovana. Her quiet demeanor, calm spirit, and desire to serve others has benefitted our school more than words can Torres talked about being a scholar athlete.

"A scholar athlete is setting me up for the real world," he said. "Here at John Glenn, I had to focus both on school and sports and I feel like it's getting your feet wet for the real world, having to go to work and take care of your family.

Torres, who played for coach David Cruz, was the punter and kicker for the team and also years and it meant a lot to me and played other positions.

His senior year in the Fall of 2021, Torres played multiple positions, including cornerback, wide receiver, punting and kicking.

A special memory for Torres

The team finished second in the 605 League with a 6-3-1 record and was awarded a home Wild Card game hosting Lennox

"A special game I had here was in my sophomore year having a CIF Wild Card game at John Glenn in soccer," Torres remembered. "It was the first CIF game in about 10 my teammates. We just rewrote history by being able to participate

"I was in the net and playing goalkeeper. I think we won 5-0 (4-0) in that game and it meant a lot because there was a lot of people out there to watch us and not everybody can say that they won a CIF game.'

With the win, Glenn advanced to the first round and lost to Ganesha, who went on to play in the CIF title game that season.

Mrs. Lorenzana also had some very nice comments about Torres.

"I am extremely proud of Jimmy's dedication and leadership, both on and off the field," she said. "He is never afraid of a challenge, as he has played on both offense and defense on the football team and taken on the rigors of multiple AP classes.

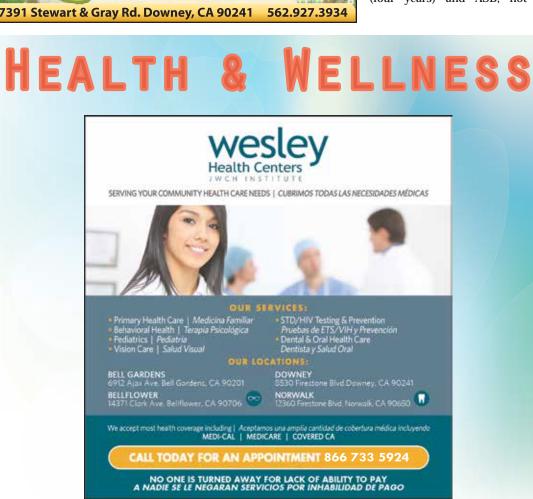

"His top 10 ranking and 4.2 'Jimmy is a smart, talented, GPA is evidence of his work ethic, and I know that he will continue Fullerton.

Biden is too old for a second term

By Michelle Goldberg

I can't help feeling very sorry for Joe Biden. He's wanted to be president for most of his life, first running 34 years ago. Had his son Beau not died in 2015, Biden might have entered the Democratic primary then; as vice president he would have been a favorite and likely would have beaten Donald Trump.

By the time he finally achieved the office he longed for, he was far past his prime. Trump had left the country in ruins, its institutions collapsing, much of the population gripped by furious delusions, and millions traumatized by the pandemic. Biden was elected to bring back a normality that now appears to be gone for good.

Many of the crises driving down Biden's approval numbers are not his fault. If an 8.6 percent inflation rate were due to his policies, then it's hard to see why the rate is even higher in Britain, at 9.1 percent, or why it's 7.9 percent in Germany. The mulish attachment to the filibuster by Senators Joe Manchin and Kyrsten Sinema makes most legislation impossible. Even if Biden had more activist inclinations, there's not much he could do about the Supreme Court's cruel reversal of Roe v. Wade or the increasing tempo of massacres that punctuate American life.

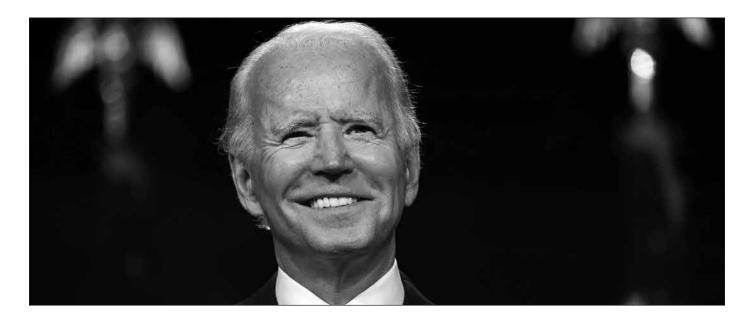

Nevertheless, I hope he doesn't run again, because he's too old.

Now, I didn't want Biden to be the Democratic nominee in 2020, partly for ideological reasons but even more because he seemed too worn-out and unfocused. In retrospect, however, given the way Republicans outperformed expectations, Biden may have been the only one of the major candidates who could have beaten Trump; voters showed no appetite for sweeping progressive change.

