"Mom, I'm going to be dead for two days"

Norwalk High School simulates drunk driving accident

■ Students were cut off from friends and family for two days to emphasize the risks involved with impaired driving.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

NORWALK - Sammy Padilla, a 17-year-old senior, walks across the stage in the Norwalk High School auditorium. With tears in her eyes, she tells her younger sister, Jasmine, that she is "the light of her life." She thanks her father, Raymundo, for all his love and support throughout her life.

Her speech concludes. She walks down the stairs and onto the gym floor.

She returns to her seat, walking past her casket.

Norwalk High School participated in "Every 15 Minutes" last week, a program to spread awareness on the dangers and potential consequences of impaired driving

During the two-day event aimed at the junior and senior classes, nine students were selected to participate in a simulation of an alcohol-related crash, including multiple casualties.

Prior to the "crash," they would be taken out of school by Los Angeles County Sheriff's and a grim reaper, with their obituary read to their class

At the scene, the students referred to as "the living dead" - could be seen either bloodied and strewn across the wreckage, or standing amongst the chaos in ghostly make-up. Real firstresponders from local agencies would arrive at the site, using the jaws of life and other equipment to extract the injured and perform lifesaving procedures.

"The design of the program is to be impactful; it's to bring a level of connection to our students and raise previously seen the program, but it calling someone." wasn't until she took part that the message took hold.

"Before this, looking at some of the assemblies as a watcher in the audience, it was hard to take seriously," said Padilla. "Being able to first-hand experience everything, it changes my perspective a lot. It gave me the opportunity to see what it would be like without me there, without my family, without my friends, and also gave me the opportunity to kind of observe them and how me not being there affected them as well."

Padilla said that she had because of your decision, instead of

The program was a tough pill to swallow for parents as well.

In a video production that was presented to students and parents, Liliana Rivero watched as her son Aiden – thrown through a windshield and draped over the hood of a car in the mock crash - was covered with a sheet.

"In the back of my head, I'm telling myself this is a simulation, but seeing it it's very real," said Rivero. "You hope you're doing a well-enough job as a parent to teach them right from wrong.

awareness to their decision making and the consequences of impaired driving, whether it be alcohol or drugs," said Officer Zachary Salazar, Public Information Officer for CHP Santa Fe Springs

Ultimately, a student would be taken away via ambulance, another declared dead on scene, and one arrested and charged for driving under the influence of alcohol, and vehicular manslaughter.

The living dead spent two days separated from their friends and families, stripped of their cellphones and all contact outside of the other participants. They were held in a hotel, where they participated in team-building activities, and deeper discussions on the subject matter.

Victor Cruz, an 18-year-old senior - played the role of the impaired driver, and was the only student taken to the sheriff's department for processing and booking.

"It's a reality check; it really makes you second-guess where you want to go out with your friends, how you want to do it," said Cruz. "There was something over the program I heard, it was 'I'd rather have that one minute without my friends than a minute without my life."

"It reality checked me because you could be up to 20 [years] to maybe life for injuring someone, just him, hear him talking to his friends

"He was a passenger in this accident, and I tell him, I told him now, 'If you ever find yourself where you're riding with somebody and you see you're uncomfortable because they're drinking or they're drugged, or impaired any other way, call us.' There's no reason to get in a car with anybody at this point; no questions asked, whenever he needs us."

She added "it was hard not having him around," especially when his 6-year-old younger brother began to notice the absence.

"We're so used to listening to on the phone, over their video games, playing with his younger brothers. The house was definitely quiet yesterday, and it's an odd feeling," said Rivero. "The little one is asking for him, we can't really tell the reality of it, what it was.'

Christina Moreau, Assistant Principal at Norwalk High, emphasized the value in the

"I think that if we, as a collective 'we' as a group, if we helped a student or we helped one of our students to make a decision before getting behind the wheel or getting in the car with someone who has been drinking, then this has been worth it," said Moreau.

1927: English author Virginia Woolf published "To the Lighthouse," one of her most successful and accessible experiments in the stream-ofconsciousness style.

1961: Alan Shepard, Jr., made a 15-minute suborbital flight in the Freedom 7 spacecraft, becoming the first U.S. astronaut to travel in space.

