Robert Luna to become new sheriff

Beach Police Department will take over as Alex Villanueva concedes defeat.

By City News Service

LOS ANGELES - A defiant Sheriff Alex Villaneuva conceded defeat Tuesday in his re-election bid, but in doing so, he again lashed out at his critics for pushing what he called "false narratives" about his leadership of the department.

Villanueva has been consistently trailing former Long Beach police Chief Robert Luna as results from last week's election continued to be tallied. Updated vote totals released Monday by the county Registrar-Recorder/County Clerk's Office showed Luna with a lead of 324,837 votes, up from 259,184 when the last update was released on Saturday.

The results from last Tuesday's election currently stand at 987,730 votes for Luna, or 59.8%, and 662,893 for Villanueva, or 40.2%.

There are an estimated 655,300 ballots left to be processed, according to the clerk's office. Another update of the voting totals is expected to be released Tuesday afternoon

"I want to wish the incoming sheriff well," Villanueva said during an afternoon news conference. "I want him to succeed for a simple reason -- the safety of the community depends on him succeeding. The welfare of every single person on the department depends on him succeeding.

"... Again, we wish Mr. Luna well, and like I said before, the narrative of the political establishment and the media is not the narrative of the people who are struggling to survive day by day. ... That disconnect is real."

He added, "One thing I've learned also is that speaking truth

• The former chief of the Long humbled that you have elected me as your next sheriff. With your vote, you have entrusted me with a clear mandate to bring new leadership and accountability to the sheriff's department. And that's exactly what I will do.

> "I want to offer my best wishes to Sheriff Villanueva and his family. And I look forward to working with the talented and courageous sworn and professional staff of the sheriff's department who are dedicated to keeping our communities safe."

> During his concession news conference, Villanueva blamed his loss on what he called a sweeping misinformation campaign and the use of "false narratives" focused on issues including alleged deputy gangs, his alleged resistance of oversight by the county and Civilian Oversight Commission and other allegations of internal harassment and retaliation against purported whistleblowers.

> He said he was victimized by "weaponized political machine" а operated by the county, which he described as a "corrupt criminal enterprise."

He then rattled off a list of what he called major accomplishments during his tenure, including addressing homelessness, revising body-worn camera program, reinstating the issuance of concealed weapon permits and managing the jail system during the By City News Service COVID-19 pandemic.

His defeat marks the second straight election in which an incumbent sheriff was unseated, something that hadn't occurred for roughly a century prior. Villaneuva ousted Sheriff Jim McDonnell four vears ago.

The candidates ran a spirited campaign, with Luna attacking the incumbent over his torrid ignoring the issue of deputy gangs booked at the sheriff's department within the department. Villanueva has deflected such criticism, saying his battles with the board show he is a fierce defender of the department and its deputies, and insisting that he has gone to great lengths to attack and ban alleged deputy cliques in the agency.

And the second thing was, OK, make it happen. ... Every adversity I've faced throughout my years in law enforcement has always propelled me to a bigger stage, a bigger audience and a bigger voice.'

Villanueva's voice cracked slightly with emotion as he wrapped up his roughly 20-minute remarks, saying, "If there are people who think somehow we're defeated, quite the opposite. We're walking out of here with our heads high. We accomplished the mission we set out to be, we could have used probably four more years to solidify it, but we set a very high standard."

Villanueva's victory four years ago came with strong backing from reform-minded community groups and Democrats. But over the past four years, Villanueva's support among those groups has waned as he repeatedly clashed with the Democrat-dominated Board of Supervisors over funding and policy matters.

Villanueva has also repeatedly defied subpoenas to appear before the Civilian Oversight Commission and refused to enforce the county's COVID-19 vaccination mandate among his deputies and department employees.

Luna has argued during the campaign that the sheriff's department is being "mismanaged" by Villanueva and said he will work to restore trust in the agency. He also touted his position as an outsider with no connections to the sheriff's department.

Luna said he will work "modernize" the sheriff's department and its jail system and improve the mental well-being of deputies and employees.

Gutierrez is accused of swerving his Honda CRV into a group of about 75 law enforcement cadets who were on a training run around 6:30 a.m. Wednesday in the 10600 block of Mills Avenue, near Telegraph Road, just blocks from the sheriff's STARS Explorer Academy law enforcement training center.

Sheriff's officials said the group of recruits was running in columns northbound on the roadway when the southbound SUV swerved to the opposite side of the road and plowed into the trainees, leaving a rail of injured bodies that Sheriff Alex Villanueva compared to a plane crash.