So I recognize that I could be wrong when I make a similar argument today. But the presidency ages even young men, and Biden is far from young; a country in as much trouble as ours needs a leader vigorous enough to inspire confidence.

As a recent New York Times/Siena College poll found, 64 percent of Democrats want a different presidential nominee in 2024. Those Democrats cite Biden's age more than any other factor, though job performance is close behind. Their concern isn't surprising. Biden has always been given to gaffes and malapropisms, but there is a painful suspense in watching him speak now, like seeing someone wobble on a tightrope. (Some of his misspeaking can be explained by the stutter he overcame as a child, but not all.) His staff often seems to be keeping him out of view; as The Times reported, he's participated "in fewer than half as many news conferences or interviews as recent predecessors."

Certainly, there's something nice about a president who doesn't torment the country with his vampiric thirst for attention. And by most accounts, Biden is still sharp and engaged in performing the behind-the-scenes duties of his office. But by receding so far into the background, he forfeits the ability to set the public agenda.

You can't spin away a bad economy, but you can draw attention to its bright spots, like a 3.6 percent unemployment rate. Americans overwhelmingly sympathize with Ukraine, and with a rousing enough message, some might be willing to accept the pain of high gas prices as the cost of standing up to Vladimir Putin. To rally them, however, it's not enough for the administration to repeat the phrase "Putin's price hike." Like the rest of us, the White House had ample notice of the Supreme Court's intention to overturn Roe v. Wade, but it somehow wasn't ready with an immediate executive order and public relations blitz.

There's a problem here that goes beyond a shortage of presidential speeches and media appearances, or even Biden himself. We are ruled by a gerontocracy. Biden is 79. Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi is 82. The House majority leader, Steny Hoyer, is 83. The Senate majority leader, Chuck Schumer, is 71. Often, it's not clear if they grasp how broken this country is.

They built their careers in institutions that worked, more or less, and they seem to expect them to start working again. They give every impression of seeing this moment, when the gears of government have seized and one party openly schemes against democracy, as an interregnum rather than a tipping point. Biden's Democratic critics come from different places on the political spectrum — some are infuriated by his centrism, others worried by his listlessness. What links most of them is desperation for leaders who show urgency and ingenuity.

If there's one consolation in Biden's age, it's that he can step aside without conceding failure. There's no shame in not running for president in your 80s. He emerged from semiretirement to save the country from a second Trump term, and for that we all owe him a great debt. But now we need someone who can stand up to the still-roiling forces of Trumpism.

There are plenty of possibilities: If Vice President Kamala Harris's approval ratings remain underwater, Democrats have a number of charismatic governors and senators they can turn to. Biden said, during the 2020 campaign, that he wanted to be a "bridge" to a new generation of Democrats. Soon it will be time to cross it.

Gawking in awe of the universe

By Shannon Stirone

"We are made of star stuff." When the astronomer Carl Sagan said that famous line, he was reminding people that much of the matter of our bodies was created within the stars long ago. He wanted people to know we are marvelous and our story is, too.

Humanity's story took a new and interesting turn when we traveled back in time 13 billion years. After over two decades of design and planning, on Monday NASA released the first image from the James Webb Space Telescope, which revealed the deepest infrared view of the universe, ever. This new deep-field image is much more detailed than earlier images captured by the Hubble telescope. Once again we are gawking in awe at the universe.

While there are a few interloper stars in the photo, nearly every dot in the image is a galaxy. For a sense of scale, if you could hold a grain of sand at arm's length up to the sky, that speck is the size of the view. It is one minuscule sliver of our universe, filled with thousands of galaxies, each with billions or trillions of star systems and each of those with its own planets.

On Tuesday, NASA released even more images from the telescope, including views of the Carina and Southern Ring Nebula as well as notable clusters of galaxies.

The world watched as the images were shared. Moments like this are rare not just because telescopes this powerful are few and far between but also because collective experiences are, too, at least ones so overwhelmingly positive. That is its own feat, and it's what space exploration does: It reminds us of our inherent connection. Viewing images like these can also provide a profound sense of insignificance — they offer a sense of proportion and understanding of just how small we are on the grand scale.

Bound by our bodies and our planet, we lean on telescopes, rovers, planetary missions and the like to extend our reach beyond our little cosmic neighborhood. With these first images, Webb has ushered in a new era of exploration.

The telescope has many missions, but perhaps most notably it will stare out into space to look for evidence of life. It will do this by peering into the atmospheres of exoplanets, those planets that orbit other stars.

