Cerritos city manager announces retirement

CERRITOS - Cerritos city manager Art Gallucci will retire effective June 30, 2023, the city announced.

"For the past 51 years, I have had the privilege of working for the City of Cerritos, and I have been fortunate to serve as city manager since 1991," Gallucci said in a news release. "As I reflect upon my career, I cannot think of having a more exciting position than the one I have had here. I wish the City only the best and I am convinced that the City will continue to grow and prosper as it has in years past.'

Gallucci was appointed city manager in April 1991. He served as assistant city manager for 10 years prior to his appointment.

A veteran public administrator, Gallucci was first hired by Cerritos in 1971.

He began his government career working for the United States Forest Service, assigned to fire suppression efforts in Idaho. This experience inspired him to pursue a career in public service.

Gallucci has been Cerrito's lead negotiator in major commercial and office developments, including the Cerritos Auto Square, Cerritos Towne Center and Lincoln Station Shopping Center.

He has been active in the development of all public facilities, including the parks, Cerritos Olympic Swim and Fitness Center, Cerritos Library, Cerritos Center for the Performing Arts and Cerritos Senior Center at

He was also instrumental in the construction of the city's recycled water system that has saved millions of gallons of potable water.

Other major projects for Gallucci include the development of the Cerritos Sheriff's Station/Community Safety Center; affordable senior housing projects Emerald Villas, Pioneer Villas, Ivy Park at Cerritos and Fountain Walk; the Cerritos Sculpture Garden; and the Cerritos on Wheels (COW) service.

Throughout the years he continued to manage the expansion and improvement of city facilities, services and programs.

Mother, daughter killed in Downey apartment fire

■ A mother and her 12-yearold daughter were killed after a garage fire spread to their apartment unit.

DOWNEY – A girl and her mother were killed in a Downey apartment fire while a woman believed to be the girl's grandmother was hospitalized in including abduction – is off the critical condition Wednesday with

> The fire was reported at 10:47 p.m. Tuesday in an apartment at 9943 Tweedy Lane, near Florence Avenue and Paramount Boulevard, according to the Downey Fire Department.

"Arriving units reported heavy smoke and fire from a garage" the fire department reported. "Crews were notified of a possibility of three trapped occupants. Once on scene crews found one patient in front of the building suffering from significant burn injuries. That patient was treated and transported to a local trauma hospital.

"During the fire attack, crews were able to locate two additional occupants," the fire department reported. "Both victims were treated on scene. One victim, a minor, was transported to (a hospital), where the victim was later pronounced deceased. The other victim was pronounced deceased on scene."

Downey Fire Department Battalion Chief Jorge Villanueva told reporters at the scene that the two people inside the building were a mother and daughter who were found inside an upstairs bathroom, both in full cardiac arrest.

The mother died at the scene, and the daughter, reported to be 12 years old, died at County-USC Medical Center, according to the fire department. Their names were withheld, pending notification of

The woman who was found outside the building is the girl's grandmother, according to reports from the scene.

"It hits us all pretty hard," Villanueva told reporters, noting the proximity of the fire just before Christmas.

Fire officials said the blaze appeared to have started in the garage then spread to the apartment. The cause remains under investigation. extinguished the flames in 25 minutes, and prevented them from spreading to adjacent units.

According to reports from the scene, the apartment did not have a Christmas tree inside.

Throughout the ages there have been those who prey on unsuspecting and desperate

Con artists have sold shady pills, and medical Some of these products simply did nothing, while others actually caused harm. We now have some protection against them; the FDA is responsible for ensuring the safety of prescription drugs, medical devices, cosmetics, and foods.

What are the most common targets? The first is fake weight loss products (note that over 40% of the American population is obese). Red flags to watch for include promotional messages that include statements such as: weight loss without exercise, permanent weight loss, no need to monitor intake, 30 pounds in 30 days; and products in the form of a patch, cream, or magical pills. A second major scam category is alleged infertility treatments (at least 10% of women of childbearing years struggle with infertility). The FDA has clearly stated that dietary supplements that claim to cure, treat or prevent infertility and other reproductive health conditions can potentially harm those who use these products instead of seeking effective

Here are just a few outrageous health scams from the past:

The 1970's Vision-Dieter Glasses claimed to reduce food cravings and hunger pangs through a secret European color technology. They, of course, did no such thing.