1973: Secretariat won the Kentucky Derby en route to capturing the U.S. Triple Crown, which also includes the Preakness Stakes and the Belmont Stakes.

1981: Bobby Sands, an officer of the Irish Republican Army (IRA), died during a hunger strike while in prison.

1986: Cleveland was chosen as the city where the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame would be built.

1994: American teenager Michael P. Fay was caned in Singapore after he pleaded guilty to vandalizing 18 cars over a 10day period.

Cerritos Women win South Coast Conference Track and Field title

 Sophomores Angelina Escobar and Jazzmine Davis win three individual events; Women win nine events, men win four

By John M. Sherrard Contributor

NORWALK – As the sun was setting on the day-long South Coast Conference Track and Field Championships at Cerritos College, there were members of the Cerritos College team singing to Queens' "We are the Champions" on the awards stand.

That they were, as they were actually singing in front of a few members of the defending SCC champion Mt. SAC Women's team.

Last Saturday (April 29) was the second and final day of the SCC Track and Field Championships.

"Having us, honestly, being relieved and excited of our championship win, the song just came naturally," said sophomore heptathlete Jazzmine Davis, of the song.

Davis also said of throws coach

Lloyd Higgins, who passed away and with a heavy sigh. "It's been a tough is dearly missed by the Cerritos track and field community, "I've worked with Higgins a bit with my throws in the multi and he was always uplifting energy and seeing him in the weight room was always quite a spirit to have and not having him here and just knowing that he's looking down on us, I felt honored to win for coach Higgins."

Higgins will be remembered in a gathering later this month at the school.

It was the 14th conference title in school history, and it turned out to be by a semi-wide margin of points. Cerritos, which will be sending 20 athletes to the CCCAA Southern California prelims Friday (May 5) at San Diego Mesa, finished with 307.5 points to 207 for the Mounties. Cerritos last won the title in 2019.

The Falcons came away with nine event winners, which included all four throwing events - javelin (Angela Escobar, 34.05 M), hammer (Faitalia Ah-Fook, 46.25M), discus (Escobar, 41.54M) and shot put (Escobar, 11.19M).

"The energy was there, but I wish Higgins was around," said Escobar, year and I did this for him.

"It (championship) was a big deal, because Mt. SAC won last vear's conference.'

Leading the way with three individual events each was Davis with firsts in the 400 meter hurdles (1:03.39), long jump (5.85 meters) and the Heptathlon (4599 points).

The Falcons won two running events, as sophomore Rionna Wallace finished first in the 100 meters with a time of 12.08.

Wallace also ran a leg of the first-place 4x100 meter relay (45.34) team, along with Davis, Kimora Rogers and Aryianna Faircloth.

Faircloth, who was in four events (4x100, 100M, 200, 4x400) was part of the school record in the 4x100 (45.34) said of the mark, "It's very exciting, because last year I was on the sidelines with a stress fracture. This year we redeemed ourselves.

Other top three Falcon placers were: Faircloth, 2nd (100M) 12.12 and second place in the 200M (24.58); Wallace, 3rd (200M) 24.72 and 2nd (Long Jump) 5.66M; Elena Mack, 2nd (400M) 58.65; Sophie

"This is the first time in a few years that we have hosted the conference finals," said Compton Athletic Director Mercedes Luna, of the annual event. "We were fortunate that Cerritos opened up the doors to allow us to use their facility. We thank them greatly.

"We really have to give credit to all of the teams in the conference that have made a contribution again to help with this two-day event."

On the men's side, Cerritos had four individual conference champions, which led to a secondplace finish in the championships sophomore Micah Norfles (hammer, 50.92M), sophomore Colby Owens (400M, 48.32), freshman Nasser Brown (Discus, 43.29M) and freshman Javone Brown in the decathlon (4626 points), which took place in early April.

Owens also ran in both relay races

Other top three placers for the Falcons were Javone Brown (2nd) in the High Jump (1.85 meters) and Bryce Pearson (3rd) also in the high jump (1.85 meters). Pearson finished right behind Brown in the decathlon with 4359 points.