The SUV then slammed into a light pole, which was knocked to the ground. The vehicle was reportedly going about 30-40 mph at the time, authorities said.

A law enforcement vehicle was behind the runners for traffic control, but there was no vehicle in front of them. The first runners managed to avoid being hit by the oncoming SUV, which plowed into those behind them, authorities said.

Villanueva said the most serious injuries included head trauma. broken bones, and "loss of limb." Further details were not released.

All told, 25 recruits were injured, five with critical injuries, four with moderate injuries, and 16 with minor injuries. One of

With ridership down, Downey considers eliminating bus service

■ Fewer people are using the Downey Link – the city of Downey's public transportation service - prompting council members to reconsider its future.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY - The Downey Link's days may be numbered, as at least two council members have signaled interest in doing away with the public transportation service.

At the city council meeting last Thursday, Councilman Mario Trujillo said that he would like the council "to consider eliminating the Downey Link" come budget talks next year.

"Every time I see a Downey Link there's no one in it, except for one time I saw one person," said Trujillo. "I understand that some cities are providing alternative methods of transportation for those in need, but I think it's time we consider eliminating the Downey Link."

Councilmember Donald La Plante agreed, saying there were things the city needed to do other than "continue to run the service that isn't being used by virtually anyone.'

"That bus serves what I'm told is 60,000 people a year. When you back it out, that's 250 a day, and I'm told most of those are students going to or from high school," said La Plante. "I've seen buses with two [people], but most of the time I see either zero or one.

'We're running buses around town, using up fuel, polluting the air, doing whatever we're doing and transporting no one.

The Downey Link runs four routes Monday through Friday, from 6:30-9 am, and 2-6:30 pm. Riders are charged a 50 cent fare or one Downey Link bus ticket.

Downey Link usage has been on a steady decline over the years, according to information included in the city's latest budget report.

In fiscal year 2017-18, the Downey Link transported more than 120,500 riders. This year, however, the city's buses are only anticipated to see 68,000 riders, less than Downey's annual goal of 105,000.

La Plante said that the city needed "a different model."

"Whether that means we need to expand our Dial-a-Ride programs to people other than those that are just over 65, that's our current rule. Maybe it's, say, 55. Maybe it's 50, maybe it's anybody. But at the amount of money we're spending on the Downey Link, we could hire Uber to drive those people around."

The city's Parks and Recreation Department is budgeted to spend $3,331,581 in grant funding this fiscal year.

According to Parks and Recreation Director Jason Chacon, those monies are split between Downey Link and Dial-a-Ride, with a majority going to the Downey Link.

Rancho Los Amigos amphitheater to be renamed after disability rights advocate

 Carlos Benavides became an advocate for Rancho Los Amigos after he was hospitalized there in 2003.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY - The amphitheater at Rancho Los Amigos National Rehabilitation Center will soon be renamed in honor of Carlos Benavides, in recognition of his years of service and advocacy for disability rights and the inclusion of individuals of all abilities.

The move was spearheaded by Supervisor Janice Hahn, and approved here.' unanimously by her Board colleagues.

"Carlos has made such an impact at Rancho Los Amigos – whether it is his artwork that is featured across the hospital, the work he does there with patients nearly every day, or his ongoing advocacy for the rights of people with disabilities across the County as long-time President of the Commission on Disabilities," said Hahn. "We thought long and hard about how we would honor all of Carlos's contributions and renaming this amphitheater is so fitting - honoring both his work with Rancho patients, and his passion for the arts.

Benavides said the dedication is "a big honor" and "something I never expected.'

"Having something named after you, it's like, wow, you know," said Benavides. "Considering this is something I do just to do, because it's something that needed to be done. But I never expected something like that."

Benavides began his advocacy a few years after his own accident and spinal cord injury in 2003. Familiar with the quality of care that campus provided, he struggled to get his own recovery at Rancho started.

"When I got hurt, I was trying to get into Rancho, and it was hard for me to get here, but I knew this was the best place to be," said Benavides. "I had to come in, take a whole lot of steps to get into this place... I found out how hard it was, and challenging for me to get in here. I came in through workman's comp; at the time they didn't have workman's comp, so I had to come in through polio.

"When I came in here for my physical therapy, I couldn't see a spinal cord doctor because I had polio, and I couldn't see the polio doctor because I didn't have polio.

