Residents urged to limit outdoor watering

■ Crews will begin making repairs to a 36-mile pipeline starting Monday; outdoor watering will be restricted for 15 days.

By City News Service

DOWNEY – More than four million residents in Los Angeles County were urged Tuesday to suspend outdoor watering for 15 days next month while the Metropolitan Water District repairs a leak in a water delivery pipeline.

The repairs will take place from Sept. 6-20, and will impact the cities of Beverly Hills, Burbank, Glendale, Long Beach, Pasadena, San Fernando and Torrance.

Residents in the Central Basin Municipal Water District along with the Foothill Municipal Water District, Three Valleys Municipal Water District and West Basin Municipal Water District will also be impacted.

Officials discovered a leak in the 36-mile Upper Feeder pipeline, which delivers water from the Colorado River to Southern California, earlier this year. The pipeline was running at a reduced capacity after a temporary repair while officials designed a more permanent solution.

"The temporary fix we have in place has allowed us to operate the pipeline at a reduced capacity over the summer, but it is not intended to last long-term," MWD General Manager Adel Hagekhalil said at a news conference at Burbank Water and Power's Ron E. Davis Eco Campus.

"We cannot delay this repair any further -- doing so risks a failure and the potential for an unplanned, emergency situation."

 NLMUSD will transition to by-trustee election system starting in 2024.

By Vincent Medina Contributor

NORWALK - Norwalk La Mirada Unified School District voted to transition to a by-trustee election system on Monday, after Malibu attorney Kevin Shenkman threatened litigation.

The district uses an at-large election system, where the entire district votes for its board members. Under a by-trustee election system the district is divided into trustee-areas, who would vote for a board candidate in their area.

At-large election systems are prohibited under the California Voting Rights Act (CVRA) if it impairs a protected class to elect candidates or have an influence in an election.

Shenkman said that public members in the district called his attention to NLMUSD, and he is prepared to sue the district if they elect to continue using the at-large system

'[CVRA] is the law in California," Shenkman said. "It's time that [NLMUSD] brings their elections into compliance with the law."

Community member Vicki Megan Olsen spoke against the by-trustee system during public testimony.

"I would encourage the board to hire an outside firm with community oversights to create equitable districts according to the most recent census.'

Wenkart also explained to board member Chris Staples that if the district won Shenkman's case, another firm could send a demand letter and the process would start again.

"I think we all feel we're being forced into this decision," Staples said. "We're going to have to redouble our efforts and really make sure that we continue to serve all of our students.'

The NLMUSD school board voted unanimously to transition to a by-trustee area election system.

Guaranteed income program begins for 1,000 LA County residents

LOS ANGELES - Los Angeles County's guaranteed basic income program is underway, with 1,000 residents now receiving $1,000 a month for the next three years, officials said Tuesday.

The recipients were chosen randomly from more than 180,000 people who applied for the program.

"Given the huge number of L.A. County residents who applied, it's abundantly clear that a guaranteed basic income is an idea whose time has come," Supervisor Sheila Kuehl said. "I'm confident that we will see what other pilots have already shown: that a guaranteed basic income, by giving people a bit of financial breathing room, allows them to stabilize their lives and that of their family.

"Three years from now, I feel confident that this L.A. County program will be seen as a foundation stone that led to expanded programs providing economic opportunity and stability to every eligible American household, Kuehl continued.

The county Board of Supervisors voted to develop the pilot program last year to address poverty and income instability.

Participants must be at least 18 years old, have a household income under $56,000 for a single person or $96,000 for a family of four and have experienced negative impacts due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

The L.A. County participants were chosen by the University of Pennsylvania's Center for Guaranteed Income, which is researching guaranteed income programs across the country.

Recipients receive the money via debit card. They range in age from 18 to 91 and live in communities throughout the county, speaking languages including Armenian, Cantonese, Farsi, Korean, Mandarin, Spanish and English, according to officials with Breathe: L.A. County's Guaranteed Income Program.

The program administrator, Strength Based Community Change, will keep in touch with the selected participants and assist them throughout the duration of the program to help them reach their personal and financial goals, officials said.

The pilot program is based on a similar program in Stockton, California, that has been praised for its success. The city of Los Angeles introduced a guaranteed basic income program, called BIG:LEAP, last year.

