Social services reach out to unhoused during storms, though most decline service

■ The Social Services Center continues to offer resources to unhoused community members during winter storms.

By Vincent Medina Contributor

NORWALK Norwalk continues to offer resources for unhoused community members throughout the winter storms at the Social Services Center.

Levy Sun, the communications director for the city, explained Norwalk's Homeless Operation Prevention and Engagement [HOPE] team continuously reaches out to unhoused people and offers assistance.

However, not every person will accept the resources offered to them.

Approximately 249 people experiencing homelessness were contacted in February, according to the HOPE team. Only 58 people were willing to receive assistance.

As of March 11, approximately unhoused people 59 were contacted, but only 12 would accept the resources they were offered, the communications director said.

"Resources are provided based on their individual needs," Sun said. "Once a person experiencing homelessness accepts help from our HOPE team, they are directed to the Social Services Center to speak with a case worker."

Norwalk is partnered with multiple nonprofit organizations that assist unhoused people such as Kingdom Causes in Bellflower and Whittier First Day.

"If the person experiencing homelessness are referred to an organization that can provide more long term housing, they usually do qualify for the motel voucher from us," Sun said. "We usually give them out as long as we know there's a plan in place. So that way, they can stay somewhere safe until they can transition to something that's more long term.'

The city motel voucher would be valid for a motel in Norwalk, depending on availability. Janice Hahn presented Norwalk with a $90,000 check to update the city's homeless plan.

Since then, Norwalk began construction of the "Veteran Villas at San Antonio Drive," a 60-unit veteran housing project to curb veteran homelessness. It will become the first veteran housing project in the gateway cities region.

Congresswoman Linda Sánchez delivered a $2.2 million check to the Norwalk-La Mirada Unified School District on Tuesday, funding she secured as part of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2023.

The money will be used to build virtual learning environment, providing students in the Career Technical Education (CTE) pathways, Dual Enrollment, and other programs with access to remote educational materials on demand.

"The pandemic showed us just how critically important remote learning is for our students. As we continue to invest in California's education system, we must ensure those tools are available to every student, not just those who can afford them," said Sánchez.

"These funds will be used to expand access to virtual curriculum and resources. I am proud to be here today to deliver this funding, and I will keep fighting to ensure our communities get the resources they need and deserve."

The Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2023 was signed by President Biden in December and included funding community projects that for were requested by residents, organizations, and local partners in the 38th Congressional District, which includes Norwalk.

"On behalf of the Norwalk-La Mirada Unified School District, I'd like to thank Congresswoman Linda Sánchez and our chief technology officer, Tim Scholefield, for their parts in securing this funding as part of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2023," said Norwalk-La Mirada USD Superintendent Dr. John Lopez. "The Norwalk-La Mirada Board of Education's vision is to ensure every student in our district is prepared to succeed in their academic journey toward college and career readiness.

"This grant will have a significant impact on the district's technical education career programs, dual enrollment with community partnerships colleges, and the use of technology to support educational programs."

Sánchez secured a total of $28,428,707 for 15 community projects in her district.

In addition to this project, Congresswoman Sánchez delivered funding for the following community projects (listed in Southern California alphabetical order):

$3,000,000 for the City of Artesia

NORWALK-Avery successful 2023 season for the Norwalk High School Wrestling program came to a close recently with multiple firsts, ending with appearances at the CIF- State Championships for three wrestlers.

It marks the first time in program history that Norwalk has qualified three wrestlers for the finals.AIt's also the first time that Norwalk has qualified any girls for state. Both senior four-time league champ, Zitlali (Lali) Sarmiento and junior Casey Otero represented the Lancers in Bakersfield Friday and Saturday, March 10, 11. The third wrestler is Casey's twin brother, junior Sean Otero.

Norwalk wrestling reflects on successful season

Otero drew a tough first-round match against the No. 5 Seed at the State tournament. He lost his first match and his second match on the second day to a wrestler from Independence HS. "He went 0-2 at state but fought hard as a junior and looks to come back even stronger next year," DeVries said.

Casey Otero (Girls wrestling)

In the 2022 season, Casey was a part of the first group of girls to advance to Masters. She went 0-2 and did not advance to state. "In the off-season she continued to work and improve at wrestling," DeVries said. "She attended wrestling summer camps, continued to work at Norwalk with the team during their summer practices, and participated in LAWA tournaments. She developed into one of our team captains.'

