Cerritos College debuts Women's Wrestling

■ New coach Dustin Kirk leads the way as the CCCAA approves 13 colleges for competition beginning this month

By John M. Sherrard Contributor

NORWALK - It has taken approximately 10 years, but the California Community College Athletic Association (CCCAA) has officially started Women's Wrestling this year as a competitive

Action starts Friday (Jan. 27) for Cerritos College with a Tri-dual at Downey High School, with Menlo College and Vanguard University.

On Saturday, Jan. 28, Cerritos will hold its inaugural Cerritos College Women's Open (Freestyle).

Right at the forefront is Cerritos College with a full roster and a familiar name for its first head coach.

Former CCCAA State Champion Dustin Kirk became the first coach for the Falcons and has a full squad for the initial campaign. Assisting Kirk is Yoshito Funakoshi.

Kirk, who is also an assistant coach for the men's team, had a phenomenal two-year career, winning a state title at 133 Lbs. in his sophomore season in 2014. In his freshman season, he was 36-1 and finished third in the state at 125

In his championship win, Kirk was 3-0 (Major, 2 decisions), which included a win over an opponent who beat him in the CCCAA So Cal's a week before the state tournament.

After Cerritos, Kirk competed at King University in Tennessee and was an NCAA Academic All-All-American (top 8 in the country).

"It feels great," said Kirk, of being named the first women's wrestling coach. "It's an opportunity. Women's Wrestling is the fastest growing sport in the country right now. In 2022 at the four-year level, there was 39 new women's college wrestling on his roster in years past. programs added.

start it here at Cerritos College from a school I went to is awesome. I'm just thrilled for the opportunity."

"I've got a great group of girls," he said. "They're excited with a lot of energy and a lot of talent on the team. They bought in already early and that's a great thing for a coach. To start with 19 girls on the team for a first-year program is awesome. Everybody is great, the talent is there and I'm super excited. I'm grateful for the opportunity for this sport and to develop the women's program.

Cerritos College athletic director Maria Castro, who was one of many who were behind the formation of women's wrestling, was also excited about the new beginning of women's wrestling.

"The Cerritos College athletics program is very excited for the opportunity to offer women's wrestling," Castro said. "It is a growing sport for women's athletics in the state. The addition of this program allows us to serve our neighboring community and give a chance for students to participate and be involved in our athletic programs here at Cerritos. I have no doubt that women's wrestling will add to the excellence of Cerritos College Athletics.'

Also involved on the ground floor of developing the women's program along with Castro was Paul Keysaw (Fresno City College coach), longtime Cerritos College Men's coach Donny Garriott and John Woods (So Cal Wrestling Alliance), who helped in writing the legislation for the sport.

This addition of women's wrestling also comes on the heels of the 50th Anniversary of Title IX.

The CCCAA announced that there will be 12 colleges competing in the inaugural season. They are Fresno City, Sacramento City, Lassen, Santa Rosa, Mt. SAC, Cerritos, Palomar, Moorpark, ELAC, Santa Ana, Cuesta and Bakersfield. College of the Redwoods will start up next year.

Garriott also talked of the American and a two-time NCAA momentous occasion. "This has been years in the making", said Garriott, who has served as the men's head coach since 2006. "Our wrestling coaches association has been talking and implementing this for years now and it is finally coming to fruition."

It's a good way to wait so they can start developing to see where they want to go, like for example Iowa or Nebraska.

Freshman Alyssa Rodriguez, who is a team captain, explains how proud she is to be in the program. 'I'm really proud because whenever people ask me about our growing sport I tell them I'm the team captain," she said. "I know that the new girls will help the sport grow years from now."

Rodriguez talked about her first "I tell these girls that they are competition on Friday at the Tri-

> Another wrestler, Sabrina Sinohui of Norwalk High, comes from a young but very successful program under the direction of coach Bryan DeVries. "Sabrina has come a long way since day one,"

At Friday and Saturday's first two wrestling events, the Falcons will get plenty of experience with the teams involved.

"For a first-year program (Cerritos) to be able to wrestle Menlo and Vanguard (Friday's TriDual), I'm just excited to test the camps to bring opportunity for 1944: The Soviet Red Army waters," Kirk said.

At the Cerritos Open on Saturday, six teams and Cerritos will compete in the individual event. The teams are Mt. SAC, Menlo, Vanguard, Palomar, Santa Ana and ELAC.

"The cool thing is we're going to run a three-man mechanics for officials," explained Kirk. "This is the standard for the Olympic and World Championships.