Following Bryant trial, county supervisors want report on photo policies

LOS ANGELES - A week after Los Angeles County was ordered to pay $30 million in damages over photos taken by first responders of human remains at the helicopter crash that killed Kobe Bryant and eight others, the Board of Supervisors Tuesday called for a report on policies and training governing such actions by sheriff's deputies and firefighters.

On a 4-0 vote, with Supervisor Sheila Kuehl absent, the board approved a motion introduced by Supervisor Janice Hahn calling for a review of existing policies and possible new ones that could be implemented.

"After 11 days of trial and testimonies from more than 10 witnesses, the jury decided that neither the fire nor sheriff's department had adequate policies and/or training in place that would prevent such a violation from occurring," Hahn wrote in her motion. "In the aftermath of this public trial and massive verdict, it is important that the county review Fire remarks, he retaliated by slowing down her food orders, the suit states. suffering engendered when the pictures were snapped and displayed for no good reason to a bartender, attendees of an awards ceremony and sent by a sheriff's deputy to a colleague while they were playing a video game.

The county did not dispute that some photos were shared with a small number of deputies and firefighters. Defense attorneys maintained that all images taken by first responders were destroyed on orders of the sheriff and fire chief, and no longer exist in any form. The photos never entered the public domain or appeared on the internet, the county insisted.

However, Bryant and Chester insisted they do not believe that the pictures won't someday surface.

Along with Chester and Bryant's loved ones, the helicopter crash killed Alyssa Altobelli, 14; Keri Altobelli, 46; John Altobelli, 56; Christina Mauser, 38; and pilot Ara Zobayan, 50.

Two other families separately settled with the county over the photos for $1.25 million each. All of the victims' families reached a settlement with the helicopter company over the crash, but those terms remain confidential.

Vanessa Bryant announced last week plans to donate proceeds from her part of the judgment to a foundation named in her husband's and daughter's memories. The nonprofit Mamba and Mambacita Sports foundation offers sports education to underserved athletes. Kobe Bryant's nickname was Black Mamba.

Macaroni Grill sued for sexual harassment by former workers

INDUSTRY - Two former employees and one current worker at Romano's Macaroni Grill, all females, are suing the owners of the restaurant chain, alleging that management did not do enough to stop two male supervisors at the now-closed Industry location from sexually harassing them.

Shanell Covarrubias, Maria Raya and Idalia Carrera brought the lawsuit Wednesday in Pomona Superior Court against Italian Restaurant Group LLC and two of their bosses, Cesar Pavias and Jose Castro.

The complaint alleges sexual battery, hostile work environment harassment, gender discrimination, failure to prevent discrimination and harassment, retaliation, intentional infliction of emotional distress and negligent retention and supervision. The women seek unspecified compensatory and punitive damages.

A Macaroni Grill representative did not immediately reply to a request for comment.

According to the complaint, Covarrubias transferred to the Irvine location, but plaintiffs Raya and Carrera were forced to resign in 2020 because they could not tolerate the work conditions at the eatery on Colima Road near the Puente Hills Mall. All worked as servers and bartenders.

Covarrrubias, 22, of Lake Elsinore began working at Macaroni Grill in April 2018 in what was her first job after leaving high school, the suit states. She worked full-time, including evenings and weekends, and hoped to save for college, according to the suit.

From 2018 until January 2020, Covarrubias endured repeated unwanted advances and sexual harassment by Pavias and Castro, but nothing was done after she complained to management, the suit states.

Carrera, 27, of Rowland Heights has a young child and was hired at the restaurant in September 2017, working weekends and day shifts in the hope of earning better tips, the suit states.

Raya, 38, of Whittier provides for four children and began working at Long Beach Port's new bridge finally gets its name

LONG BEACH - With the state Legislature's blessing, the massive new bridge connecting Terminal Island and downtown Long Beach at the city's port complex was officially named the "Long Beach International Gateway Bridge" Wednesday.

"Since our new bridge officially opened in 2020, it has been a bright new landmark for our city -- welcoming visitors from close to home and around the world," Long Beach Mayor Robert Garcia said in a statement. "The approval of its official name as the Long Beach International Gateway Bridge perfectly fits all that it represents, and we are excited to have it serve our community and our great port for generations to come.'