Ultimately, Benavides says he "was one of the people who paid to come

"That's how bad I wanted to be here, because I've seen what they do, I've seen what they do for the patients," said Benavides. "You know what, I didn't want the patients to go through the same challenges I had to go through, so I started working with different patients and got into the patient advisory council, and that was my first step here.'

It would not be his last.

Since 2014, Benavides has served as a representative of the 4th Supervisorial District on the Los Angeles County Commission on Disabilities, including as its president for the past five.

At Rancho, Benavides is a member of the Cultural Diversity and Operations Council, LGBTQ+ Committee, Rancho Foundation's Art of Rancho Program, and of the Patient/Family Advisory Council, where he is currently Co-Chair.

"Anything that I do out there that I try to find, this is the first place I bring it to because this is my home," said Benavides.

Benavides expressed gratitude to his family, hospital staff, administration, It's a great honor for me."

SEAACA warns of mass euthanizations

More than 50 dogs, cats and rabbits may be put down due to overcrowding at the Downey animal shelter.

By City News Service

DOWNEY – Animal rescue groups are sending out urgent pleas for potential adopters for unwanted animals at the Southeast Area Animal Control Authority, where more than 50 animals are in danger of euthanasia due to overcrowding.

SEAACA was formed in 1975 to serve Downey, Norwalk and Pico Rivera, but has since expanded to encompass 14 cities that are not served by Los Angeles County Animal Care.

Downey is frequently overcrowded rabbits. with the burden of serving communities with a combined population of approximately 900,000 people.

generally paid to dogs and cats, rabbits are often overlooked, but they are also a sad and persistent presence at shelters.

Lejla Hadzimuratovic, founder and president of Bunny World Foundation, a Los Angeles-based nonprofit that's rescued thousands of unwanted rabbits from shelters and owner surrenders since 2008, was frantically trying to arrange for fosters or adopters for the 16 rabbits, but her group is already stretched thin caring for bunnies they normally rescue from the six shelters in the city of Los Angeles.

BWF was able to pull three of the 15 alerted rabbits from SEAACA, and Hadzimuratovic is asking interested parties to adopt directly from SEAACA or contact her to foster at info@ bunnyworldfoundation.org.

"Bunny World Foundation is deeply saddened at witnessing the dire situation at SEAACA and struggling to assist with pulling each and every discarded rabbit on death row," Hadzimuratovic said. "The shelter claims that they do not have space to house so many animals and are reaching out to partners on daily basis to clear the shelter of dogs, cats, and rabbits. They do not have the resources to find out the gender of rabbits scheduled for euthanasia, let alone to spay/neuter them prior to sending them to partners.'

She blames people who breed bunnies and those who fail to spay and neuter their pet rabbits for much of the overpopulation problem.

Anyone considering adopting a domestic rabbit should do their homework first and know what to expect, for although they're undeniably adorable, rabbits are not low-maintenance pets. They require a specific diet of hay, pellets and green vegetables, humane indoor housing in a bunny-proofed room, veterinary care when necessary and understanding of their emotional needs, which are different from cats and dogs.

They're not ideal pets for small children, as they respond best to quiet energy and can be easily spooked by the hyperactivity of a child. Most bunnies do not like to be picked up or held, may scratch or bite in an effort to get free, and can be seriously injured or even killed if they're dropped.

Advocates for the animals do want them to be adopted into loving homes, but they stress that adoption is a serious commitment that requires a willingness to learn the ropes.

Retail sales of rabbits, dogs and cats is prohibited in California, but direct sales are still permitted, including online, and illegal street sales occur in urban areas where baby bunnies are sometimes deceptively marketed as adult "dwarfs.'

Bunny World Foundation offers a support group with free mentoring for new bunny owners. The group's Facebook page has a wealth of tips, but here are a few basics:

-- Domestic rabbits should be kept indoors at all times

-- They should be fed a diet of unlimited timothy hay and a daily portion of leafy greens, plus pellets and alfalfa hay for rabbits under 6 months

-- They should never be kept in cages, as they need room to hop around and exercise their legs.

-- They need to be thoroughly groomed every two to three months to remove excess fur and have their nails trimmed.

-- They're aggressive chewers, and need to be kept away from electrical cords and anything that can be dangerous if ingested, such as taped or glued boxes.

-- Bunnies who stop eating or appear to be in pain need immediate care from a veterinarian trained in the care of rabbits. Bunnies who stop eating can die within 36 hours. Not every vet has expertise with rabbits, so owners should find the one nearest them that they can rely on in an emergency.

Republicans refuse to vote by mail. They suffer because of it.