"(Cerritos) is ready and excited for this weekend," added Kirk. "This is only week three for us. We Paging Dr. Frischer...

⁷ Dr. Alan Frischer

The American Heart Association recommends that most adults consume no more than 1,500 mg of sodium in a day, with the maximum being 2,300 mg. The actual average? A whopping benefit by restricting our salt intake to the recommended levels. Here are some suggestions:

- There are natural salts in fresh cuts of meat, chicken, and fish, but far less than in their processed versions. Use fresh foods, rather than packaged.
- Look for fresh or frozen poultry that has not been injected with sodium. Read the fine print on the packaging and be on the lookout for terms like broth, saline, or sodium solution.
- · When you do buy packaged and prepared foods, choose them carefully. Brands differ, and sodium content will be listed on the label.

- Select your condiments carefully. Soy sauce, bottled salad dressings, dips, ketchup, salsa, capers, mustard, pickles, olives, and relish often have lower salt options available.
- Fresh fruit and vegetables are naturally very low in sodium. If you buy frozen varieties, look for the words "fresh frozen." Canned or frozen produce often have added sodium, but look for ones which state that they do not.
- When buying packaged items, look for the red American Heart Association Heart-Check mark.
- Choose spices and seasonings that do not list sodium as an ingredient. For example, use garlic powder instead of garlic salt. Salt substitutes often contain potassium, and are not only a good alternative to sodium, but can actually lower blood pressure. (Of course, make sure that you have no health issues with potassium.)
- Potassium-rich foods include sweet potatoes, potatoes, greens, tomatoes, white beans, kidney beans, nonfat yogurt, oranges, bananas and cantaloupe.
- Before going to a restaurant, take a look at its website. Restaurants often list the sodium content of their menu items. When ordering, don't hesitate to ask for their lower sodium
- Don't be fooled by dishes that may not taste salty. (Cottage cheese is a good example!) Read those labels.
- For some, adding salt before tasting has become a habit. Always taste your food first.

- · Use onions, garlic, herbs, spices, citrus juices and vinegars in place of some or all of the salt.
- Drain or rinse your canned beans and vegetables in order to cut the sodium by as much as 40%.
- Try combining lower-sodium versions of food with the regular versions - like broths, soups, soy sauce and tomato-
- Try preparing your pasta, rice and hot cereal without salt.
- · Grilling, braising, roasting, searing and sauteing can bring out natural flavors, and reduce the need for added salt.
- Watch out for words on labels like pickled, brined, barbecued, cured, smoked, au jus, or soy, miso or teriyaki sauce. These tend to be extremely high in salt.
- Cut your portion sizes! Eating less food means that you are also cutting down on the sodium.

Reducing the salt content of your diet is not easy. Salt makes food taste so good! So many of us rely on foods like bread, pizza, tacos, sandwiches, soup, and cheeses, which are extremely high in sodium. Our culture does not encourage us to make this switch easily, so it is up to us.

On the positive side, with less salt, we can better taste our food's natural flavors. Salt preference is often an acquired taste that can be changed. Over time, our taste buds will adjust to a lower sodium diet, and our blood pressure will thank us!

Pioneer High School senior receives award of merit for overcoming academic obstacles

WHITTIER - Pioneer High School senior Lucas Lopez has had Hannah, one of his two siblings diagnosed with Sanfilippo syndrome, a to endure many challenges in his education. As a member of a military family, he spent years traveling the country, bouncing from school to school; as the brother of family members who have been diagnosed with a rare genetic condition, he has mourned siblings who have passed away at a young age.

Through it all, Lopez has found a home at Pioneer High and a family of friends in the Titan band, where he has played trumpet since joining as a freshman. Academically, Lopez has challenged himself with honors and Advanced Placement classes, maintaining a 3.25 GPA, and plans to study music composition and music therapy in college.

For overcoming obstacles in his education and serving as a role model for others, Lopez was recognized with an Award of Merit by the Whittier Union Board of Trustees during its Jan. 17 Board meeting.

"Thank you to the Board for allowing me to represent Pioneer High School, it is quite an honor," Lopez said. "Pioneer has provided me with so much during the past four years and I am very thankful. It feels so good going to Pioneer every day because there is always something new going on and I love my music classes. I'd like to also recognize and thank my family and friends for always being there and supporting me.