In 1958, Trim Reducingaid Cigarettes were marketed for weight loss, claiming that smoking three cigarettes every day could result in a 20-pound weight loss in eight weeks, and that the product was harmless(!). Since these cigarettes were marketed as a drug, the FDA was able to ban

The ridiculous 1940's era Vrilium Tube, or "Magic Spike," claimed to "cure any disease." It took advantage of the postwar interest in radioactivity, and back then actually sold for a whopping $300.

It was a simple brass tube containing barium chloride, a horse laxative. Sadly, some who believed in it stopped other effective treatments.

In 1960, the FDA banned the selling or marketing of the Hoxsey cancer treatment methods, although unfortunately they continued to be available in Mexico, and later, over the Internet as well. Beginning in the 1920s, desperate people were scammed for millions of dollars by this fake cancer potion that the FDA calls 'worthless and discredited."

One of the products that led directly to the 1938 creation of the FDA was 1933's Lash Lure. This was an eyelash and eyebrow dye made from a toxic industrial chemical that actually caused blisters, abscesses, ulcers, and even blindness.

How about using tapeworms for weight loss? In theory, it might work, but of course would be accompanied by nausea, weakness, abdominal pain, diarrhea, fever, bacterial infections, and even seizures. It's possible that tapeworms have been used for weight loss since the Victorian Era, and tapeworm diet ads have been documented from the early 20th century.

In the present day, scammers promote their products with savvy marketing, and target specific populations via the web, phone, email, newspapers, magazines, TV, and direct mail. Health fraud scams are common on social media sites and messaging apps like Facebook, WhatsApp, and Viber. Scams are also common at convenience stores, gas stations, and flea markets. Watch out for clues like these:

- Personal success stories for products that "cured" diabetes or COVID-19
- Quick fixes, such as a 30-day cancer cure
- · A single product that cures many diseases
 - Miracle cures
 - All-natural cures
- Products that feed into conspiracy theories

If you encounter a potential scam, please walk away, and report it to the FDA (1-800-FDA-1088). If you are considering a new treatment, always feel free to discuss it with your own health care provider.

Maciel scores 21 to lead St. Paul past Bishop Amat, 65-57

■ Sophomore guard Osami Maciel scored 21 points as St. Paul recorded its third consecutive win.

By John M. Sherrard Contributor

LA PUENTE - After many years in the Camino Real League competing against Bishop Amat, the St. Paul Swordsmen found themselves in a non-league game with the Lancers Friday (December

A hard-fought game by both teams resulted in a 65-57 victory by St. Paul, which was its third consecutive win over the Lancers and fifth in the last seven.

St. Paul, which will play in the Del Rey league beginning in January, was led by a game-high 21 points from sophomore guard

Senior guard Maurice Wright, Jr. added 14 for the Lancers, while sophomore center Tong Mawein and sophomore guard Moses Wright had 11 points each and junior forward Kamron Fontenot added six points.

Both Fontenot and Maurice Wright, Jr. transferred into St. Paul from Servite and Santa Clarita Christian, respectively.

The Lancers (9-4) were led by sophomore guard Eli Chavez with 19 points, while senior guard Manuel Chavez and sophomore guard Shaun Stinson scored 15 and 11 points, respectively.

"We're playing a rival game," St. Paul second-year coach Patrick Roy said. "But I don't think we played well (Friday). But sometime when you get into a game that's a rival game, the emotions get you going. Sometimes the kids stop thinking. It's a great game to play. It's a fun game and just happy to have the chance to come here and play and participate.

"St. Paul loves to play Bishop Amat. It's a good game. Bishop Amat is very well coached. It's a good rivalry.