In the 2022-23 season, her overall record was 44-9. She was a Suburban Valley league champ, placed third at CIF and lost a close match to Milojkovic of Palm Desert (State qualifier in '22) to knock Otero into the consolation bracket, but still advancing to Masters, then Otero placed fourth at Masters to become one of the two firstever girls to qualify for state from Norwalk. Masters was a great tournament for Casey individually. She had to battle back to qualify for state, after losing in the second round. She did so by facing two opponents that had beat her earlier in the season, including a Palm Desert girl from CIF. The normally reserved Otero was over-run with emotions with the realization that she had avenged early season losses to tough opponents in order to achieve her goal of qualifying for state," added DeVries.

by attending summer wrestling camps, continuing to log in practice hours with the Norwalk summer team wrestling program, and attend various tournaments," DeVries said. In California, Lali was selected to the LAWA All-Star Freestyle wrestling team and competed at the USA Wrestling Association duals in Fresno last summer. The association duals are comprised of All-Star teams from all the California counties. All her hard work led her to become a team captain.

Her career accomplishments include: Pre-season No. 7 in the CIF Southern Section, team Captain, four-time league champ, Scholar Athlete, two-time CIF placer (5th, 3rd), two-time Masters Qualifier, Masters placer (2nd), State Qualifier and top 12 finish at state.

She had an overall record of 47-5, was a Suburban Valley league champ, placed third at CIF, losing to the eventual state champ of Marina HS, placed second at Masters (again losing only to the eventual state champion from Marina). She became one of the two first-ever girls to qualify for state from Norwalk. Sarmiento was 3-2 at state, losing only to the No. 7 Seed and the No. 4 Seed (both opponents placed at state).

Zepeda A.J provides inspiration

Norwalk qualified six girls and two boys to Masters. Zepeda was asked to help be a practice partner leading up to the Masters tournament.

"One of our male wrestlers, Zitlali "Lali" Sarmiento 220 lb. junior, AJ Zepeda ('23 CIF

Last season Lali advanced qualifier) gave a very inspirational to Masters but went 2-2 and did speech to the Masters qualifiers, not advance to state. "Over the leading up to the CIF Masters off-season she worked hard to tournament," Devries said. "I improve her overall wrestling feel it sums up the culture on the wrestling team.'

> Zepeda said: "'Being here with this group of people this week and seeing the work you all have put in, makes me want to work harder. Knowing that this group was taking training seriously all year and not messing around during practice, makes me want to be more serious during practice. You have made it this far because you wanted it and worked for it. You are reaching your goals because of the work you put in and, I for one, am proud to be a part of it with you."

Bright future for Norwalk Wrestling

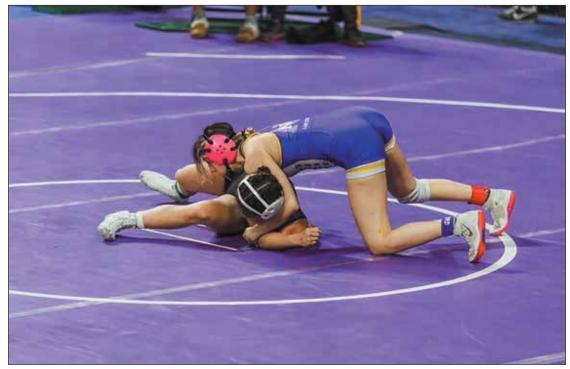

"This is our team at its core," DeVries said. "There will always be negativity surrounding any situation. There will always be disagreements. People will always want to be a part of success or attach themselves to success and if they can't, they will try to break down success through negative comments or undermining those around the program. Every day has a dawn, but the sun shines bright on the future of Norwalk wrestling."

What they said:

Brian DeVries, coach: "I think creating a family atmosphere is important here at Norwalk. I believe that we preach family and I care about you and together we could care about what we are building. I think that my wrestlers have responded positively to that and they go out and work hard.

The accomplishments show that we are able to go from ground zero and be able to go to the highest level. It's a testament to the hours that we put in at practice. I think we are on the cusp of something great.

Banning TikTok is a bad solution to the wrong problem

By Chris Stokel-Walker

Chris Stokel-Walker is a British journalist who writes about technology. He is the author of "TikTok Boom: China's Dynamite App and the Superpower Race for Social Media."