After years of living on military bases – which made it difficult to make friends and form genuine connections - Lopez and his family relocated permanently to Whittier, just prior to his freshman year. Lopez quickly bonded with his Titan bandmates and said that for the first time he was able to establish long-term friendships with his classmates.

genetic condition that targets the brain and nervous system. This condition had also claimed Lopez's younger brother, Aiden, at three years old.

In the summer before Lopez's senior year, tragedy struck the Lopez family twice. First, Lopez's grandmother died and then Hannah lost her battle with Sanfilippo syndrome. Though the grieving process has been difficult, Lopez said he has found a system of support through his friends and Pioneer High's student well-being program.

It hasn't been easy, as Lopez has had to deal with his own health issues, as when he suffered a public panic attack on campus. Connecting with Pioneer High social worker Karen Gonzalez, Lopez now employs a series of breathing techniques and coping strategies when he is overwhelmed or beginning to panic. On campus, Lopez is a frequent visitor to the school's tranquility lounge, where he goes when he needs to escape.

Another calming method Lopez employs is to carry a notebook with him at all times, where he writes down notes and song lyrics. After his sister Hannah died, Lopez used the notebook to write a song for her as a way to remember and honor her. Lopez believes sharing his story is important to help other students get through difficult times.

Inspired by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Lopez understands that life is full of choices, and he chooses to try and find the good, motivated by King's quote, "If you can't fly then run, if you can't run then walk, if you can't walk then crawl, but whatever you do, you have to keep moving

It's in the United States' best interest to help China with Covid

By Michael Callahan

Michael Callahan is an infectious disease physician scientist at Massachusetts General Hospital.

China rolled back its longstanding pandemic strategy "zero Covid," which had protected the country for nearly three years, in early December. This reversal came after historic public protests calling for an ease in restrictions but amid concern that there was not enough immunity to adequately protect the population.

The timing could not have been worse. A few weeks into a post-zero-Covid reality, the nation's largest annual migration for the Lunar New Year, which ends in February, has begun. After years of restrictions, travel for 2023 is anticipated to be enormous as urban employees travel home to celebrate with family and friends. The combination of densely packed public transit systems, winter conditions and multigenerational gatherings is so ideal for the study of disease transmission that the Lunar New Year is a common tabletop simulation for training public health officials. This year we'll actually see any fallout.

The challenge will be made harder by the arrival of the coronavirus's most infectious subvariant to date, XBB1.5. In the United States, which has high vaccination rates using highly protective vaccines, XBB1.5 accounts for nearly half of all Covid cases. If the U.S. experience is any indication, XBB1.5 could be devastating if it spreads widely in China. Domestically made Chinese vaccines — Beijing has so far refused to import American mRNA vaccines — may provide less lasting protection against the virus and its variants. This is something the world will watch unfold in the weeks ahead.

What can the United States do, presuming our government is motivated to do anything? Given Beijing's threats to Taiwan, its oppression of Uighurs and efforts to block the investigation into the origins of the coronavirus, Congress may be inclined to take a hard line on China or not do anything for the Chinese government at all. And the newly seated Congress is even more hawkish.

But doing nothing is a dangerous game. A refusal to help could not only cause incalculable suffering and deaths; it risks harming our own hard-earned gains to end the pandemic.

Given the current politics on both sides, direct government agreements seem unlikely. Over the past few years, decades-old U.S.-Chinese research collaborations, including my own research on emerging disease, have decreased. Beijing has also dragged its feet on transparent virus surveillance. However, some U.S.- Chinese academic and commercial partnerships have continued throughout the pandemic in areas such as clinical trials and vaccine research and development. With imagination, several of these collaborations could be quickly redirected to assist China in the coming weeks.

For example, in 2021, the U.S. National Academy of Engineering, the Chinese Academy of Engineering and the Royal Academy of Engineering in Britain issued a joint statement affirming their commitment to facilitate global action to respond to the pandemic through engineering approaches, including sharing public health information. In December, at least one online pharmacy in China began selling the Covid drug Paxlovid, made by the American pharmaceutical company Pfizer, directly to patients. The pharmacy shipped Paxlovid to any Chinese person with a positive coronavirus test. If the Beijing government were to tie the government's home test result reporting system to the commercial Paxlovid home delivery providers, many lives could be saved.

What can the U.S. government do to help? Although the Chinese government has refused lifesaving assistance from the United States, Chinese physicians, patients and families devastated by Covid have not. U.S. agencies might save more lives and prevent more disruption of the Chinese economy — and our own — by bypassing Beijing and leaning on longstanding academic and commercial partnerships to go directly to the provinces, communities, companies, hospitals and individuals that have the most to lose.