Entering the fourth quarter, the Swordsmen (11-3) only had a four-point, 46-42 lead, but led by as much as 11 and outscored the Lancers, 19-15 for the win.

Maurice Wright junior, Jr. and Moses Wright each scored six points in the quarter, while Osami had five points.

"We played all right, but could have done better," Maciel said. "We came out with the dub (win). It was an ugly dub, but still won.

"But, I'm proud of the team. We had some missed assignments, turnovers, but still fought through it. Most of my teammates were on, but we got all through it together.

which I like. There was a lot of talking smack in the stands and loud. It's a good game."

St. Paul jumped out to an early lead, behind the balanced scoring of Maurice Wright, Fontenot, Mawein, Osami and Moses Wright. They combined for 12 of the 14 points. The Swordsmen led, 14-13, in a back-and-forth quarter after the opening period.

Their size advantage was a big factor early in the game.

"In the beginning we were all shooting jumpers and playing slow and in the fourth quarter, we just decided to take these guys to the rim," Maurice Wright, Jr. said.

"It was fun and it was a good environment to play in. We played find a way to win under adverse in an environment in Illinois against conditions.' Washington (Illinois). So, it was really good to be in an environment like this.

"The game was all right. It was competitive. It should have been a blow-out. We were battling through the fouls.

"We won the game off of transition. What we did wrong is we had a lot of turnovers."

The Lancers didn't let up in the second quarter, led by the 7 of 8 free throws by Eli Chavez, but St. Paul took an 8-point lead, behind the outside shooting of Maciel. He hit the first of his four, 3-pointers. St. Paul connected with eight threepointers in the game, while the Lancers had seven from long range. All of Manuel Chavez' 15 points came by way of long-range shots. He hit one in the quarter.

Congress has killed immigration reform. It'll regret that.

By Roberto Suro

When Congress adjourns this week without repairing our dysfunctional immigration system, a generation-long quest for a bipartisan grand bargain will die, and we will enter an era of mounting chaos, economic losses and tragedy. What we now see at the southern border is just a foretaste.

During the past two years, a multitude of options were available — some sweeping, some specific. Immigration is not in search of unknown cures. Yet nothing was done about the major maladies. That's a bad outcome in ordinary times; it is a disaster when an immigration system, in crisis for more than a decade, is now imploding.

Don't look to the future for hope. When Republicans take control of the House in a few weeks, a handful of hard-liners who countenance nothing but walls and deportations will control the agenda.

What happened during the two years that Democrats controlled Congress and the White House? Several sad tales with many Republicans told a simple story. No matter what kind of enforcement they touted or whatever legalization program they decried as "amnesty," Republicans consistently fashioned rhetorical links to the "invasion" at the border. That framing drew jet fuel from the constant imagery of migrants at the Rio Grande and news of shattered Border Patrol records. It didn't matter that U.S. law grants outsiders the right to seek asylum or that the same disorder prevailed under the Trump administration before the pandemic

Proponents of expansive immigration policies never found a coherent narrative for the border. Faced with surges since he took office, President Biden has grasped Trump-era tools to block crossings, the advocacy groups cry betrayal and immigrant rights lawyers take him to court. Although Biden made important fixes in the asylum system, his big-picture pronouncements were often about distant, long-term matters such as root causes and regional cooperation. Meanwhile, the imagery transmitted urgency.

The advocates largely sidestepped the urgent need for asylum reform and instead concentrated their efforts on winning legalization for unauthorized immigrants already here. Biden, initially, and the advocates demanded a legalization process that would cover the entire unauthorized population of 11 million people. Then, messaging and strategy fractured.

A subset of the larger population, the "dreamers" — migrants who arrived as children, about 2 million total — were simultaneously protagonists in a more tangible and compelling narrative than the amorphous 11 million. Sen. Richard J. Durbin (D-Ill.), a potent champion for generous policies, focused relentlessly on dreamers, taking to the floor repeatedly to tell their stories, each innocent and accomplished and portrayed in a postersized photo.