With a second in the shot put was Daniel Chavez (13.31 meters)

"Our focus is to always compete and try to put ourselves (Men) in position to win a conference championship, but we don't go out of our way to seek a title," said Cerritos Track and Field coach Chris Richardson, who went to Downey High and was a two-time California State Decathlon Champion at Cerritos College. "It's an individual sport, but a team atmosphere."

Cerritos finished with 142 points, while Mt. SAC had 422 for first place.

Norfles, who also finished third in the shot put, is a two-time conference winner in the hammer.

"The funny thing about him is he's one of those guys that wasn't the top in CIF (high school championships) or anything, but he came here and worked his butt off and fell in love with the hammer.

"As for that event, there's nothing that can simulate what it feels like to throw the ball, like other throwing events, with 500 pounds of pressure in that ball and release it. It can travel sometimes 70 miles per hour."

In the So Cal's, the men will send 14 athletes to the championships.

"It's fun when you have a big group going to So Cals," said Richardson, of the 34 athletes that will represent Cerritos. "That's what we've been trying to prepare them for all year. We went to Sacramento and Stanford and that's to get them ready to travel.

"I saw so much maturation in these athletes in the last couple of weeks. They are a little apprehensive and it's new to a lot of them. You just have to just be patient and be ready.'

What they said:

Chris Richardson, Cerritos Track & Field coach: "It's a huge honor (championship) because our conference is probably the toughest in the state when it comes to California Community Colleges. Our program here at Cerritos College is to develop our student athletes and expose them to different events."

Andrea Alvarado, freshman: "I was very anxious and very nervous and training to get this PR (10.50M) in the triple jump. Just to make it to So Cal's.

Rionna Wallace, sophomore: 'It felt good to beat Mt. SAC and they felt like we (Cerritos) didn't have a chance to beat them. It was interesting to see us go out and show them.'

Student newspaper wins award for revamped website

College's Talon Marks newspaper team recently won the best twoyear college news website award at the annual Associated Collegiate Press (ACP) Spring National College Media Conference in San Francisco, capturing the honor for two years in a row.

The event was attended by more than 750 students and faculty from community colleges and universities throughout California.

The Talon Marks team competed with 1,200 community colleges and universities from all over the state.

The Talon Marks team redesigned the entire website layout and overhauled its social media, according to Samuel Chacko, editor- to foster diverse voices in the away valuable lessons on student in-chief of Talon Marks.

spent countless hours thinking of ideas and implementing Sports Center, an idea that no other community college has done. Inputting data including the scores, rosters, players, etc. was a ton of work. Without the tireless work of the staff for the past two years, none of this will be possible. Everyone participated in making this website look great," said Chacko, who is transferring to Cal State Long Beach to pursue a bachelor's degree in journalism this fall.

The $20,000 grant the college

2022 allowed journalism students to attend the conference.

The Cerritos College student journalists' conference experience was featured on GoldenGlobes.com.

"Thanks to funds from the Hollywood Foreign Press Association, we were able to take 16 journalism students to San Francisco to learn from the industry's best -and they took full advantage of the opportunity," said Christian Brown, professor of journalism and mass communications department chair at Cerritos College. "For many of received from the Hollywood them, it was their first time out of Foreign Press Association (HFPA) Southern California, and they took college's journalism program in media laws, digital storytelling skills, and how to get a job once they graduate. ACP was such an amazing networking and learning experience for our students with media professionals on-site to inspire our students to grow as content creators."

> Cerritos College has a longstanding relationship with the HFPA. From 2015 to 2017, the Cerritos College Culinary Arts students assisted with the Golden Globe Awards dinner at the Beverly Hilton for three years in a row.

leadership summit

DOWNEY Southern California Resource Services for Independent Living (SCRS-IL) has opened sign ups for a youth leadership summit to take place this summer.

The summit will take place over seek after graduation. five days, from July 16-21, at Cal Poly Pomona University. It is targeted for high school aged students with disabilities, in an attempt to expose them to the opportunities they could

"Our goal to is to get them to see, 'Hey, this is the life they see in college. You'll be learning stuff, this is how it is," said Tonny Vuong, Youth Transition Coordinator at SCRS-IL. "They're going to experience that, and they're seeing that 'college is a thing I could do after graduating high school."