Some potential solutions include the exportation of successful strategies from the United States' Operation Warp Speed playbook, which accelerated the delivery of mRNA vaccines from the manufacturer into people's arms. This huge logistical challenge can be revised for the rapid deployment of a new Chinese-made mRNA vaccine. Other possible initiatives include sharing disaster medicine protocols that extend hospital drug stockpiles to treat many more patients and sharing pandemic-proven strategies to help protect Chinese health care workers during Covid surges. These include prioritizing the protection of bedside nurses, using telemedicine consultants to increase available physicians and grouping clinical workers to reduce workplace infection and absenteeism. One high-impact technology approach would be to share U.S. taxpayer-funded intellectual property that could make average Chinese vaccines more potent.

Those who think the Chinese government is unlikely to cooperate need to do their homework. Though it's still early, Pfizer was able to secure a deal with China to sell Paxlovid through a state-owned company. In September, Merck & Co. also made a deal with the Chinese state-owned drugmaker Sinopharm to import and market the antiviral medication molnupiravir in China.

Any solution that saves lives, avoids the collapse of the Chinese health care system and reduces the chance of a pandemic reboot is in our national interest. A pandemic catastrophe in China will reverberate around the world, making it a hugely crucial outbreak to contain. Many low-cost solutions are based on hard lessons learned by U.S. health care, and many of these are readily transferable to sister hospitals in China. This will have a trivial cost for taxpayers. It is also in the interest of U.S. national health security — provided you believe pandemics are made far worse by apathy, small thinking and politics.

George Santos' denial was a real drag

By Jennifer Boylan

Jennifer Finney Boylan is a professor of English at Barnard College of Columbia University and a fellow at Harvard University's Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study.

My first thought, when I read that, during his salad days, Rep. George Santos had seemingly performed as a drag queen, was, "Finally! Something about him that's appealing!"

But almost as soon as the news broke that our favorite congressional dissembler apparently had a former life as "Kitara Ravache," he felt it necessary to step forward and deny the whole thing.

I don't know what disappointed me more, the possibility that he might never have really been a drag performer or that, if true, he felt it necessary to deny it. (On Saturday, Santos admitted to dressing as a woman but denied being a drag queen, telling reporters: "No, I was not a drag queen in Brazil, guys. I was young and I had fun at a festival. Sue me for having a life.")

Why, I wondered, did Santos (R-N.Y.) feel so strongly to respond to this particular controversy? What was there about wearing a dress that was somehow more shameful than, say, lying about the Holocaust, or making up stories about 9/11?

On Instagram, a former friend of Santos's, Eula Rochard — a Brazilian drag queen — posted a photograph of herself that sure looks like she's with the young man then known as Anthony. The photo shows him in a lovely red off-the-shoulder sequined dress, brunette wig and a pair of dangly earrings. A second source quoted by Reuters avowed that the young Mr. Santos had, during this same time period, aspired to be Miss Gay Rio de Janeiro.

But the congressman said that the claims were "categorically false" and added that he would not be "distracted nor fazed by this."

Previously, when confronted with a long string of fabrications, from claiming that he was a volleyball star at a college he never attended to his tale about having worked at Goldman Sachs, he never felt it necessary to respond with much more than, "I have my story to tell and it will be told next week." Which he never really got around to doing.

a good thing, some of his actual politics notwithstanding. The more queer people we have in Congress, the more likely it is that our

But an accusation that he once performed in drag — which would put him in the perfectly normal company of Rudy Giuliani — this, apparently, could not stand.

For me, looking upon that photo — in which the person shown, let the record show, looks fantastic — it is impossible not to think of the Chico Marx (not Groucho) line, "Who are you gonna believe, me or your own eyes?"

My disappointment that Santos found it necessary to disavow something that, unlike his lies, should really be no source of shame, went deeper the more I thought about it. There's a trope about "deceit" in the national conversation around transgender people — that we are somehow not what we appear to be, that we are going through the turmoil of transition not to find a sense of hard-won authenticity but instead as part of some kind of imaginary plot to harm the womenfolk.

Santos isn't trans, but it can't be good to have this new element folded into the larger story of the congressman as a liar and a deceiver. It's exactly this trope that has done people like me so much harm.