By Salena Zito

The first thing Allegheny County Republican Chairman Sam DeMarco saw on election night after the polls closed was the more than 100,000 votes from his home county that dropped for Democrat John Fetterman through mail-in ballots. Although he wasn't sure just yet that that meant the race was lost, he also knew Republicans needed to fix something in the party's way of doing things going forward.

"Those initial large dump of voters were mail-in ballots from Democrats," he said of the advance voting that began in 2020 during the pandemic. Democrats embraced it with gusto, but Republicans shied away.

"The biggest takeaway from Tuesday night is that Republican attitudes in regard to mail-in voting needs to change," he continued. "Right now, it's like we're running a 100-yard race against the Democrats and giving them a 45-yard head start. Both parties have limited resources, but while they work during the 50 days of early voting collecting and banking early votes ... we're just collecting promises to show up on Election Day; it's not sustainable, and Democrats get better at it every cycle."

When all the dust is settled, it will be interesting to see what the percentage of mail-in votes for Democrats was in the final count; anything over 40% is a real problem for Republicans going forward if they don't right their mail-in ballot ship.

Before the pandemic, Pennsylvania voters needed a valid excuse to cast an absentee ballot. Act 77, which was signed on Oct. 31, 2019, and went into effect on Jan. 1, 2020, added no-excuse mail-in voting up to 50 days before an election.

It also changed how these ballots are canvassed, moving from the individual precincts or polls to a central canvassing facility.

In this state, no one really thought it would be a big deal. Most of the people who used absentee balloting were bedridden or traveling out of state on Election Day. Then the pandemic hit.

Although states such as Arizona and Oregon had been voting by mail forever — and for the most part, they did it quite well then-President Donald Trump scoffed at it for his voters. While Democrats encouraged their voters to cast their ballots by mail, Trump discouraged it, warning that it was a vessel for voter fraud. That gave Democrats the advantage.

Republicans in Pennsylvania and also across the country are still reeling from Tuesday's disappointing finish. They say that if this is the new normal for voting going forward, then Republicans need to step up and get their voters to do the same — otherwise, they will find themselves on the wrong end of big elections going forward.

Currently, Democrats are miles ahead of Republicans at targeting specific races and voters. Through mail balloting, they put those voters in the bank early. This year, they executed and focused and performed; that's why they have probably saved their U.S. Senate majority, based on vote counts as of this writing. It's why they were able to limit Republican gains in the House to maybe just a handful, or maybe none at all.

A lot of pollsters missed this, because Democrats had timed a lot of their advertising to hit right when the early voting began especially their messages on abortion. This paid dividends. They banked their voters and created a mirage for analysts who thought the races were closer than they calculated.

Republicans can complain about the current rules all they want, but what they need to do is wake up and start competing with the Democrats where they are. Otherwise, they're just leaving winnable races on the table.

Florida Republicans certainly have figured it out. In 2018 and 2020, the Democrats went into Election Day with more ballots cast than Republicans in early voting. This year, Florida Republicans flipped that on its head. Republicans in other states should take note.

Why did we put so much faith in the crypto whiz kid?

Samuel Bankman-Fried, the founder and former CEO of FTX, a cryptocurrency exchange.

By Margaret O'Mara

Disheveled, young and exceedingly brainy, Sam Bankman-Fried perfectly fit the role of a Silicon Valley mogul in the making. Mr. Bankman-Fried, the 30-year-old founder of the cryptocurrency exchange FTX, leaned into the Silicon Valley stereotype and then some, playing video games while pitching investors and wearing a T-shirt and shorts onstage with Bill Clinton and Tony Blair. Blueand brainy has delivered world-transforming innovations and companies — a computer on every desk, a smartphone in every hand.

But the whiz-kid fixation also reflects a less healthy societal tendency to overstate the importance of individual "genius" and gloss over other things critical to any whiz kid's success especially connections, timing and luck. It also devalues experience and maturity. We invest so much in the ideal that it excludes those who don't fit the part and places too much faith in those who do.

Silicon Valley's whiz kids owe their mythology to America's very beginnings. Ben Franklin, who conducted electrical experiments in lightning storms in the 1750s, shocked the bewigged and bejeweled French court in the 1770s by arriving in a homespun coat and frontiersman's fur cap. Thomas Jefferson, Virginia planter and perpetually tinkering inventor, padded around the White House wearing the early 1800s version of work-from-home sweatpants.

Their getups deliberately sent a message to their fellow citizens and to European rulers: Americans were democratic, humble and uninterested in dressing to show off their wealth. They were too busy working and inventing to bother.