This is the second year the summit will take place, having been implemented for the first time last year.

Summit attendees will stay on campus in the dorms, while participating in various trainings, including in education, STEM, and self-advocacy. There will also be a college fair, as well as other incentives and surprises.

There is no cost for participants.

"Every day is a full day. Everything is free," said Ignacio Gonzalez, Public Policy manager at SCRS-IL. "From breakfast in the morning, to a late-night activity, to lights out at 10 pm, we have everything set up for fun."

While personal caregivers are allowed if needed, Gonzalez says it will be the first time away from home for many of the students. While that can be difficult for parents, he says that SCRS-IL is "trying to make them independent."

"A lot of times, these kids have been told what to do their whole lives, and this among the first time that they are asked, 'Hey, what's your opinion? What do you think about this?," said Gonzalez. "They've been told what to do, and this time they're taking the lead.

"Even the idea of selfadvocating, we have to explain what self-advocacy means. It means sticking up for yourself in a nice, calm way, but making sure you get what you need to function in life."

"If you went to the summit last vear, from the first day, from Sunday all through Friday, even though it was only five days, you could see their personality changes," added Vuong. "They were very quiet, they didn't want to speak. You see as the days progressed, they got comfortable with each other, they started talking, and at the end of the day you see a totally different person, that they're more outgoing and more confident in themselves.

"Now, you have a group of people with disabilities that think, 'Hey... We're not much different. You can do that, I can do that too.' They are a totally different person, you know?"

We must regulate artificial intellegence. Here's how.

By Lina Khan

Lina Khan is the chair of the Federal Trade Commission.

It's both exciting and unsettling to have a realistic conversation with a computer. Thanks to the rapid advance of generative artificial intelligence, many of us have now experienced this potentially revolutionary technology with vast implications for how people live, work and communicate around the world. The full extent of generative A.I.'s potential is still up for debate, but there's little doubt it will be highly disruptive.

The last time we found ourselves facing such widespread social change wrought by technology was the onset of the Web 2.0 era in the mid-2000s. New, innovative companies like Facebook and Google revolutionized communications and delivered popular services to a fast-growing user base.

Those innovative services, however, came at a steep cost. What we initially conceived of as free services were monetized through extensive surveillance of the people and businesses that used them. The result has been an online economy where access to increasingly essential services is conditioned on the widespread hoarding and sale of our personal data.

These business models drove companies to develop endlessly invasive ways to track us, and the Federal Trade Commission would later find reason to believe that several of these companies had broken the law. Coupled with aggressive strategies to acquire or lock out companies that threatened their position, these tactics solidified the dominance of a handful of companies. What began as a revolutionary set of technologies ended up concentrating enormous private power over key services and locking in business models that come at extraordinary cost to our privacy and security.

The trajectory of the Web 2.0 era was not inevitable — it was instead shaped by a broad range of policy choices. And we now face another moment of choice. As the use of A.I. becomes more widespread, public officials have a responsibility to ensure this hard-learned history doesn't repeat itself.

As companies race to deploy and monetize A.I., the Federal Trade Commission is taking a close look at how we can best achieve our dual mandate to promote fair competition and to protect Americans from unfair or deceptive practices. As these technologies evolve, we are committed to doing our part to uphold America's longstanding tradition of maintaining the open, fair and competitive markets that have underpinned both breakthrough innovations and our nation's economic success — without tolerating business models or practices involving the mass exploitation of their users. Although these tools are novel, they are not exempt from existing rules, and the F.T.C. will vigorously enforce the laws we are charged with administering, even in this new market.

While the technology is moving swiftly, we already can see several risks. The expanding adoption of A.I. risks further locking in the market dominance of large incumbent technology firms. A handful of powerful businesses control the necessary raw materials that start-ups and other companies rely on to develop and deploy A.I. tools. This includes cloud services and computing power, as well as vast stores of data.