No more glow-ups. No more 10-second viral dances. No more short lessons on how to clean your stove. Banning TikTok would potentially save users a lot of time scrolling through incredibly addictive content.

But a ban would be an entirely un-American, undemocratic and inappropriate response to an unproven risk that the Chinese-owned platform will share users' data with Beijing for nefarious purposes. What's more, banning TikTok would be completely useless in combating a different, much better-evidenced social media pitfall — the spread of dangerous propaganda.

An outright ban of the social media app in the United States is moving closer. Last week, the Biden administration threw its support behind a Senate bill that would give the Commerce Department that power. Cross-party consensus is building around the Restricting the Emergence of Security Threats That Risk Information and Communications Technology, or Restrict, Act. The bill follows moves by more than two dozen states that have banned their employees from using TikTok on official work devices. The federal government has done the same, and there have been similar measures in Europe and Canada.

There's an argument that government workers shouldn't be mindlessly scrolling through social media on their work phones. For some, time spent on TikTok is time spent not working, though, of course, many government organizations use the app as a way to connect with users. But what about the rest of us? The worry is that that TikTok's owner, ByteDance, would hand over data to the Chinese government. Then ranks of analysts in Beijing would use that information, gleaned through exhaustive viewing of our video consumption habits, against us — though it's not clear how.

It's also not clear why this is a worry at all. TikTok's U.S. executives have repeatedly denied that they have been pressed by the Chinese government to share data and say they would refuse to do so if the request ever came. Reporters, including me, have tried for years to prove these executives are not telling the truth but have turned up nothing. Current and former TikTok staff members have dished plenty of dirt on the company to me, but no one has ever confirmed a great data transfer.

Of course, even if ByteDance hasn't handed over data, who's to say it wouldn't in the future? But is that any different for any number of social media companies, many of whom have extensive, valuable operations in China? Meta, the company behind Facebook and Instagram, was recently fined for mishandling user data under European Union rules.

Meanwhile, TikTok is bending over backward to assuage fears. Project Texas involves a U.S. subsidiary that would control U.S. user data and answer directly to the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States, while its European equivalent, Project Clover, would do something similar in Europe.

Neither of these projects is likely to satisfy the knee-jerk, anti-China crowd. And maybe none of this would matter if TikTok were less popular or successful. But the platform now has more than 1 billion active monthly users, including the next generation of scientists, educators and politicians. Aging politicians might not get it. But TikTok has become a valued place for learning and communication, as well as online innovation. Banning it would be exactly the kind of suppression of freedom and censoring of the internet that we have come to expect of China, not the United States.

The other concern is that bad actors, including the Chinese government, could use TikTok to foment their own ideas, lacing funny little videos with pages from Mao Zedong's "Little Red Book." Certainly, the evidence for social media as propaganda tool is much stronger. It already happens. On Facebook. On Instagram. On Twitter. And yes: on TikTok.

This issue is real. But it's hardly unique to TikTok. Indeed, TikTok is doing as much as any platform to deal with this particular problem.

There is certainly more work to be done in the area of influence and misinformation. Despite government inquiries and investigative journalism projects, we still don't fully understand the impact of social media on democratic elections and in promoting division and unrest. This has been one of the biggest societal stories of the past half-dozen years or so. Governments are only just coming to grips with it. But that is not a problem specific to one platform.

A very compelling argument exists for more careful consideration of the role of social media, including TikTok, in our societies more broadly. Banning one platform and ignoring the others would solve nothing, while allowing the deeper problems to fester.

Republicans must get on board with securing our borders

By Lou Di Leonardo

Lou Di Leonardo is a founding member of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE). This column first appeared in Fox News Opinion at www.FoxNews.com.

Department of Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas has repeatedly told Congress that the "border is secure," and the White House continues to insist that this is true. However, facts on the ground demonstrate otherwise.

Almost 2.4 million illegal migrants were apprehended at the U.S. border with Mexico in fiscal year 2022. This is an historic high that doubled the previous record number of apprehensions from 2021.

The new Republican majority in the House of Representatives is promising to address the border crisis with oversight and legislative reforms. A serious step toward that end is the Border Safety and Security Act (H.R. 29) recently introduced by Representative Chip Roy (R-Texas). The bill creates a non-pandemic-related authority for DHS to turn away illegal aliens at the border. DHS would have the option to either detain asylum seekers pending their hearings, return them to the country from which they entered to await their hearings -- as was done under the Remain in Mexico program -- or return them to their home countries.