The dreamers might have served as emblems for a broad legalization except that popular, long-standing bills proposed legalizing them alone. Still, other measures and messages sought legalization for a subset of dreamers, the 600,000 beneficiaries of a 2012 executive action known as DACA.

The immigration cause fragmented further by this past spring with stand-alone bills that would address labor needs in agriculture and high tech or were aimed at solving backlogs for green cards. When the chances for a big deal failed, it became every group for itself.

This was precisely the outcome advocates of legalization had long fought to avoid.

The 20-year-old strategy behind comprehensive immigration reform always assumed a bipartisan bargain in which extensive legalization is balanced by boosted enforcement with fixes to visa channels negotiated on the side. No one piece could be resolved separately, or the deal would fall apart. For years, proponents opposed stand-alone measures for dreamers because they were a high-value bargaining chip.

In 2013, a bipartisan majority of the Senate passed a massive, multipart reform. When House Speaker John A. Boehner proposed breaking the bill into pieces to get it through the Republican controlled house, Democrats said all or nothing, fearing enforcement would pass and legalization wouldn't. That deal was set aside.

In 2014, the tea party rebels grabbed immigration as cudgel on the GOP establishment. That summer, the first big surge of Central American asylum seekers hit the border, flummoxing the Obama administration. Donald Trump learned the mantra "build the wall," and here we are.

As this Congress ends, some will say immigration was too polarizing, too complex for slight Democratic majorities and recalcitrant Republicans in Congress — much less a White House preoccupied with the pandemic. Polls, however, showed consensus around legalization, a functioning asylum system and an orderly process at the border. In Washington, bipartisan majorities made new laws on climate, guns, marriage and passed big spending bills contrary to both MAGA and old Republican orthodoxies.

In each case, issue advocates and their Democratic allies narrowed their ambitions to get something done. Immigration advocates take note.

Now, the costs of paralysis will escalate. A border infrastructure meant to deter Mexican labor migrants and an asylum system designed for Soviet-era defectors puts the United States at risk. Competing for brains, the United States will present bureaucratic barriers while other nations recruit. Food producers will need to rely on unauthorized workers. And some of the millions in the green card backlog will die waiting in queue.

When Washington gets back to immigration, the challenges of 2022 will look easy.

Recent mass shootings have spurred renewed calls from President Biden for a national assault weapons ban. Sensibly so. But for even the most ardent gun control advocates, it's hard not to ask whether, in a nation with an estimated 400 million firearms, restrictions on new gun purchases accomplish too little without something more

Amid the rising tide of firearms, reducing gun deaths and injuries requires new solutions. In San Jose, Calif., where I am mayor, we've embarked on two approaches untried in any other city or state: We're imposing an annual fee on gun-owning residents and investing the revenues in violence prevention efforts. And on Jan. 1, the city will begin requiring gun owners to carry liability insurance to compensate victims harmed by the negligent or reckless use of a firearm.

These initiatives reflect the recognition that we can't make 400 million guns go away, but we can make gun ownership safer. The recent surge in pandemic-era gun sales, the influx of "ghost guns" — privately made and untraceable — and the Supreme Court's decision in June striking down a New York law that had placed strict limits on carrying a gun outside the home have exacerbated the challenges to keep guns out of dangerous hands.

We can make some of those hands less dangerous, though. In San Jose, the nation's 10th-largest city, more than 200 people are killed or injured by gunfire every year. Not all of that harm results from the actions of criminals. Over a recent six-year period, 42 percent of San Jose's gun deaths and injuries resulted from unintentional shootings or shootings whose circumstances were unknown, while suicide attempts accounted for another 15 percent. Suicide exacts an even more lethal toll nationally, accounting for 54 percent of all gun fatalities. So much of that suffering is preventable.

Many studies have shown that the mere presence of a gun in a home makes a host of perilous circumstances much more lethal. A domestic violence victim faces five times the risk of dying if the abuser has access to a gun, for example, while access to a firearm in the home increases the odds of suicide more than threefold. Interventions such as mental health counseling, suicide and domestic violence prevention, and gun safety classes can prevent some of those harms. We should focus those services where we can have the greatest impact in reducing gun-related harm: on those living in households with guns.