The Great Inventor himself, Thomas Edison, holder of over 1,000 patents, cannily cultivated an eccentric-genius reputation. At the peak of his fame in the 1870s and 1880s, Edison wore rumpled suits and played pranks using dangerous chemicals on co-workers. Admirers pointed to these quirks as further signs of Edison's brilliance.

And while Edison had detractors, he was never as controversial as the railroad barons, steel kings and financiers whose sharpelbowed and sometimes fraudulent dealings drove the boom-andbust Gilded Age economy. of Time magazine in early 1996 featuring Marc Andreessen, the 24-year-old co-founder of Netscape, sitting (barefoot, of course) on a gilded throne.

The dot-com bust tanked companies and investment portfolios. Instead of dispensing with the whiz-kid model, however, Silicon Valley doubled down. Venture capitalists lost money when the bubble burst, but they were still far wealthier than before the boom, and they knew that the internet age was only getting started.

Out of another garage came Sergey Brin and Larry Page of Google, who took that brand of iconoclasm and scaled it up to an entire enterprise. Six years later, in 2004, out of a Harvard dorm room, came Mark Zuckerberg of Facebook — similarly singleminded and geeky, readily posing barefoot, making the hoodie into a shorthand signal for business genius.

As the tech world and its group of golden geeks got larger, wealthier and ever more dominant, one thing stayed the same. The whiz kids were, almost exclusively, male, white and young. Women could never get away with being such slobs.

They could, however, dress the part in other ways. Less than a decade ago, the Theranos C.E.O. Elizabeth Holmes seized the public's imagination by wearing Steve Jobs-style black turtlenecks and professing a single-minded devotion to changing the world. She had a seemingly monastic routine, an awkward affect and an unvarying wardrobe — like Mr. Zuckerberg, she explained that she wore the same thing every day to avoid having to make one more decision. All these things had become so strongly associated with successful tech founders that they served as proxies for her credibility.

Revelations that Theranos's vaunted blood-testing technology didn't work led to Ms. Holmes being tried and convicted of criminal fraud. Last week, she was denied a retrial and will soon be sentenced. The downfall of "the female Steve Jobs" may have made it even more difficult for women and other underrepresented entrepreneurs to obtain funding.

chip investors fell for his persona, and Mr. Bankman-Fried profited greatly, with his estimated net worth reaching over $26 billion at one point.

That net worth is now close to zero. In last week's sudden collapse of FTX — which nine months ago was the star of a Larry David Super Bowl ad — billions evaporated as revelations emerged of questionable transfers between FTX and Alameda Research, Mr. Bankman-Fried's trading company. Law enforcement is now investigating, which could lead to criminal charges.

We've seen this movie before: A casually attired whiz kid emerging from seemingly nowhere is proclaimed both savant and savior, and takes the world by storm. Growing concern about Big Tech's power and intense criticism of onetime wunderkinds like Mark Zuckerberg and Jeff Bezos set the stage perfectly for a figure like Mr. Bankman-Fried. Amid power-hungry moguls and crypto hustlers, here was a white-knight superhero in the perfect costume, championing philanthropy and pledging to make the world a better place — for real, this time.

But even Mr. Bankman-Fried's collapse probably won't kill the whiz-kid archetype. This all-American notion has fueled some spectacular meltdowns but also scored big wins. The willingness of U.S. investors and customers to take bets on the young, untested The whiz-kid myth lay largely dormant until the 1970s, when the buttoned-up business type was under siege and once unassailable American brands were being battered by oil shocks, stagflation and foreign competition. Enter Steve Jobs of Apple and Bill Gates of Microsoft: impossibly young, tousle-haired, looking nothing like typical business executives. A venture capitalist who visited Apple's first headquarters — in Mr. Jobs's parents' suburban garage — quipped that the wispy-bearded entrepreneur and his business partner, Steve Wozniak, looked like "renegades from the human race."

Freckled and slight, Mr. Gates looked more like a teenager and could behave that way as well. "At times during an interview he slumped so far in his chair as to be almost prone," a Seattle Times reporter wrote in 1982. Microsoft's co-founder, Paul Allen, was "a large, heavily bearded, mild-mannered man who wore a rumpled corduroy sports jacket." To become a tech millionaire, it seems, you need to avoid using an iron.