House leadership should move quickly to get Rep. Roy's bill passed. The longer they wait the worse the border crisis will become as the Biden administration grows more emboldened in its flouting of the letter and intent of existing immigration laws by claiming its discretion to admit illegal immigrants -- or to disguise them as legal by abusing parole authority -- is unlimited.

A handful of House Republicans are standing in the way of getting Rep. Roy's bill passed, arguing that it would totally prevent foreign nationals from making asylum claims.

This is completely false. It would only require DHS to comply with existing law and detain asylum seekers until they have a hearing with an immigration judge. Right now, the Biden administration is using the asylum system as cover to release hundreds of thousands of individuals into the United States who make frivolous or fraudulent asylum claims, in many cases granting them work authorization.

If Rep. Roy's bill clears the House, it will put pressure on the Democrat-controlled Senate to take it up. As Secretary Mayorkas becomes increasingly defiant of Congress and with an eye toward the 2024 election, with voters already heavily favoring Republicans on immigration, will vulnerable Democrats reject a commonsense approach to stemming the border crisis?

There remain other remedies that must be applied. Congress should prohibit migrants who have passed through a safe third country from claiming asylum in the United States. No doubt many who are arriving at our southern border are seeking a better life, and many are hoping to escape poverty or other deplorable conditions back home -- but these are not legal conditions for asylum. Congress must respect and reiterate the original intent of the asylum system to prevent future abuses by the executive branch.

There is no good reason for members of Congress who say they want to stop the flow of illegal immigration into the United States to oppose Rep. Roy's border bill. They should enthusiastically promote and support it.

We can't wait for tragedy to address airline safety

By Lee Moak

Lee Moak is a former Delta Air Lines Boeing 767 pilot and a past president of the Air Line Pilots Association.

Over the past three months, an unusual number of commercial aviation incidents have come close to resulting in tragic accidents. These incidents suggest the need for urgent action.

On Dec. 18, a United Airlines Boeing 777, just seconds into takeoff from the island of Maui, climbed to around 2,220 feet before entering a steep dive and coming within 775 feet of the Pacific Ocean.

On Jan. 11, the nation's airspace came to a standstill for more than two hours after the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) issued the first nationwide ground stop since Sept. 11, 2001, because its method for communicating alerts to pilots, known as NOTAMs, failed.

On Jan. 13, a Delta Air Lines Boeing 737 aborted its takeoff run after an American Airlines Boeing 777 crossed its path from an adjacent taxiway at New York's Kennedy International Airport.

On Jan. 26, the tails of two different Alaska Airlines Boeing 737s struck the ground on takeoff due to weight and balance miscalculations only six minutes apart while departing Seattle.

On Feb. 4, a FedEx Boeing 767 on final approach into Austin came close to colliding with a Southwest Airlines Boeing 737 that had been cleared to takeoff on the same runway.

Normally, the FAA, the National Transportation Safety Board, the pilot and controller unions, and the airlines do not comment on ongoing safety investigations. The accepted process is to wait for any single investigation to be concluded, issue a report on all the factors that contributed to the incident, and then comment on what might be done differently in the future. The recent string of incidents, however, is different. The number, nature and potential tragedy of the results involved are unacceptable and concerning. We cannot wait for our aging and understaffed aviation infrastructure to break, and a tragedy to occur, to demand action.

The FAA plans to hold a special event on Wednesday that will bring together a group of aviation safety leaders and government regulators. It's what's known as a Safety Call to Action; it's focus is on the recent incidents, and the goal is to discuss what went wrong, what worked and what needs to be modified going forward.

But many people in the commercial aviation sector know what has pushed things close to the breaking point: the airlines, regulators, pilots and flight crews, controllers, and safety experts have just come through a massive transformation during the pandemic. After slowing down to unprecedented levels, with tens of thousands of employees furloughed, commercial aviation is now quickly ramping up operations as air travel demand increases faster than most expected. The industry is racing to meet the training requirements required to bring furloughed employees back and certify its new employees on the flight deck, at airline operations and maintenance facilities, and at FAA air traffic control centers and towers.

Safety leadership has been fluid at best. The FAA has been without a permanent administrator for almost a year. The FAA office in charge of aviation safety has had an acting head for a year, as the person previously in that role, Billy Nolen, became acting FAA administrator. Furthermore, Congress has underfunded the FAA for decades, leaving the safety regulator to make do without the technology, tools and staffing needed to upgrade aging systems, physical and digital infrastructure, and keep pace with new technologies.