It also doesn't help that my fellow progressives are finding so much merriment in the Santos drag story. The amusement, on the surface, is about busting him, once again, for his hypocrisy, and if so: fair enough. But there's something deeper and meaner in the laughter, too, I think, as if the one thing that might bring Republicans and Democrats together is their shared disdain for a man in a dress.

It's Republicans, though, who are attempting to turn that disdain into national policy. In a season in which the GOP appears to have no policy agenda besides obstruction, opposition to drag queens appears to be one of the few things that the current Republican Party actually believes in.

Santos was elected last fall as the first non-incumbent gay Republican member of Congress. Which on the surface seemed like a good thing, some of his actual politics notwithstanding. The more queer people we have in Congress, the more likely it is that our voices will be heard. Also, the more gay Republicans who make it to Congress, the more likely that members of the GOP might come to understand that sexual orientation, and gender identity, aren't issues unique to liberals. We're everybody.

In the end, though, there's no such thing as "actual politics notwithstanding." Upon arrival in Congress, Santos seemed inclined to join the House Freedom Caucus. That would be the group of conservative legislators committed to, among other things, rolling back marriage equality and employment protections for LGBTQ Americans. They appear to believe that any suggestion that queer lives can be fulfilling, and normal, and fun is part of some (actually fictional) program of "grooming" children into being gay, or lesbian, or trans.

No one can "turn" a child gay, in the same way that no one can "turn" a child straight. What you can do is "turn" someone from being a close-minded bigot and into someone more accepting of all the many different ways there are of being human.

With the latest twist of his story, George Santos had an opportunity to make people think well of him again. He might have said, "It's true I did drag in my younger days; that was a fun time and I want everyone to know that I support everyone's right to pursue their dreams, whether they are part of my LGBTQ community or part of some other marginalized group still seeking full equality under the law."

He could have said that, and for a single moment, won back a little of the respect he's lost since his election.

But he didn't. Because the crowd he seeks to join has no place in their hearts for anyone who is different. Because the crowd he seeks to join is less interested in legislation than destruction. Because the crowd he seeks to join isn't really all that concerned with whether the things it says are true.

No lie.

Spendaholics put our economy in peril

By Betsy McCaughey

Betsy McCaughey is a former lieutenant governor of New York

Most people don't lie awake at night worried about the national debt. Unfortunately, that includes President Joe Biden and the spendaholic Democrats in Congress.

They should be worried. Frankly, so should you, no matter what your politics. Economics is a science, and numerous studies by world-class economists confirm that when a nation's debt gets too high, it pushes the economy into decline. Inflation soars, jobs become scarcer and mortgage rates to buy a home are unaffordable. Ouch.

The U.S. is heading off that cliff. The national debt is at the highest level since WWII, and is forecast to break that record soon. In 2022, it hit 98% of GDP — everything we all produce going to work every day — and is growing rapidly. The U.S. is in the company of nations such as Mozambique, Bhutan, Angola, Portugal and Greece. We don't want our kids to live in a crumbling economy.

It wasn't always like this. Over the last 50 years, debt to GDP has averaged 46%.

Republicans, who recently won control of the House of Representatives, are withholding the House's approval to raise the debt ceiling — the amount the nation is legally permitted to borrow — until Democrats negotiate a plan to reduce spending and pull the nation back from its dire straits.

Biden, visiting Al Sharpton's National Action Network on Jan. 16, called the House Republicans "fiscally demented." It takes nerve for Biden to call anybody "demented."

Never mind. The Republicans are making a reasonable demand. If Washington's leaders won't rein in government spending, who will?

New York Times columnist Paul Krugman calls the House Republicans' quid pro quo economic terrorism. Nonsense. The real domestic terrorism is Congress' continued spending on borrowed money.

It can only go on so long. Ordinary people who live on credit cards and pay only the monthly minimum can tell you that. Eventually, credit card payments don't pay for any new goods or services, just interest.

That's what our nation faces if it doesn't change course now. Interest expenses will mount, rates will go up and an increasing proportion of tax revenues will be consumed paying interest. The Congressional Budget Office predicts that over the next 10 years, interest expense will triple. In a decade, interest outlays will exceed defense spending. Yikes.

Eventually, if fiscal sanity is not restored, government will have to cut services or impose massive tax hikes, or both.

Worse, as government borrows more, less money is available to make loans to businesses and homebuyers. Jobs dry up and wages decline. The economy spirals downward. It isn't a pretty picture. Ask economists who have examined high-debt countries.