The span opened to traffic in October 2020 as a replacement for the 1960s-vintage Gerald Desmond Bridge, which was replaced to allow passage of larger cargo ships beneath. The original bridge was 155 feet above the water, but its replacement is 205 feet high.

Its construction was a roughly $1.6 billion project that included the new structure and demolition of the original bridge. Crews began dismantling large sections of the original Gerald Desmond Bridge in July, with the demolition expected to be completed next year.

State legislation to name the new structure the Long Beach International Gateway Bridge was introduced following a public survey conducted last year in hopes of selecting a moniker. The measure was unanimously approved by both the Assembly and Senate, city officials said.

"Like our port and its workers, this iconic bridge represents the very best of Long Beach," Assemblyman Patrick O'Donnell, D-Long Beach and the bill's author, said in a statement. "The International Gateway Bridge connects our great community and state to the entire world. With a fitting new name, our port will handle the largest cargo ships and meet the everincreasing demands of today's global supply chain.

Judge: Man can seek punitive damages against pair in mask altercation

MANHATTAN BEACH - A Manhattan Beach man can seek punitive damages against two other men, one of whom allegedly ran over the plaintiff twice in a supermarket parking lot in 2020 following a dispute over mask-wearing, a judge ruled Tuesday.

Torrance Superior Court Judge Gary Tanaka denied a motion by lawyers for Alan Boeke and Ronald Stevenson to dismiss plaintiff William Todd Robinson's bid for punitive damages against the pair. Boeke and Stevenson are identified in the suit as spouses and Boeke is the defendant who allegedly hit Robinson with his car.

The judge noted that Boeke denied Robinson's allegation that he intended to strike the plaintiff with his vehicle and the defendant also argued that Robinson's allegations of intentional conduct were vague.

"However, there is nothing vague about these allegations," Tanaka wrote. "(Robinson) has alleged sufficient facts to state his causes of action for battery and intentional infliction of emotional distress based on (Boeke's) conduct in intentionally attempting to run over (Robinson) ... with his vehicle after the parties had an argument at the supermarket, and then fleeing the scene."

Robinson, 69, and Boeke, 75, were separately shopping at the Vons store on Manhattan Beach Boulevard in Manhattan Beach on Oct. 2, 2020, before the incident, according to the suit.

"Robinson was not wearing a surgical or protective mask while he was shopping and was, in fact, shopping for masks among other items because he had exhausted his supply," the suit states.

Upon seeing Robinson without a mask, Boeke "engaged in verbal harassment and assault" of the plaintiff, the suit states. Although Robinson tried to ignore Boeke, the defendant became increasingly loud and belligerent, according to the suit.

The motion called for county attorneys, working with the fire and sheriff's departments, to provide a "confidential report" within 45 days analyzing policies and training procedures, and possible new measures that could be imposed "that address the proper conduct of first responders regarding photographs of human remains in the course of their duties as first responders.³

million in damages, evenly split, to Bryant's widow, Vanessa, and Chris Chester, whose wife and daughter also died in the January 2020 helicopter crash in Calabasas. The Bryants' 13-year-old daughter, Gianna, also died in the crash.

In calculating damages, the jury found that the sheriff's department and the Los Angeles County Fire Department both violated Bryant and Chester's constitutional rights to privacy for their loved ones in death.

While the jury held the sheriff's department liable for maintaining a practice of sharing photos taken at accident or crime scenes, the county fire department was not found to have such a custom.

An attorney for Chester had asked the jury to compel the county to pay a total of $75 million split between Bryant and Chester for pain and

> The plaintiffs came forward hoping that Macaroni Grill management would take appropriate remedial action, the suit states.

> "Unfortunately, Macaroni Grill did not," according to the suit, which further alleges the plaintiffs were denied promotions and had their shifts changed in retaliation for speaking out.

Macaroni Grill's deficient responses added to plaintiffs' harms and has "created and perpetuated a dangerous workplace," the suit states

Eventually, plaintiff responded in kind, which led to an exchange of insults between the parties," the suit states.

