California's new traffic laws for 2023

■ An array of new traffic laws go into effect Sunday, including new requirements to move over for bicyclists.

SACRAMENTO – As we head into the new year, the California Highway Patrol (CHP) is educating the public on traffic safety laws that were passed during this year's legislative season and signed by Gov. Gavin Newsom. The laws take effect Jan. 1, 2023, unless otherwise Public Employment: Peace Officers: Citizenship: The law maintains that peace officers, including peace officer trainees, be legally authorized to work in the United States consistent with federal law and regulations, however, removes the requirement that they be citizens or permanent residents of the United States.

Catalytic Converters: These laws specifically list who can sell catalytic converters to recyclers and require those recyclers to keep documentation such as the year, make, model, and copy of the vehicle title from which the catalytic converter was removed. The purpose of these laws is to help reduce catalytic converter theft.

Vehicular Manslaughter: Speeding and Reckless Driving: This law expands the criteria for "gross negligence" as it relates to the crime of vehicular manslaughter. Drivers involved in sideshow activity, exhibition of speed, or speeding over 100 miles per hour which results in a fatality could now be charged with Vehicular Manslaughter with Gross Negligence.

Speed Motor Vehicle and Exhibitions Contests of Speed: Parking lots and offstreet parking facilities are now activity.

Endangered Missing Advisory: The new "Feather Alert" allows law enforcement agencies to request the CHP to initiate an alert when an indigenous person has been kidnapped, abducted, or reported missing under unexplained or suspicious circumstances, and specific criteria has been met to

Yellow Alert: This law authorizes law enforcement agencies to request the CHP to activate a "Yellow Alert" when a fatal hit-and-run crash has occurred, and specific criteria has been met to permit alert activation. The law also encourages local media outlets to disseminate the information contained in a Yellow

The new law serves to use the public's assistance to improve the investigatory ability for law enforcement agencies throughout the state when working to solve fatal hit-and-run crashes.

Bicycles Omnibus Bill: Much like the move over or slow down law, this law provides for increased protections to bicyclists by requiring vehicles passing or overtaking a bicycle in the same direction, to move over to an adjacent lane of traffic, if one is available, or slow down and only pass the bicyclist when safe to do so.

The law also permits Class 3 e-bike riders to use approved bicycle paths and trails, bikeways, and bicycle lanes. The law prohibits local governments from requiring bicycle registration and allows local authorities to prohibit any electric bicycle on an equestrian, hiking, or 300 boys and girls allege in a other recreational trail.

Electric Bicycles: Safety and Training Program: This requires the CHP to work with other traffic included as locations where it is a safety stakeholders such as the crime to engage in a speed contest, California Office of Traffic Safety, exhibition of speed, or sideshow to develop statewide safety and Superior Court lawsuit filed Dec. 20 training programs for electric alleges minor detainees at county

LOS ANGELES - Nearly new lawsuit they were sexually assaulted, harassed and abused by Los Angeles County probation and detention officers while being held in county juvenile facilities.

The 359-page Los Angeles juvenile camps and detention centers were abused during the time of their mandated detainment. Lawyers for the 279 plaintiffs contend the county failed hundreds of minors through negligence, including a lack of adequate hiring policies to screen for potential sexual predators within its facilities, and failure to provide appropriate training and supervision of staff and employees.

The lawsuit also claims that while the plaintiffs were incarcerated, they were abused under the guise of "authority." The allegations include grooming, unsupervised inmate access that led to verbal and physical abuse, and inadequate training of employees on proper standards. Lawyers for the plaintiffs say Los Angeles County failed to provide juvenile detainees with necessary supervision to keep them safe from harm.