This is why, beginning next year, San Jose will require gun owners to pay an annual fee — the amount is still to be determined — which a nonprofit foundation will invest in evidence-based violence prevention programs directed at gun-owning families. This policy won't magically halt mass shootings or suicides, but it will provide a better chance to get help to troubled adults and teenagers before they pick up their guns.

Our gun insurance mandate will address an often overlooked aspect of gun harm: unintentional shootings, which kill nearly 500 Americans annually and send about 26,000 others to emergency rooms, many of them children. Insurance companies can use premiums to encourage safer behavior by providing gun-owning policyholders with financial incentives to take gun-safety classes, store their firearms in a gun safe and install a chamber-load indicator or trigger lock. These steps could save many lives in a nation where 4.6 million children live in a home where a gun is kept loaded and unlocked.

Most gun-owning residents can comply with the insurance mandate with little or no additional cost under standard homeowners' and renters' policies. As more jurisdictions adopt an insurance requirement — legislators in New Jersey and California have recently proposed them — we expect that the insurance industry will become increasingly invested in reducing gun-related harm. Premiums will reflect the risks of gun ownership and will adjust accordingly, in the same way that auto insurers offer "good driver" discounts or how they incentivized the installation of antilock brakes and airbags in the past.

Of course, in the realm of gun regulation, no good deed goes unlitigated. Three groups sued San Jose after the ordinance imposing the fee and insurance requirement passed. A Federal District Court declined their pleas for an injunction to stop the ordinance from taking effect, finding no unconstitutional burden on Second Amendment rights where "there are no means by which a San Jose gun owner may be deprived of his or her firearm."

That's the point. Until Congress and the courts arrive at a politically and constitutionally viable approach to sensibly restricting gun ownership, we must make gun ownership safer. There is no inevitability to gun-related death, injury and suffering — unless, through our inaction, we allow there to be so.

Sam Liccardo, a Democrat, has been the mayor of San Jose since 2015. He is a former federal and local prosecutor.

Teach kids it's OK to decline hugs

By Bonnie Jean Feldkamp

Understanding consent starts at home, and the holiday season is a good time to visit the fundamentals and practice personal boundaries. We tell kids, "Keep your hands to yourself." But we also need to teach kids that affection is not mandatory. They don't have to hug that relative they only see during the holidays. They can and should say no when they don't want to.

There's an old nursery rhyme that's perfect for talking to young kids about consent.

"Georgie Porgie, pudding and pie / Kissed the girls and made them cry / When the boys came out to play / Georgie Porgie ran away."

I ask my son questions about Georgie. We talk through what happened in this story. Why did the girls cry? Because George didn't ask for those kisses first. Why did Georgie run away? Because he was embarrassed or told to leave. I started this conversation with my son when he was 3 years old using the nursery rhyme to guide us.

Everyone has witnessed the relative who wants a hug or a kiss, but the young child shrinks away to avoid unwanted affection. We've also all seen the manipulative relative who pretends to cry when this happens. But affection is not something that should be given in the name of being polite or in order to spare someone's feelings of rejection.

Hugs and kisses are intimate and warm. It's OK for children to know that affection is special and that they get to decide who receives their hugs and kisses. And just because a child is adorable doesn't mean that child owes anyone anything.

Doesn't this all sound familiar?

It should. Just because a teen is cute or a grown woman is strikingly beautiful doesn't mean they owe anyone a date or a kiss or anything else. Kids should learn bodily autonomy early, and sometimes it starts with the pushy grandma who thinks she's entitled to a kiss on Christmas Eve.

No. No, she's not.