Calm appeared to have been restored when a Vons employee gave Robinson a mask and the two men went to different cashier lines. However, as Robinson left the store and reached the parking lot, he saw Boeke driving directly at him, the suit states. Robinson tried to avoid being hit, but Boeke turned his vehicle toward him, striking the plaintiff with the front of the defendant's car, according to the suit.

Robinson fell and was run over by the driver-side front and rear wheels of Boeke's car, then Boeke backed up the vehicle and again ran over the plaintiff's legs while he was still on the ground, the suit alleges Boeke then sped out of the parking lot and onto Manhattan Beach Boulevard, the suit states. A Vons worker standing near the front doors the store took a photo of Boeke's vehicle, which matched the description of the vehicle that Robinson later gave to Manhattan Beach police, the suit states.

Robinson believes that shortly after the incident, Boeke and Stevenson transferred their interest in their Manhattan Beach residence to limit the assets from which the plaintiff could get compensation for his injuries, the suit states

Robinson has incurred expenses for medicines, X-rays and other medical supplies and services, according to the complaint.

Why Trump will soon be indicted

By Judge Andrew Napolitano

It gives me no joy to write this piece.

Even a cursory review of the redacted version of the affidavit submitted in support of the government's application for a search warrant at the home of former President Donald Trump reveals that he will soon be indicted by a federal grand jury for three crimes: Removing and concealing national defense information (NDI), giving NDI to those not legally entitled to possess it, and obstruction of justice by failing to return NDI to those who are legally entitled to retrieve it.

When he learned from a phone call that 30 FBI agents were at the front door of his Florida residence with a search warrant and he decided to reveal this publicly, Trump assumed that the agents were looking for classified topsecret materials that they'd allege he criminally possessed. His assumptions were apparently based on his gut instinct and not on a sophisticated analysis of the law. Hence, his public boast that he declassified all the formerly classified documents he took with him.

Unbeknownst to him, the feds had anticipated such a defense and are not preparing to indict him for possessing classified materials, even though he did possess hundreds of voluntarily surrendered materials marked "top secret." It is irrelevant if the documents were declassified, as the feds will charge crimes that do not require proof of classification. They told the federal judge who signed the search warrant that Trump still had NDI in his home. It appears they were correct.

Under the law, it doesn't matter if the documents on which NDI is contained are classified or not, as it is simply and always criminal to have NDI in a non-federal facility, to have those without security clearances move it from one place to another, and to keep it from the feds when they are seeking it. Stated differently, the absence of classification - for whatever reason - is not a defense to the charges that are likely to be filed against Trump.

favor. One of the elements that they must prove for any of the three crimes is that Trump knew that he had the documents. The favor he did was admitting to that when he boasted that they were no longer classified. He committed a mortal sin in the criminal defense world by denying something for which he had not been accused.

The second element that the feds must prove is that the documents actually do contain national defense information. And the third element they must prove is that Trump put these documents into the hands of those not authorized to hold them and stored them in a non-federally secured place. Intelligence community experts have already examined the documents taken from Trump's home and are prepared to tell a jury that they contain the names of foreign agents secretly working for the U.S. This is the crown jewel of government secrets. Moreover, Trump's Florida home is not a secure federal facility designated for the deposit of NDI.

The newest aspect of the case against Trump that we learned from the redacted affidavit is the obstruction allegation. This is not the obstruction that Robert Mueller claimed he found Trump committed during the Russia investigation. This is a newer obstruction statute, signed by President George W. Bush in 2002, that places far fewer burdens on the feds to prove. The older statute is the one Mueller alleged. It characterizes any material interference with a judicial function as criminal. Thus, one who lies to a grand jury or prevents a witness from testifying commits this variant of obstruction.

But the Bush-era statute, the one the feds contemplate charging Trump with having violated, makes it a crime of obstruction by failing to return government property or by sending the FBI on a wild goose chase looking for something that belongs to the government and that you know that you have. This statute does not require the preexistence of a judicial proceeding. It only requires that the defendant has the government's property, knows that he has it and baselessly resists efforts by the government to get it back.

Where does all this leave Trump? The short answer is: in hot water. The Yet, misreading and underestimating the feds, Trump actually did them a longer answer is: He is confronting yet again the federal law enforcement and intelligence communities for which he has rightly expressed such public disdain. He had valid points of expression during the Russia investigation. He has little ground upon which to stand today.