"It's an absolute disgrace that pandemic multiple-decadelong abuses of these minor victims within the exclusive control of Los Angeles County's juvenile detention system were allowed to run its course for as long as they did with no consequences or recourse,"

Law, which filed the lawsuit, said in a statement. "The irreversible trauma, suffering, and emotional and physical abuse that these children underwent will be a lifelong struggle that they will live with forever. The county should be held responsible for the predatory behavior of these officers and county officials they hired, failed to properly vet, and failed to properly

High School Sports - A Year in Review

■ From wrestling to basketball, Norwalk area schools enjoyed many successes in 2022.

By John M. Sherrard Contributor

NORWALK - It's been a year of firsts and deep playoff runs for the Norwalk area high school sports teams in 2022.

In addition, a 20-year reunion of a group of youth baseball players from the Norwalk Pony 2002 World Series Champions, a longtime coach and Norwalk resident honored with the naming of a softball field after her, two firsts for the Norwalk girls wrestling program and a first-time state appearance for a John Glenn girl wrestler.

2002 Pony WS Champions

The 2002 Pony League World Series Champions gathered on opening day for the Norwalk Pony League season in March at Holifield Park. On display was the Roy Gillespie Memorial Trophy that the team received in the World Series. Many former players and coaches were in attendance.

Norwalk dominated the series and shutout Levittown, Puerto Rico, 10-0 in five innings to win the title. "It was an amazing run," Johnny Perez said, who was the teams' second baseman.

They became the first area team to win a Pony World Series since the 1965 Long Beach team.

The team also honored former assistant coach Tony Rivas, who had since passed away. His original jersey was on display.

"This has always been home for many of us here," said former Norwalk Pony All Star coach Ruben Velazquez of the field. "It's always great to come back here and see the league still going."

Santa Fe Girls Volleyball advances to CIF Semifinals

Perhaps, the biggest story came from the Santa Fe Girls Volleyball team this past season.

The upstart Chiefs finished tied for second in the Del Rio League, were ranked No. 9 in the division and advanced to the CIF-SS Semifinals with a 3-1 win over Trinity Classical Academy for the first time in 20 years. Santa Fe improved to 23-12 overall and travelled to Nordhoff of Ojai for the semifinals. They lost, 3-2, but moved on to CIF State action.

The Chiefs won a first-round match, 3-0, over Poly of Sun Valley and moved on to the second round where they lost to Palisades.

Under coach Sarah Orozco, the team won 13 games in 2022.

"This year was a season to learn about ourselves with all other DI, DII and DIII programs we got to play," Orozco added. "I wasn't sure what this year's team would look like coming from COVID.

"We made sure we showed everyone we will be a first-ranked team next year," said Orozco, on the college athletic website.

Cerritos College Men's Soccer came within a game of advancing to the CCCAA State Championships.

Entering the Southern California Regional Championships, the Falcons were undefeated and ranked first in the state with a 20-0-2 record. However, they ran into an old nemesis in Mt. SAC, which has won six state titles.

The Falcons, who have won four state titles, lost, 1-0, in overtime to the defending state champions and finished with a 20 1-2 record.

"The unfortunate part of this game sometimes is, we finished the season undefeated (one loss) and yet we're done," Cerritos College Men's Soccer coach Benny Artiaga said. "In playoffs, unfortunately, someone has to be sent home and (Saturday) it was us. "We were clearly the better team (Saturday). It's unfortunate man. In soccer, it's not the best team that wins all the time.'

The Cerritos College football team finished the season with a 7-3 regular season record and qualified for a post-season bowl game.

The Falcons (8-3) hosted the Long Beach City College Vikings in the Western State Bowl game and had an exciting, 35-28 win. The win was the fourth consecutive bowl game win for the Falcons.

Newspapers are disappearing where democracy needs them most

By Nancy Gibbs

Every couple of weeks you can read about another newspaper shutting its doors, or moving from daily to weekly, or hollowing out its newsroom until it's little more than a skeleton staff bulked up with j-school students. Study the maps made by Penny Abernathy, visiting professor at Northwestern University and an expert on dwindling sources of news, and you can see the dead zones — the 200 or so counties with no local paper. About 1,600 other counties have only one.