There is no doubt that each of these aviation entities, in government and industry, always prioritizes safety first and foremost. But talking and acting are not the same.

And the seemingly random incidents of the past three months suggest that the safety systems, which served the nation well enough before and during the pandemic, might not be sufficiently robust for normal operations in 2023 and beyond.

Industry, government and unions must work together to determine how often each of these types of safety incidents happened and where resources are needed to prevent them in the future. Airlines, controllers and pilots need to work closely with government, sharing data, proposing solutions and then executing to enhance aviation safety for all. We cannot assume our commercial aviation system can just pick up where it left off in 2020.

The FAA needs a confirmed administrator. Congress needs to pass an FAA reauthorization bill that prioritizes and funds improvements for the Air Traffic Organization, adds certification resources and makes other identified upgrades to ensure the NOTAM failure never happens again. And lawmakers must hold the FAA accountable for delivering on the safety mandates issued by Congress.

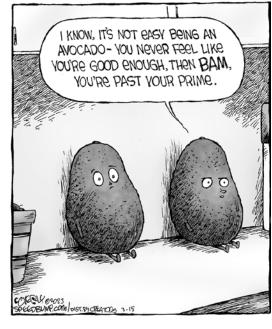

Accidents often occur when accepted best practices are not rigorously applied and followed. They are sometimes averted only at the last moment. But we cannot rely on luck and quick thinking to keep our skies safe.

We are at a critical waypoint in aviation safety. The old ways of doing business are not working. We must reapply ourselves to ensure that these incidents are avoided altogether. All parties must act now and plot a new course to a safer future.

Long Beach vacant lot fee challenged in lawsuit property owner who along with the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association is challenging the constitutionality of a municipal ordinance that charges landowners a monthly fee for letting their property sit vacant says his lot hasn't hurt the property values of others and that the city has made it too costly to develop.

The tax-fighting organization and Frederic Sparrevohn brought the suit last April 8 in Los Angeles Superior Court, seeking a declaration that the ordinance is void "unless and until it is properly noticed, properly substantiated, and properly approved."

Sparrevohn also is seeking a $780 refund of the fee he paid for 2022 under protest. The city has filed a motion to dismiss the suit and the plaintiffs have filed a separate motion seeking a judgment in their favor without the case going to trial.

"In over 20 years of owning (the lot in the 300 block of Ultimo Avenue), no one has suggested to me, formally or informally, that my lots decrease neighboring property values," the 79-year-old Sparrevohn says in court papers filed by his attorneys Friday with Judge Stephen I. Goorvitch.

The city approved the fee in 2017 in the hope it would discourage illegal dumping and blight and encourage property owners to turn their vacant plots into gardens and farms.

Sparrevohn's appeal to the city for relief was denied last March, according to the suit. He says the city has made it too costly for him to develop the property.

"I bought the lot with hopes to build a home for family so that we can afford to stay together," Sparrevohn says. "We have simply been unable to build yet due to the variety of costs, including the high costs

LONGBEACH-ALongBeach by a majority of the affected property owners or by twothirds of the electorate, according to the suit.

> "Having no such approval, the fee is unconstitutional,' according to the suit.

The charge duplicates the municipal code for weed and debris abatement and targets undeveloped property owners with a punitive fee that owners of other parcels do not pay, the suit alleges.

The city has not shown that it requires more work for its code enforcement officers to observe what it categorizes as vacant lots as compared to all other lots under its primary enforcement ordinances, for which it charges nothing, the suit states.

"Without proof presented to the public that monitoring the selected parcels costs an extra $780 per year per parcel, the fee is void," according to the suit.

However, Lisa A. Fall, the city's bureau manager for the Administration and Financial Services Bureau of the Long Beach Development Services Dept., says in her own sworn statement that neglected vacant lots have often become sites for illegal dumping, motor home parking, homeless drug camping, activity, equipment storage and generally unsafe conditions.

"And in fact, plaintiff Sparrevohn's vacant lot ... has contributed to these problems," Fall says.

The vacant lots can cause numerous problems for the neighborhoods surrounding them, disrupt a neighborhood's sense of community, and, contrary to Sparrevohn's assertion, lower neighborhood property values, according to Fall.