I have often argued that many of these statutes that the feds have enacted to protect themselves are morally unjust and not grounded in the Constitution. One of my intellectual heroes, the great Murray Rothbard, taught that the government protects itself far more aggressively than it protects our natural rights.

In a monumental irony, both Julian Assange, the WikiLeaks journalist who exposed American war crimes during the Afghanistan and Iraq wars, and Edward Snowden, the former National Security Agency employee who exposed criminal mass government surveillance upon the American public, stand charged with the very same crimes that are likely to be brought against Trump. On both Assange and Snowden, Trump argued that they should be executed. Fortunately for all three, these statutes do not provide for capital punishment.

Rothbard warned that the feds aggressively protect themselves. Yet, both Assange and Snowden are heroic defenders of liberty with valid moral and legal defenses. Assange is protected by the Pentagon Papers case, which insulates the media from criminal or civil liability for revealing stolen matters of interest to the public, so long as the revealer is not the thief. Snowden is protected by the Constitution, which expressly prohibits the warrantless surveillance he revealed, which was the most massive peacetime abuse of government power.

What will Trump say is his defense to taking national defense information? I cannot think of a legally viable one.

Biden is buying votes

By R. Emmett Tyrrell Jr.

Supposedly President Joe Biden's popularity went up last week. How did he achieve this feat, raising his popularity from 32% to the low 40s? He did it the old-fashioned way. Joe bought the votes of 20 million students who have been stupid enough to take out usually catastrophically burdensome student loans

At first Joe was reluctant to give in to these students and their vast array of advocates. Then he decided to give them as much as $10,000 in debt relief for their vote. Then he dithered for months. Finally, he said last week he would buy their votes for as much as $20,000 a piece. The hell with those poor suckers who have paid off their student loans and for any other suckers who will pay off any debt that they owe the U.S. Treasury.

Maybe it is time to close down the IRS. In his latest misnamed bill, the Inflation Reduction Act, Joe has enlarged the IRS by 87,000, eventually costing the electorate an estimated $80 billion. In his student loan relief bill, he will cost the electorate an estimated $1 trillion dollars. In the meantime, we are trying to whip inflation by cutting spending, but by cutting it where? It seems to me that there is a lot of dizziness within this administration. Consistency is not their strong suit.

For that matter, competence is not one of the administration's strong suits either. For months, its members have told us not to worry about the prospect of inflation. Inflation is not going to be a problem. The administration came up with a magic word to accompany inflation. The word was "transitory." They told us inflation was a transitory thing. For months, they spent madly. It was trillions of dollars that we did not have. They spent on COVID relief, on contrivances of the welfare state and on other matters. One did not have to immerse oneself in the mysteries of higher economics to know that inflation is what one gets when too much money is chasing too few goods in an economy. The consequence is a higher inflation rate eating into the family budgets. Right now, the family budget is being consumed at a rate of roughly 8.2% a month. It is no surprise that this rate of inflation is intolerable.

Now the Biden government is going to wipe out millions of dollars in student loans, and things will pretty much continue as they have for years, ever since the days of the Great Society when the spending took off. What began as a loan program for students borrowing up to $7,500 will continue to climb. And the universities of the country will continue to do what has been working for them for years: raise tuitions, raise fees, pass the expenses on to the students and their parents. The cost of a college education has risen exponentially with no test for the effectiveness of the education that the students are allegedly getting. One of the great jokes of this student loan controversy is that there is no recognized test offered after four years of college (or how many it might take) for discerning what a student has learned.

In all this controversy about student loans, rarely have I heard of any university official complaining about the costs that the universities pass on to students. The cost of counseling, the cost of the phony programs such as anger management, the cost of how to write up a proper contract before a couple can properly engage in sexual commerce and, of course, the vexed question of race relations, to say nothing of the looming question over every college campus today of transgender intercourse. Then there is the cost of deans for special studies, of deans for this enthusiasm or that enthusiasm. And the ever-present question of the costs that the university must pass on? The cost of salaries. The cost of nervous breakdown analyses among the profs, the costs of maintaining the classroom between demonstrations.