Local news is the oxygen of democracy, the most trusted source for the most essential information, and we've long known why dying newsrooms damage communities. But look at the maps again, and another alarming picture comes into focus: The very places where local news is disappearing are often the same places that wield disproportionate political power.

This phenomenon affects Americans living far away from the news deserts. Demographers predict that by 2040, one-third of Americans will pick 70 percent of the Senate.

Think of a typical voter in South Dakota, with its single congressional district and, of course, two senators for a population of about 895,000. Thanks to the Senate's structural bias toward less-populated states, that gives each of the nearly 600,000 registered voters in South Dakota about 28 times more power in that body than each of the 17 million voters in Texas. When it comes to electing presidents, that South Dakota voter carries twice the weight in the electoral college as their Texas counterpart.

But with all that added clout for shaping the composition of Congress and, less directly, the Supreme Court and the White House, the voters in about half of South Dakota's 66 counties have only a single weekly newspaper. Seven counties have no newspaper at all.

You could do the same math for residents of Wyoming, Montana, North Dakota, Vermont or Delaware, all states with similarly enhanced political clout. But finding reliable local news sources is much harder in the first three — geographically larger, rural states with dispersed populations, which are much more likely to lack high-speed internet as well. In contrast, Delaware's three small counties have 13 newspapers; Vermont's 14 counties have 39.

By now we know quite a bit about why this matters. The citizens whose votes count the most might have the hardest time learning about the issues and candidates running in their communities — because there's no longer anyone reporting on them. Since 2005, newspaper employment has fallen 70 percent, Abernathy calculates, and local TV, radio and new digital start-ups don't begin to make up for that decline. Fewer knowledgeable local reporters means less accountability, leading to higher public spending, lower social cohesion, fewer people voting or running for office, less ticket-splitting and more polarization as people rely on national news sources. In 1992, a third of the states with Senate races picked a senator from one party and the president from the other. In 2016, not a single state did so, and that hadn't happened in 100 years.

If you're a Democrat hoping to stand a chance of winning in a red state, or a Republican in a blue one, it helps if voters get to know you personally, see you at ribbon cuttings and town halls, hear where your views depart from party orthodoxy. That's a lot harder to do without local reporters providing reliable coverage, no matter how many targeted Facebook ads you buy. By the same logic, winning candidates are accountable to the voters who elevate them — unless no one knows what they ran on or what they are doing with their power, beyond whether they have an R or a D on their jersey. If you weaken the connection between voters and their representatives, you empower their donors, lobbyists and conflict entrepreneurs.

Partisan players are well aware of the opportunity presented when a local paper dies. Potemkin sites that mimic authentic newsrooms have popped up across the country, more than 1,300 in all; they have the look and feel of reliable information sources, but their content is often partisan noise, produced by dark-moneyfunded propaganda factories. A single purveyor, Metric Media, claims to post more than 5 million stories a month. All kinds of disinformation and conspiracy theories find the desiccated news deserts to be fertile ground.

We are dealing with a disruption of the entire ecology of information at the very moment when 78 percent of Americans say we can no longer agree even on basic facts. Local news is a crucial piece of a larger problem, and we can't truly understand the forces threatening democracy without reckoning with that larger environment — both the disappearance of critical sources of essential information and the swelling of information streams that contaminate our public space.

A rising alliance of entrepreneurs, innovators, philanthropists and legacy news organizations is working overtime to build robust alternative information sources. Digital start-ups and nonprofit newsrooms are proliferating, but they typically are based in cities, not the hollowed-out rural counties that have often suffered most from the economic upheavals of the past but will hold disproportionate power in picking the leaders of the future.

All Americans need and deserve access to the information that enables good political choices — but that is disappearing fastest in places that need it most.

How a tool that's supposed to help you save could be wasting your time

By Pamela Herd and Donald P. Moynihan

It's the end of the year, the season when families spend more time with loved ones ... and with their flexible savings accounts. For example, the two of us just spent a good part of a day online and on the phone submitting claims for our daughter's orthodontia bill and some mundane prescriptions.