Then the dot-com boom took the stereotype into hyperdrive, largely because being a tech whiz kid now meant becoming really, really rich. "The Golden Geeks," exclaimed a headline on the cover We are waiting to learn whether Mr. Bankman-Fried's actions crossed the line from questionable to fraudulent. But the fact that the rocketing rise and sudden tumble of him and Ms. Holmes magnetic, charismatic and remarkably good at getting rich people to give them money — occurred so close together should serve as a warning.

It is not surprising that a nation born from the overthrow of hereditary wealth has long celebrated self-made inventors who forge an independent path. But the startling fall of Sam Bankman-Fried is a good moment to reflect on the perils of placing so much money, faith and power in the hands of a few golden geeks.

It's the end of the Trump era

By Jamie Stiehm

The country came to its senses last Tuesday, after a seven-year famine in our politics. The worst in our nature showed up in vulgar, violent and virulent former President Donald Trump.

The hard-fought congressional midterms are a turning point in our civil strife. Election Day delivered a crystal-clear verdict from the American people: democracy matters. (More than gas prices.)

Please, sir, more fair and square democracy and decency.

That's what President Biden brings to the table. We keep hearing how unpopular he is, but "Joe" is a hard guy not to like, with a steady hand on the tiller.

Bonhomie works for me.

The improbable dream of Democrats keeping the Senate chamber blue came true before our eyes. The impossible dream of a Democratic House of Representatives victory hangs in the air.

America has plenty to be thankful for on Thanksgiving Thursday.

The majority of voters told us the Trump Republican party's over now. Most of his hand-picked radical Right candidates lost in a rebuke to the bitter, twice-impeached ex-president.

Now he's the madman in the attic.

Can a seven-year era of good times and feelings begin now? We are not enemies, but friends, as Abraham Lincoln pleaded in an inaugural address.

The so-called "red wave" that fooled pundits was dishonest Republican rumors and polls, disinformation the press bought wholesale. (Not me, ma'am.)

This time, their Big Lie spread before Election Day. There was never a red wave, to be clear. Every Democrat knew they had a fighting chance to win their own races. Candidates were energized by the extreme Supreme Court decision to strike down reproductive rights in June.

University students and suburban women were furious at the nerve of Trump's trio of icy young justices. They dared to take life, liberty and health choices away, joining senior members for a bombshell majority opinion.

The "Extreme Supremes" are under scrutiny as part of a working democracy. Chief Justice John Roberts says the 6-3 high court should not care if rulings go against the current of popular opinion.

Roberts could not be more wrong.

Six unelected hard-Right Republicans — six! — should not be the boss of 300 million of us. Social progress is the Court's hallmark in sunny days. The legitimacy of the Roberts court is in trouble.

Voters also rejected the political violence Trump espoused. Everyone but him and the 30,000-strong throng that stormed the Capitol knew how terribly wrong that was. Oath Keepers are standing trial now for sedition, facing 20 years behind bars.

The chilling Jan. 6 trauma took time to get over, especially for those of us stuck in the siege.

Further, what turned minds in election season was the brutal hammer attack on Paul Pelosi at home in the dead of night.

We did not want to be that country.

Trump running for president is a great gift to the Democratic party. Send the man a buttery thank-you note.

Republicans know this as they flee for cover from his coarse brand. But the vast swath of slavish Republicans cutting their red ties to him need to go through a "deTrumpification" process.

Victory is sweet, literally. I bet a box of chocolates on a blue Senate.

Yet at least two deserve a box of schadenfreude.

Californian Kevin McCarthy, the House Republican leader, foolishly bragged about surfing to the speakership before the votes were in. Knives are out for him now. He sent only a text to House Speaker Nancy Pelosi when her husband was nearly murdered. And risible Sarah Palin lost for the Alaska House seat.

Sweet was the vision of a beguiling baby girl on the Senate floor, when they came back to business. Almost one year old, Eva Beth Ossoff was calm at the center of attention.

Her father, Sen. Jon Ossoff, D-Ga., bravely took her to meet Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky. The baby pointed here, there and up at the lights, a bipartisan treat.

Often politicians are surrounded by babies; here was a baby surrounded by politicians. A baby is a vote for the future.

Meanwhile, over in the People's House, undaunted Pelosi gave an elegant dinner in Statuary Hall and welcomed new Democratic members with their ideas, energy and optimism, she said.

So there.

La Mirada, St. Paul athletes sign national letters of intent

■ It was a proud as local student-athletes committed to colleges and universities around the country.

By John M. Sherrard Contributor

LA MIRADA - November 9th is a big day for high school athletes, as all their work they put in over the last four years finally pays off.

It is called National Letter of Intent Day.