Let us face the facts. The universities of this country are some of the most poorly run institutions in the land. Most universities are organized scams. They lost the ability to educate years ago. Now they simply immerse students in ideological nonsense that has nothing to do with education. Look at a picture of students dressed for class. The students are dressed like 10-year-olds, and the profs are dressed like babysitters. I have no idea how administrators dress, though they might dress like con artists. It would be fitting.

The dangers of a third political party

By Steve Chapman

A group of former Democrats, former Republicans and former independents has come together to launch a third party. Called Forward, it is meant to appeal to all the Americans who are so over both major parties.

If there was ever a time when a third party could gain a following, you might think this would be it. Both of the most likely presidential nominees in 2024, Joe Biden and Donald Trump, have low approval ratings. The bitter polarization of politics, which grates on most Americans, is a product of our two-party system, which gives outsized power to ideological zealots who turn out to vote in primaries.

Forward won't dazzle with star power. Its biggest names are Andrew Yang, who ran for president in the Democratic primaries in 2020, and Christine Todd Whitman, who was head of the Environmental Protection Agency under George W. Bush.

Who the party might run for president is up in the air, but one possibility is someone who finds herself without a party: Liz Cheney. Despite losing her House reelection primary, she's not planning to go away. "I will do whatever it takes to make sure Donald Trump is never again anywhere near the Oval Office," she said in her concession speech.

The veteran progressive Texas politician and pundit Jim Hightower snarked that the only thing in the middle of the road is yellow stripes and dead armadillos. In fact, it's where all the traffic goes.

In 2020, according to the American National Election Study, 59% of voters identified themselves as either moderate, slightly conservative or slightly liberal – centrists, in short. But this majority somehow manages to be a minority in either major party. That helps to explain why 62% of Americans agree on the need for another vehicle.

If these voters were to unite to challenge the status quo, they could be a mighty force. But the chances of that happening are slim.

We have some recent experience with third parties that actually have made a difference in presidential elections. They suggest the middle is not the most fertile ground for insurgencies.

George Wallace carried five Southern states in 1968 by exploiting racial and cultural resentments. Ross Perot, who captured 19% of the popular vote in 1992, sounded much like Trump in his appeals to nativism, sneering at elites and vilification of free trade.

John Anderson, a liberal Republican in the days before that species went extinct, took the left lane in 1980, getting 7% of the vote against Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan. Ralph Nader, nominated in 2000 by the Green Party, ran as the progressive alternative and may have taken enough votes from Democrat Al Gore to elect George W. Bush.

"Third parties require a burning cause or a charismatic leader," presidential historian Richard Norton Smith told me. "It's tough to motivate potential majorities to swamp the polls in the name of moderation, good government or civility."

Cheney may not quite fill the bill of a charismatic leader. And if she hopes to block Trump, the GOP primaries are the best avenue. Even with no chance of winning a dogfight, she could put enough holes in his fuselage to bring him down in the general election - as Patrick Buchanan did to George H.W. Bush in the 1992 GOP race.

If Cheney were to run as a third-party candidate, she would pose a bigger threat to Biden or his successor than to Trump. A recent New York Times/ Siena College poll found that 16% of Republicans say they wouldn't vote for Trump in 2024.

In a two-candidate race, many if not most of them would grit their teeth and cast a ballot for Biden. Offered another option, though, they might go overwhelmingly for Cheney - and some independents and moderate Democrats could join them. Trump would have a good chance to win with an even smaller slice of the popular vote than he got in his previous campaigns.

Given the GOP's capture by people who worship Trump, excuse insurrection, reject the rule of law and accept election results only when they win, a third party is a dangerous proposition. The critical task is to defeat Trump and his confederates.

In a campaign speech Wednesday, Illinois Gov. J.B. Pritzker called on "the coalition of the sane" to unite against Trumpian extremism. In the 2024 election, that coalition will have only one option, and it's not a third party.

Cruz said. "This game (49-8 win over Firebaugh) allowed us to get back to our fundamentals. They swarmed us last week and that was our achilles and they turned it around."

"We were able to run at will and I felt like we could score and we got our first victory of the season and played well defensively and our offensive line was the focus this week and they stepped up to the situation."

Glenn opened the scoring in the first quarter with a 3-yard burst up the middle by Tuifua for the 6-0 lead and senior Joseph Chavez gave the Eagles a 7-0 advantage with the extra point.