With the new year deadline approaching, many people are trying to use up the money they diverted to their FSAs during 2022 by splurging on spare eyeglasses, electronic massagers, first aid kits and other vaguely medical knickknacks they don't really need. There's a whole mini-industry of online stores specializing in FSA-approved items. The perversity of such last-minute, ill-targeted health-care spending is only the tip of the iceberg: By one estimate, consumers lost $4.2 billion in unspent FSA funds in 2020.

We're both professors of public policy who study the administrative burdens people encounter in government programs — yet we have struggled so much with our own family's FSA that we decided to look under the hood. What we've concluded is that it's time to reevaluate the value of FSAs.

Here is how they're supposed to work, whether for health- or child-care expenditures. You predict your expenses for the coming year, and your employer lets you set aside some money for those expenses from every paycheck. This reduces your taxable income, and if you Google "FSA," most hits will present it as a savvy way to save some money.

But if you don't spend all of the money you set aside by the year-end deadline, you lose it — and that leftover money reverts to the employers. (They have a variety of options for what they do with it, including paying for the FSA's administrative costs, reducing future employee FSA costs or, in some cases, keeping the money.)

As Vox Media's Ian Millhiser put it: "Every year you have to guess how much money you'll spend on health care. Guess right, you get a modest tax break; guess wrong, you light your money on fire."

But in practical terms, the real issue is that FSAs waste a lot of user time and money.

How much money? Definitive estimates are hard to come by. The government doesn't track these expenditures at the individual level, and the private firms that administer the FSA don't have to report data. For what it's worth, one analysis by Money magazine estimated that almost half the 21.6 million Americans with FSAs forfeited money in 2020, with an average loss of $408.

The administrative burdens involved are also a time tax on users. Workers typically set up an account through their employer with a private FSA vendor that assesses whether their expenses qualify. Submitting an expense request often involves a lot of photocopying, scanning and uploading receipts. You have to know what is allowed and what is not, and which form to submit. If your insurance company is involved, you can't claim reimbursement until it has paid its share. Claims can be rejected for seemingly mystifying reasons, with little avenue for redress. If your employer changes your FSA provider, you have to learn a new set of procedures. Few of us who are not professional health-service administrators have the skills, discipline, organization and time to do this effectively.

In public policy terms, the most obvious policy drawback to FSAs is that they are a regressive benefit. It's largely salaried employees with higher incomes who benefit from them, and the value of the tax deduction increases as you enter a higher tax bracket. This reflects a general problem with policymaking — we rely too much on tax deductions rather than direct benefits. The use of such deductions has to be monitored — generally, in this case, by the private FSA vendors, who are the reliable winners in this whole process.

It's all a lot more complicated than it has to be, and a lot less beneficial to the American families FSAs are supposed to help. Policymakers need to break the habit of favoring complexity over simplicity. Politically it might be easier to gain bipartisan support for tax deductions rather than direct spending, but such policy solutions systematically underestimate the hassles involved and undervalue the time we spend clawing our money back from private financial firms

Meanwhile, back at our house, we discovered that our employers have extended the new year's deadline by 2½ months — so we're still hoping to get our last-minute expenses processed. Fingers crossed.

Pamela Herd and Donald P. Moynihan are professors at the McCourt School of Public Policy at Georgetown University.

Stop calling it 'crimes of passion'

By Julia Cooke

On a cold October morning, Colin Canham and his wife, Sara Emerick, were found dead in an apparent murder-suicide. Mr. Canham was found lying near a firearm outside the couple's home. Ms. Emerick was inside. A detective told me that it seemed that Mr. Canham had committed a crime of passion — a legal term that implies a lack of premeditation, an act supposedly born out of love or devotion.