Our universe is filled with dust and gas, so scientists need infrared light, a wavelength that allows us to bypass that pesky material, to see through it. Through its power to peer deep into the universe, the telescope will aim to solve mysteries in our planetary systems, including our solar system, NASA says: It will "look beyond to distant worlds around other stars and probe the mysterious structures and origins of our universe and our place in it."

Deep field images show a moment frozen in time — galaxies wrap around one another, swinging past and tearing their dusty, star-riddled arms apart in a violent ballet. Stars are born, birthing new solar systems full of planets; galactic glitter sprinkles the screen as if splattered with a cosmic paintbrush. Each speck of light in that image, each swirling swath of color, contains potentially trillions of planets, many of which are like ours.

"Some part of our being knows this is where we came from. We long to return," Dr. Sagan said. Perhaps that's why we feel so overcome staring at the ocean or looking at images of the cosmos. Telescopes allow us access to ancient time, to the earliest days of our story and to bigger questions that we've been asking since the beginning of human history: How? Why? Are we alone?

Humans are explorers by nature, and it's no surprise that as soon as we could explore the stars, we did. For thousands of years, humans etched stars on rocks and painted constellations on cave walls. We've been looking up, echoing a cosmic gaze that is built into our bones, blood and history.

When we look up, we look for ourselves. Dr. Sagan once said, "We are a way for the cosmos to know itself," and that could not be more true. We long to understand why we're here and to find meaning in a world where meaning is so often difficult to divine. Telescopes like this remind us that in spite of our specific challenges on Earth, the possibility of connection still exists.

Now that Webb is online, working and already sending extraordinary photos, we can not only continue asking the hard questions but also possibly, someday, have answers to them. To understand our environment in this way is to understand ourselves. To gaze at the cosmos is to gaze back at our history. These speckled, swirling, bizarre galaxies are a part of our past. It is one perhaps less accessible to us but nonetheless just as important.

Yes, we are made of star stuff, and perhaps much more. We are not just humans bound to a blue rocky planet in a galaxy. We are the universe calling ourselves home.

The Abe assassination reminds us that individuals make history

By Charles Lane

The assassination of former Japanese prime minister Shinzo Abe on July 8 shocked his country and the world. Beyond its obvious repugnance in moral terms, Abe's murder challenges us to consider what implications his sudden loss might have for the political future, in Japan and globally.

As such, it tests competing views of history and what does, or does not, determine the course of public events.

According to a widely held perspective, the removal of even a major figure such as Abe, who was the longest-serving head of government in postwar Japan and still influential despite resigning due to ill health in late 2020, lacks ultimate consequence. What determined the past, and will determine the future, are broad, impersonal, social forces — religion, ideology, demography, economic development.

Yet a contrary intuition — that individual leadership matters — persists. Assassinations perversely tend to confirm it. By plucking leaders violently from atop society, these killings divide history between one period when life was unimaginable without these prominent personages and another, full of what-ifs, defined by their absence.

Surely the power to make such an impact is part of what tempts assassins. And we must admit the painful extent to which they do, in fact, shape our world, albeit through subtraction: We are experiencing history minus Abraham Lincoln, Archduke Franz Ferdinand, Huey Long, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., John F. and Robert F. Kennedy, Yitzhak Rabin and Anwar Sadat.

For that matter, we live in a world shaped by assassinations that failed, perhaps the most fateful of which was the attempt on Adolf Hitler's life by coup-minded officers and diplomats 78 years ago this July

Postwar Japan, a restored but aging economic power facing the rise of its ancient rival — China — might have tried to jump-start its productive capability and reassert itself in global affairs, including militarily, no matter who served as prime minister between 2012 and 2020.

Even within the constraints of a culture that prizes consensus and collective action, however, Abe pursued those objectives in his own particular way, casting Japanese reassertion as both a legitimate national interest and a contribution to the democratic world's security. He won over Japanese voters and U.S. presidents as different as Barack Obama and Donald Trump.

Japan's surviving political leadership now seems motivated to build a monument to Abe in the form of amendments, long sought by him, that will change the country's pacifist postwar constitution clearly to authorize military self-defense.

Though the contexts are totally different, the process could resemble President Lyndon B. Johnson's pursuit of the 1964 Civil Rights Act as a tribute to his slain predecessor, John F. Kennedy. Another precedent: Congress passed civil service reform in 1883, in response to the assassination two years earlier of President James Garfield by Charles Guiteau, a frustrated federal job seeker.

These examples only illustrate that assassination can have paradoxical side-effects — they do not redeem it. Political murder is inherently destabilizing to any political system and especially antithetical to democracy. Nothing could be more contrary to popular rule than the violent decapitation of a government, party or social movement by one self-appointed executioner.