Enforcers and regulators must be vigilant. Dominant firms could use their control over these key inputs to exclude or discriminate against downstream rivals, picking winners and losers in ways that further entrench their dominance. Meanwhile, the A.I. tools that firms use to set prices for everything from laundry detergent to bowling lane reservations can facilitate collusive behavior that unfairly inflates prices as well as forms of precisely targeted price discrimination. Enforcers have the dual responsibility of watching out for the dangers posed by new A.I. technologies while promoting the fair competition needed to ensure the market for these technologies develops lawfully. The F.T.C. is well equipped with legal jurisdiction to handle the issues brought to the fore by the rapidly developing A.I. sector, including collusion, monopolization, mergers, price discrimination and unfair methods of competition.

And generative A.I. risks turbocharging fraud. It may not be ready to replace professional writers, but it can already do a vastly better job of crafting a seemingly authentic message than your average con artist — equipping scammers to generate content quickly and cheaply. Chatbots are already being used to generate spear-phishing emails designed to scam people, fake websites and fake consumer reviews —bots are even being instructed to use words or phrases targeted at specific groups and communities. Scammers, for example, can draft highly targeted spear-phishing emails based on individual users' social media posts. Alongside tools that create deep fake videos and voice clones, these technologies can be used to facilitate fraud and extortion on a massive scale.

When enforcing the law's prohibition on deceptive practices, we will look not just at the fly-by-night scammers deploying these tools but also at the upstream firms that are enabling them.

Lastly, these A.I. tools are being trained on huge troves of data in ways that are largely unchecked. Because they may be fed information riddled with errors and bias, these technologies risk automating discrimination — unfairly locking out people from jobs, housing or key services. These tools can also be trained on private emails, chats and sensitive data, ultimately exposing personal details and violating user privacy. Existing laws prohibiting discrimination will apply, as will existing authorities proscribing exploitative collection or use of personal data.

The history of the growth of technology companies two decades ago serves as a cautionary tale for how we should think about the expansion of generative A.I. But history also has lessons for how to handle technological disruption for the benefit of all. Facing antitrust scrutiny in the late 1960s, the computing titan IBM unbundled software from its hardware systems, catalyzing the rise of the American software industry and creating trillions of dollars of growth. Government action required AT&T to open up its patent vault and similarly unleashed decades of innovation and spurred the expansion of countless young firms.

America's longstanding national commitment to fostering fair and open competition has been an essential part of what has made this nation an economic powerhouse and a laboratory of innovation. We once again find ourselves at a key decision point. Can we continue to be the home of world-leading technology without accepting race-to-the-bottom business models and monopolistic control that locks out higher quality products or the next big idea? Yes — if we make the right policy choices.

Why do we obsess over transgender issues?

By Froma Harrop

Froma Harrop is a syndicated columnist who writes about culture, politics and the economy.

From the amount of discussion, you might think that a third of all fifth graders were transgender — that is, they don't identify with the sex they were assigned at birth. Actually, the transgender population is very small. Only 0.6% of Americans — far fewer than one out of every 100 — identify as transgender.

and through. Let's just say it shouldn't matter how he or she identifies or dresses. And whatever pronoun he or she chooses to call him- or herself should probably be up to him or her.

I've known transgender men and women who were fine friends and co-workers. No one is saying that their life is easy. They deserve sensitivity and respect. But there are other things needing our attention. The states that are busy, busy, busy passing laws intended, they claim, to protect the larger society from their tiny transgender community seem unwilling to challenge the rights of lunatics to openly carry weapons of war in Walmart. So whom do we call strange? This would matter more in muscle-dominated sports like wrestling than, say, in volleyball. That's why the administration's proposal wisely rules against absolute bans. Let the schools decide.

It's true that hormone therapy can reduce testosterone levels, responsible for muscle mass, but that's a choice transgender women may or may not make. In general, people born as male have greater body strength — a reality that advocates may sneak around.

The fascination is fueled both by hyperactive LGBTQ advocacy and social conservatives using the "issue" to perhaps avoid tackling matters the broader public really cares about.

As for the news media, the conflict provides colorful imagery and is a lot cheaper to cover than a war. It has been most absurdly magnified by the drama surrounding Zooey Zephyr, a transgender lawmaker in Montana with a bent for exhibitionism. Zephyr was expelled from the state legislature for saying that colleagues who would restrict gender-affirming medical care for transgender kids would have "blood" on their hands.