Harvard's Carmen Reinhart and Kenneth Rogoff analyzed 44 countries in their landmark analysis for the American Economic Review. They found that when national debt exceeds 90% of GDP—a benchmark that's already in the U.S.' rearview mirror—the economy falters.

Thirty-six other studies confirm that excessive government borrowing sabotages economic growth. Washington pols need to stop padding their own political fortunes and look at these scientific facts.

Sadly, there is no hope Democrats will agree to spending reforms without pressure from House Republicans withholding the debt ceiling hike.

After all, in December, as a last hurrah before ceding control of the House, Democrats enacted an omnibus spending bill that included 7,200 earmarks — favorite projects of often unnamed legislators bringing pork home to their own district. Earmarks, a symbol of corruption, had been banned for a decade, but in 2021 the Democratic controlled Congress reinstated them in a flourish of political cynicism. Like holding up a middle finger to the unsuspecting public.

The rhetorical attacks on Republicans for delaying a hike in the debt ceiling are mounting. Bloomberg's editors call the Republican strategy "malpractice." Democratic Sen. Chris Van Hollen (Md.) accuses the Republicans of an "extremist agenda."

There is nothing "extremist" about putting the nation on a responsible fiscal plan. Republicans need to stay unified — a formidable challenge — and hold their ground.

The party of unlimited spending and vote buying must be stopped, before the U.S. economy and our standard of living are destroyed.

FDA's vaccine advisers to meet to consider the future of Covid-19 vaccinations

■ Health officials are considering how often we should be vaccinated and against which strains.

WASHINGTON D.C. - A panel of independent experts that advises the US Food and Drug Administration on its vaccine decisions will hold a full day of meetings Thursday to consider what the future of Covid-19 vaccination should look like in the United States.

Currently, the US is offering two types of Covid-19 vaccines. The first shots people get - also called the primary series - contain a single set of instructions that teach the immune system to fight off the original version of the virus, which emerged in 2019.

The problem is that this index strain is no longer circulating. It

So last year, in consultation and the second set teaches the US last year.

People who have had their primary series of shots - nearly 70% of all Americans – were advised to get the new two-strain booster late last year in an effort to upgrade their protection against the latest variants.

Will yearly Covid-19 shots catch on?

But uptake of the new boosters has been slow. Just 15% of the population has gotten one since they were first offered in September.

A separate but related problem is that previously unvaccinated Americans – a group that includes infants and young children who are just reaching the age of eligibility for their Covid-19 shots - are still being immunized against a virus strain that they're not likely to ever encounter.

So the FDA's advisers are expected to vote Thursday on whether the US should be offering just one type of Covid-19 shot for both the primary and booster doses. The committee is also expected to consider how many strains of the virus should be in the shot and how and when those strains should be

The idea is that most people would be urged to get an updated Covid-19 shot once a year, the same way they do for influenza. People who are unlikely to have this month that they had detected an adequate response to a single dose of the vaccine – such as the elderly or those with a weakened immune system – would be advised to get two doses each year, as would the updated Pfizer boosters were people who are getting Covid-19 associated with a higher risk of vaccines for the first time.

Are bivalent shots effective? And safe?

Another big question likely to be considered by the advisory committee is just how well the twostrain shots are working.

Early studies on effectiveness of these new vaccines to vaccination recommendations have been mixed. Some have are warranted at this time. suggested that they offer better protection compared with the original single-strain shots, while others have concluded that the protection is about the same.

CERRITOS - In honor of African American History Month, the Cerritos Library is hosting lectures on the history of African American literary traditions.

"Oral History Is History: Ancient African Foundations of the African American Oral Tradition" with Dr. Alice Nicholas is scheduled for Thursday, February 9 at 6 p.m. in the Skyline Room.

After the United States passed anti-literacy laws in the 1740s, African-Americans relied the oral tradition to share (and create) history. An Africologist and assistant professor for the Department of Africana Studies at California State University, Long Beach, Dr. Nicholas will discuss the continued significance of the African American historical and literary traditions.

On Monday, February 27, Dr. Natalie Sartin, the department chair of Black/Africana Studies at Cerritos College, presents "If You Surrender to the Air, You Could Ride It," delving into the works of author Toni Morrison. The discussion will take place at 6 p.m. in the Skyline Room.

The lecture-discussion examines the African-American literary tradition and characteristics of this tradition in Morrison's novels, most notably "Song of Solomon," "Beloved" and "Sula."

The Cerritos Library is located at 18025 Bloomfield Avenue. For more information, call (562) 916-