This is why the United States is wise to invest in Secret Service protection and other measures to keep public officials safe. The impact of a major assassination on the already feverishly divided U.S. body politic today would be too awful to consider. Alas, it is also all too imaginable, as shown by the recent arrest of an armed man who, according to law enforcement, had second thoughts about killing Supreme Court Justice Brett M. Kavanaugh and surrendered to police outside the justice's house.

If we are honest about it, the need to field a small army of official bodyguards constitutes a deeply troubling, though tacit, admission of insufficient domestic tranquility in the United States.

Happier and, in an important sense, more democratic, is the country where weapons possession is appropriately limited, the public's attitudes are temperate — and politicians, judges and candidates feel free to walk the streets with minimal or no security.

The United States came closer to that ideal before Nov. 22, 1963, than it has since. Sweden lost a great deal of innocence in 1986, when a gunman killed former prime minister Olof Palme as he left a movie theater with his family, having previously given his security detail the night off.

As of July 8, Japan, too, was the kind of place where public officials often felt safe mingling with the voters they proposed to represent.

Now it faces the grim task of striking a new, sustainable balance, bearing in mind always that, in a democracy, no individual has the right to change history through violence — and all individuals must feel safe to try to change it peacefully.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

Evidently, our COVID-19 pandemic just hasn't been enough. Now we have monkeypox. What is it? Should we worry?

The virus that causes monkeypox as smallpox. However, note that monkeypox is far less severe. Its symptoms are similar, and include fever, aches, chills, exhaustion, sore throat and swollen lymph nodes, and skin lesions that can be intense.

However, smallpox had a mortality rate close to 30%, and the rate for monkeypox is in the range of 3-6%. Those who fare the worst are young children.

Due to the eradication of smallpox, the United States stopped administering vaccinations in 1972. Ās it turns out, that vaccine was and still is protective against monkeypox. In fact, the most severe cases today occur among those under 50, who would not have received the smallpox vaccination.

This virus was originally transmitted from animals (monkeys and apes, rodents, and rabbits) to humans. The first human case of monkeypox was recorded in 1970 in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

Monkeypox still occurs mostly in Central and Western Africa. The virus first reached the United States in Texas in 2003, from a shipment of animals from Ghana.

Humans can contract monkeypox from a bite from an infected animal, or through direct contact with the animal's lesions or body fluids. In order for the virus to spread from one human to another, it takes close contact with an infected person's lesions, body fluids, respiratory droplets, or contaminated materials (such as bedding).

Don't be alarmed. Monkeypox does not spread easily among people. Still, confirmed cases in California have climbed to 136, mostly in Los Angeles and San Francisco. It is of particular concern among the LGBTQ community, especially through skin-toskin contact in gay men.

Some seven thousand cases worldwide are a very far cry from the 557 million total cases of COVID-19 to date (and well over six million COVID-19 deaths). Nonetheless, monkeypox could become a significant global public health risk if the virus finds an easy way to spread to our vulnerable population of children, to those who are immunesuppressed, and to those who did not receive the smallpox vaccine.

We are gaining a better understanding about its spread, and are studying its epidemiology, sources of infection, and transmission patterns. Vaccines have been developed for prevention (although there is currently a serious shortage) and we now have antiviral medications to help treat it.

Stay tuned for new developments.

Former Downey police officer charged with tampering

■ Eduardo Castro, a 14-year veteran of the Downey Police Department, was charged with felony witness tampering.

Downey Police said they are cooperating with the District Attorney's investigation.

DOWNEY – A former detective with the Downey Police Department was charged Tuesday with one felony count of witness tampering.

Eduardo Castro is scheduled to be arraigned Aug. 11 at the Foltz Criminal Justice Center.

Details of the alleged witness tampering were not released. In a news release, however, Los Angeles County District Attorney George Gascon said his office has "a duty to hold accountable anyone who tries to illegally influence the judicial process for their own benefit or the benefit of others."

"It is especially troubling when a police officer is charged with crimes that threaten the integrity of our legal system," Gascon said.

Castro was hired as a Downey police officer on June 2, 2008. His final day of employment was June 29, 2022.

It's not clear if Castro resigned or was fired. A spokesperson for the City of Downey declined to elaborate, citing "peace officer privacy laws."

"With the above said, the Downey Police Department reiterates that it holds its employees to the highest ethical standards," Police Chief Leslie Murray said in a statement. "We are committed to these standards and to providing quality public service to our community.

"When we become aware of possible misconduct, the allegations are thoroughly investigated and appropriate corrective action is taken. The Downey Police Department is committed to professional providing law enforcement services and it will work with the District Attornev's Office as necessary and to the extent