Four athletes from St. Paul and four from La Mirada had ceremonies recently and their dreams of playing at the next level is coming true.

"(Wednesday Nov. 9) I committed to Saint Martin's University in Lacey, Washington,' St. Paul senior softball player Julissa Detrinidad said. I'm really excited to go there because the weather is different there and I'm excited for the change of scenery. I'm going there to be part of the nursing program."

That is just one of the eight student-athletes that announced their signings for next year.

Detrinidad, who is one of three softball players to sign a letter of intent to college, continued - "St. Paul really helped me out by giving me a well-rounded education and offered me lots of opportunities that helped me to get into the school itself.

I really feel that they selected me for my personality, and I thought that I really fit well with the team and the personalities that are already there.3

Detrinidad, a four-year varsity starter, is a catcher/first baseman who earned All Del Rey League honors last season.

Four St. Paul student-athletes sign letters of intent

"The amount of work, sacrifice and energy these athletes put forth not only during season but in the off season is amazing," St. Paul athletic director Rich Avina said. "The families and these young athletes, three of which are Legacy families St Paul High School, have committed to their development from there." and to see it be rewarded on this NLI day is spectacular. The community of St. Paul is extremely proud."

There was a buzz on the campus of St. Paul High School, as three senior softball players signed their Letters of Intent at the National Letter of Intent signing ceremony held in the St. Paul High School gym.

Also signing an NLI was senior baseball player Devin Munoz, who was surrounded by his teammates and coaches at a ceremony in the school gym.

Detrinidad, Gaby Gandara and Elisa Gulfin are the trio of players who made it official from the softball team.

All three softball players and baseball player had individual tables that were decorated with the respective school colors and memorabilia.

Gandara, Detrinidad and Gulfin's signing brings a total of 15 softball players moving on to play at the next level in the past five years.

The previous 12 are: Camille Marin, C (Iowa State); Diamond Sandoval, OF (University of New Mexico); Tatum Anzaldo, IF (Cal Berkeley); Nia Carter, IF (Iowa); Megan Gutierrez, 3B/1B (New Mexico Highlands); Savannah Pineda-Chavez, Utility (New Mexico Highlands); Jordin King, P (New Mexico State); Destiny Salamanca, IF (Saint Martin's University); Jayne Sepulveda, SS/2B (Southern Utah University); Kat Serna, P (University of Iowa), Nadine Marquez, INF (Rio Honda College); and Malia Pieper, C (Cerritos College).

In addition, St. Paul softball coach Charles Gandara figures by the end of this next season, four more players could be added to that list.

Casey Morales, St. Paul Baseball coach – "Devin made a great choice going to the University of Oklahoma. We're really proud to have had a part of him and able to see him grow. As he said in his speech, he's looking forward to some unfinished business this year in the season. With his guidance for big things this year. It's set in stone for him to move on to the next work ethic. level and get some great experiences from Brea Olinda, signed with the at Fullerton High his freshman University of Nebraska. The right- year. "It was a relief. My parents handed pitcher missed the entire and coaches invested a lot of time in 2022 season due to an MCL surgery me. Seeing everyone at the signing but has rehabbed over the summer was great. and is looking to make a major impact for the Swordsmen this season.

"I chose Nebraska because of the great academic support and the competitive softball environment," said Gulfin, who has been playing softball for 11 years and is going to major in Psychology and minor in Business or Kinesiology, at Nebraska

"I was injured last year, so this will be my first season.

"I chose softball because I have always been in love with the sport. It was always something special to me when I stepped on the field."

GulfinI started pitching when she was seven years old.

'I just never stopped working on it," said Gulfin, of her pitching. "There is no specific reason why I kept pitching. I just fell in love with

"It just became my outlet for everything.

Gaby Gandara, senior outfielder - She is a four-year varsity starter and will continue her playing career for the Cal State Dominguez Hills Toros. The outfielder is a two-time First Team All-Del Rey League recipient and was named to the 2022 Whittier Daily News All-Area Softball Team.

"I'm excited to go there because the program and the school is a great fit for me," said Gandara, whose father is the head softball coach at St. Paul. "I'll still be able to live at home which is important to me.

"Every time I go to the campus, I get more excited about going to school and playing softball there next year.

"I think I've had a lot of great coaches that helped me get here today and taught me how to work hard and just kind of remain and leadership, we will be looking persistent in all that I do," Gandara added. "I take a lot of pride in my

"During Covid I worked out

Paul in the fall of her junior year God to sign," said Jeon, who played

It's a blessing to move on to the next level.