I first met him when we were in our 20s. Though we were part of the same friend group, we weren't especially close. Still, I knew him to be a loyal friend, gregarious and generous. He moved couches for friends and helped roast pigs for celebrations, where he, like most of us, often drank to excess. He also liked woodworking. I once hosted a get-together where he suggested I add crown molding to my apartment and offered to help me buy, cut and attach each piece.

We all largely fell out of touch in our late 30s, but the news resuscitated old bonds. Those who had been closer to Mr. Canham wondered what the distance of time had done to him and wished they had known about his recent struggles. Others shared photos of him at parties.

That he apparently killed Ms. Emerick — whom I never met — did not seem possible to me. But in the past few years, a detective told me, she called the police multiple times from the home they shared near Cape Cod Bay. No arrests were ever made.

In the aftermath, I noticed, my friends didn't call it what it was. One noted tensions and resentment toward Mr. Canham among Ms. Emerick's circle. There was a euphemistic reference to where he ended up. Largely absent from the conversation was language that accurately described the offense he evidently committed — "kill," "shoot," "domestic violence" or even "crime." The words that were used hinted at a cloudy culpability.

Mr. Canham's closer friends, some of whom are my good friends, too, might have wanted to keep warm memories of him unsullied. The horrific finality of what all signs point to his having done made it difficult to reconcile the man with his action.

Women killed by a single offender in the United States, according to a 2021 report by the Violence Policy Center, are far more likely to die at the hands of a current or former romantic partner than at the hands of a male stranger. A survey conducted by a domestic violence hotline found that 40 percent of intimate partner violence survivors who did not contact the police were not certain that what happened to them was a crime. Abusers often do the manipulative work of becoming essential, constructing vigorous good-guy facades through gallantry.

Word choice has a profound effect on what we think of ourselves and one another. Terms like "crime of passion" can imply that violence is a consequence of love, and talking around violence can make you doubt that it will happen or that it will happen again. Silence reinforces the old-fashioned implication that a victim is, at least in some part, to blame for her own abuse, that a mother should have seen her daughter's murder coming.

"Why didn't you leave?" Gayle King asked the musician FKA twigs about her abuse lawsuit against her ex-boyfriend Shia LaBeouf. She answered politely, "The question should really be to the abuser, 'Why are you holding someone hostage?'"

"He just seemed like a nice guy," Gabby Petito's mother said of her daughter's fiancé and killer.

A neighbor told reporters that Mr. Canham seemed so proud of his house and family.

The person we knew all those years ago did not seem to be violent. Yet to talk around the violence that we now know of, and its consequences, wrests some final measure of control from Ms. Emerick and her family. A friend said that both deserved our grief. I wondered if the friend feared that looking straight at what transpired would complicate grief beyond recognition.

What happens inside a marriage is private, the implication goes. In truth, intimate partner violence is an epidemic that has far-reaching social consequences. It causes homelessness, is linked to higher suicide rates and hovers in the background of most mass shootings. It has substantial economic costs: A 2018 study estimated that intimate partner violence costs nearly $3.6 trillion over the lifetimes of 43 million American adults with victimization history. Much of that burden — medical costs, criminal justice work and more — is borne by government sources. The Covid pandemic has only made things worse.

And then there are the bigger, public failures that contributed to Ms. Emerick's death — most notably a legal system that is ill equipped for the emotional complexities of domestic violence — and can't be addressed with language that treats the issue as unspeakably private. Many victims are afraid to call the police, concerned that they'll be doubted or blamed. Those who call often regret doing so.

In a tribute online, a friend of Ms. Emerick noted that in 2020 she expressed concern about her husband. Two days before she was killed, she called the police. He was drunk and trying to get into the house, she said. She didn't pursue a restraining order, the detective told me — she was filing for divorce. No decorous words disguise the fact that her life was taken before she had the chance to leave.