Help your kids develop a way out. When Uncle Bill wants a hug and your kids start squirming because they don't want to give Uncle Bill a hug, offer an alternative that also helps your child set boundaries. Suggest a high-five, a handshake or a wave "hello" instead. I don't care if your child just gave their favorite uncle Jessie or Cousin Sarah a ginormous, enthusiastic hug; they don't owe anyone else the same. Affection is given when a person wants to offer it — not on demand, not because it's Christmas, not because someone asked and certainly not to spare someone's feelings.

If a relative puts on the fake waterworks or starts with the "pretty please?" routine, help your kids find the words to set boundaries. They can simply say, "I don't want to" or "I'm not comfortable with that." And parents, don't let that embarrass you. We've all seen the kid who was forced to hug or kiss a relative and we all know it's forced.

Talk to your kids ahead of time. Develop respectful options for saying "hello" and "goodbye" as well as ways for saying no to requests for unwanted physical affection.

Consent starts at home. You're allowed to say no, regardless of how old you are and who is making the request. Empower kids to choose who receives their affection. Give them the tools to do so respectfully and effectively. It will equip them for when a not-so-innocent affection request is made by a Harvey Weinstein type down the road

YouTube lands exclusive Norwalk Senior Center streaming rights for NFL Sunday Ticket

Google will pay $2.5 billion annually for the rights to stream NFL games online.

The NFL's Sunday Ticket package will go to streaming from the 2023 season.

league announced Thursday it has reached an agreement with Google to have its regular-season game package available exclusively on YouTube TV and YouTube premium channels.

While official terms of the agreement were not announced, Ken Belson and Benjamin Mullin of the New York Times reported Google previously discussed paying the NFL $2.5 billion per year, plus "additional payments based on the number of YouTube subscribers that Google is able to comment, is investing heavily in DirecTV has been the home for Sunday Ticket since 1994. The satellite company signed an eightyear pact to retain the exclusive rights to the service in October 2014, with the NFL receiving $1.5 billion annually.

There has been speculation for months about where Sunday Ticket would land with DirecTV's deal set to expire after the 2022 season. Disney, Apple and Amazon were said to be among the companies in

It appeared at one point that Apple was in the driver's seat, with The Athletic's Daniel Kaplan reporting in September 2021 the NFL was hoping the tech giant would win the bidding rights for the service.

A little girl is singing for the faithful to come ye Joyful and triumphant, a song she loves, And also the partridge in a pear tree And the golden rings and the turtle doves. In the dark streets, red lights and green and blue Where the faithful live, some joyful, some troubled, Enduring the cold and also the flu, Taking the garbage out and keeping the sidewalk shoveled. Not much triumph going on here — and yet There is much we do not understand. And my hopes and fears are met In this small singer holding onto my hand. Onward we go, faithfully, into the dark And are there angels hovering overhead? Hark.

Lasso' but not live sports," Kaplan wrote. "However, unlike Amazon, which is a retailer, and ESPN, a content company, the NFL with Apple would for the first time be doing business on a large scale with the preeminent technology giant. It would marry the NFL with the company that sells arguably the globe's most critical consumer product, the iPhone."

On Wednesday, Kaplan reported talks between the NFL and Apple broke down several weeks ago over Apple refusing to meet the league's valuation.

That desire for a lower cost reportedly stemmed from Apple wanting to offer Sunday Ticket at a lower price than DirecTV currently

According to Kaplan, the NFL's contracts with Fox and CBS forbid lower prices for the package due to concerns it would drive viewers to Sunday Ticket and away from the afternoon network broadcast windows.

"Also, Google's media strategy is more robust than Apple's, with YouTube TV a growing digital multi-channel platform, and YouTube itself with 2.5 billion monthly users," Kaplan wrote.

The NFL's deal with YouTube continues the league's expansion into streaming services. This season marked the start of Amazon's deal as the exclusive home for Thursday Night Football.

The league also has television deals with Fox, CBS and NBC for Sunday games, while ESPN remains the home for Monday Night Football.

Based on the reported $2.5 billion annual figure for Sunday Ticket, the NFL will be making $12.5 billion annually just through streaming and television rights fees starting with the 2023 season.