"It was always a dream of mine to play DI baseball. Signing those papers was a recognition for my parents. I give props to my parents because their hard work spread down to me.'

With his dad (Brad) working late hours, Eric's mom (Jenny) would often throw batting practice to him. "She fell in love with the game," Eric said.

Eric remembers a story when his mom got a little too close when throwing batting practice. "I asked her to come a little closer when we were in the front yard," he remembers. "I hit her in the forehead, but that one swing solidified the moment," he said.

Jeon, who is a four-year varsity player and has a big bat, has huge respect for La Mirada baseball coach, Jimmy Zurn. "Coach Zurn is a huge baseball guy. He and his team backed me in going to DI. It was a big step. He created this brotherhood and community. I'm excited to play this last year."

Eric will get the chance to play with his brother, Kevin, on varsity this season. They first played together on Double A as youths. The team went 21-0.

"Eric is a special young man, both on and off the field," La Mirada baseball coach Jimmy Zurn said. "He has put forth a lot of time and effort both in the classroom and on the baseball field to set himself up for a successful life by attending such a prestigious university as Columbia. Everyone at LM is so proud of him.'

Cassandra Villanueva - soccer plaver - Cassie will be going to UNLV. She is a three-year varsity player and has been on the team. She has been a key player, especially in CIF.

"I'm going to the University of Nevada Las Vegas and I'm going to play soccer in high school this season and college," she said. "I love the coach (UNLV) and love the atmosphere. I love the field and when you go on the field you love that too.

almost every single day and just having great support from my family that's for sure helped me get here today.

"I remember watching Camille (Marin) and Diamond (Sandoval) sign their letters my freshman year and thinking that would never be me," said Gaby Gandara. ".....and here I am today signing my letter. It's pretty surreal."

Devin Munoz, senior pitcher "I'm happy to go to Oklahoma because it's my dream school and I can't wait to compete at the next level and work hard," Munoz said. "I'm going to play baseball and we're going to win something. "They selected me because I'm a hard worker and ready to compete when and whatever it takes. I will play anything they need. My primary is third and first and I can help them because I'm a utility player."

Charles Gandara, St. Paul Softball coach - "I'm pretty excited for all three of them (softball), especially for Julissa and Gaby,' Gandara said. "They've been here since their freshmen year. I got to see them grow the last three clothes. I'm also excited for Elisa. With her injury last year, she was a little worried about not being able to fulfill her commitment to the University of Nebraska. They've stuck with her the whole way and she's looking to this season and next season as well.

"I think all three of these players are going to have an opportunity to compete for a spot in their freshman year and work their way into the starting lineup.

I think all three of these girls have an outstanding opportunity next year to make it in the starting lineup at each of their schools."

Four La Mirada athletes sign NLI's

"It's always beautiful to see these athletes get to realize their dreams," said La Mirada athletic director Christine Mead, who played softball at the University of Oklahoma. "I'm so excited for them to be able to play their sport at the next level."

Eric Jeon, senior pitcher/3B, Columbia - "It's a blessing from

"I played my sophomore and junior year and my coaches helped me a lot. They pushed me a lot to be the best I can be. They gave me advice whenever I needed it.

Cassie was a First Team All-CIF (2021) and Second Team All-CIF (2022). She was also the Suburban league Offensive Player of the Year 2021 and 2022, First Team All-league in 2021 and 2022. She scored 10 goals and had 9 assists in 2021 and 23 goals and 17 assists in 2022.

Jaylinn Mitchell, senior boys soccer striker, Southern Methodist University -

"I decided to go to SMU because I felt very welcome by the coaches,' said Mitchell, who is a two-year varsity player. "I can see myself there for the next four years.

"La Mirada has prepared me to go to college on lessons on how to be a student-athlete. They've prepared me for the next level.

"I look forward to continuing my soccer career and hopefully majoring in kinesiology.<sup>2</sup> Mikayla Gonzalez, Soccer, University of North Dakota - "I'm going to the University of North Dakota to play DI soccer and continue my education and I'm going to be studying biology. North Dakota was watching at a showcase for my club team, and they reached out and I went on a visit. I loved the campus, and all of the facilities are very nice, and I really enjoyed it.

I think both club and high school prepared me very well for college. I'm very grateful for (coach Dave) Christensen (and coaches) who believed in me and pulled me up in my freshman year. They are very supportive for all of the coaches that I've had."

Mikayla is a Second team All-CIF team member in 2021 and 2022.