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the WILL or estate, or both of CHARLES FREDRICK RHODES. A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by DARLENE P. RHODES in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that DARLENE P. RHODES be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 01/26/23 at 8:30AM in Dept. 44 located at 111 N. HILL ST., LOS ANGELES, CA 90012

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. Federal budget includes $3M-plus for Norwalk

■ The spending plan passed by Congress includes $2.2 million for Norwalk-La Mirada Unified to expand its online learning, and another $976,962 for the Norwalk Senior Center.

By Eric Pierce

budget, approved by Congress last week and expected to go to President Joe Biden for his signature this week, includes tens of millions of dollars in funding for several regional projects, including more than $3 million earmarked for

The spending package includes emergency supplemental funding to "better respond to increasingly catastrophic natural disasters and extreme weather events," as well as emergency resources to support the Ukrainian people.

The package includes several measures that Congresswoman Linda Sánchez sponsored, including $28,428,707 for 15 different community projects in California's 38th Congressional District; a bill to improve access to retirement savings for small business owners; and a bill co-authored by Sánchez and Rep. Grace F. Napolitano (CA-32) to rename the West Covina Post Office after the late Congressman Esteban E. Torres.

"I am deeply proud to vote for this bipartisan government funding package and send it to President Biden for his signature today," said Sánchez. "This legislation will make life better for working families by creating good-paying jobs and investing directly in communities that need it most. It also addresses some of the biggest challenges we face today, from strengthening our national security to investing in emergency disaster relief-which is critical for wildfire victims in California and across the country."

The projects, which are listed in alphabetical order, include:

■ $3 million for the City of

The PAD Park will also commit space dedicated to incubating small, home-grown businesses such as galleries, cafés, bakeries, and other vendors.

- $2 million for the San Gabriel Valley Council of Governments. The funding will be used to implement a Workforce Development Program for adults and at-risk youth from disadvantaged communities (DACs) who are experiencing homelessness. Funding will be prioritized for residents of the City of Montebello's Operation Stay Safe. The Program will provide participants with paid work experiences and supportive services, placing them on a pathway to economic security.
- $2.2 million for the City of Santa Fe Springs. The funding will be used to bring Water Well No. 12 into operation and provide safe, affordable drinking water for residents and businesses. Water Well No. 12 was constructed in 2015 but has never been in operation due to its inability to pass state and federal drinking water standards.
- $750,000 for the City of Whittier. The funding will be used to convert 8 acres of underutilized property at Whittier Union High School's Sierra Education Complex into shared community recreation space. When complete, the space can be used for youth sports programs that serve more than 2,000 young people annually.
- $2.5 million for Water Replenishment District of Southern California. The funding will be used to treat three PFAS-affected wells, helping to ensure residents of Whittier, Montebello, and La Habra have access to clean drinking water.

The package includes H.R. 7832, legislation co-authored by Reps. Sánchez and Napolitano to designate the U.S. Postal Service facility at 396 South California

"Congressman Esteban Torres was a trailblazer for Latinos and a champion for the working class,' said Congresswoman Linda T. Sánchez. "He was deeply proud of where he was from and who he represented. Renaming the post office in his honor is a fitting tribute to Congressman Torres' decades of service. I look forward to President Biden signing this bill into law very soon and ensuring his legacy lives on in our community.'

Sánchez continued: the Ukrainian people continue to valiantly fight back against unprovoked Russian aggression, the United States and our allies must continue to stand with them. I am grateful that this funding package includes critical aid for the Ukrainian people, which will help put an end to this needless war and ensure a democratic future for economy and allow our communities support services for children and to thrive. Unfortunately, the hardworking Americans who keep our small businesses running are often left with few options to save for retirement. I am glad that the spending package includes my bill, the Starter K Act, to help small business owners provide their employees with streamlined, costeffective retirement plans."

Meanwhile, Downey Congresswoman Lucille Rovbal-Allard secured nearly $10.6 million for 15 local projects, although none are located in Downey.

Her allocations include:

- $300,000 for the Aquatic Center Outdoor Pool Improvements
- $1,500,000 for the Bell Gardens Regional Aquatic Center