Considerably more pointed things have undoubtedly been said in those chambers without prompting such radical sanction. But conservative legislators have their own show to put on.

We at home were arguing whether Zephyr was obviously a guy who dressed as a girl — or really a girl almost through

Where might we stand on these questions? Let's start with gender-affirming medical treatments, such as puberty blockers and breast reduction surgery. We should be very very very careful about doing those interventions, particularly at the younger ages.

However, let's defer to the Montana Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics, which called the bill under consideration "an overly broad blanket ban that takes decisions that should be made by families and physicians and puts them in the hands of politicians."

As for whether individuals born as males should be competing in women's sports, the answer should be "it depends." The Biden administration has sensibly proposed letting schools keep transgender students out of sports where they may pose unfair competition to women. .

"The image of 'quote' trans women ruining the integrity of women's sports paints a false picture of life as a trans woman," Zephyr told the House Judiciary Committee. "It incorrectly claims that we have a competitive advantage. And it misses why trans people transition in the first place — which is to lead a happier life."

We call that "changing the subject."

As for whether transgender individuals born with male equipment should be allowed to use women's restrooms, I say, "Who cares." I'm sure I have shared those facilities with crossdressers without my ever realizing it — and often.

In the end, I wish happy lives to transgender, and all other, people. Now let's change the subject.

Bullets of Separation

By Marc Dion

Shoot some more cheerleaders! America isn't free yet!

Yeah. That isn't funny.

It's just that I don't take shooting seriously. Not anymore.

In case you missed the start of the joke, some guy in Texas shot two cheerleaders when one of them tried to get in his car because she thought it was her car. He shot the second cheerleader because he still had bullets left.

In Kansas City, some kid took one in the head when he knocked on the wrong door. A nice lady got shot in New York because she pulled into the wrong driveway, you know, like you do in a strange neighborhood when you think you've driven past the house you're trying to find.

I should be scared, but I'm not.

This is because I practice "bullets of separation," which is the art of soothing yourself by listing the differences between yourself and any shooting victim.

I'm not a cheerleader. Why worry? I don't knock on strange doors, like a CRIMINAL. I can't tell you the last time I turned around in someone else's driveway.

It helps me. Was the victim Black? I'm not. Was she young? I'm not. Chicago? I don't live in Chicago. Poor? I'm not poor. Gay nightclub shooting? I'm not gay. School shooting? I'm not in the third grade, and I don't have children. Shooting in a store? I buy everything online. I try not to leave the house. If you leave the house, you're asking to get shot.

Hell, I'm immortal, at least as far as taking an AR-15 round in the melon.

NOTE TO MY READERS: I said "round" in the last paragraph because no real American man says "bullets." Women say "bullets." Men say "rounds" because we heard it in a movie about bullets.

If a guy gets shot while drinking in a bar in the midsize city where I live, I ask which bar. If it's not a bar I go to, I'm fine. If it is a bar I go to, I ask how late it was, and did the guy have any tattoos or an arrest record. What was he drinking? Bourbon? Yeah? I drink Irish whisky. I have nothing in common with that guy. I'm safe.

Like the Uvalde, Texas, Police Department, I try to stay out of trouble and, if trouble comes my way, I run like hell.

Oh, it's a lonely, pipsqueaking way to live, but I'm alive, and likely to stay that way if I don't go to the grocery store with my wife. She's asking to get shot.

Once cheerleaders get shot, you're tempted to feel that almost everyone is at risk.

This is not true. The cheerleaders traveled from their smaller towns to some sort of cheerleading event.

Who does that? Leaving your town to go to a big city? A place where you have to leave your car in a parking lot, and not parked in your own garage? Nothing good ever happens to you when you leave the town where you live and go to a big city. And why didn't the cheerleaders have their own guns? I guess they thought they were too perky to carry machine guns. It's that kind of thinking that gets you killed.

I'm safe. I live in the town where I live. It's dark, and I'm home, not out looking for trouble at the movies or in a grocery store or at a Wednesday night prayer meeting like some kind of risk-taker.

If you want more tips on how to stay safe, email me. Just don't expect me to meet you in person. That's asking for it.

AI's disqualifications

Dear Editor:

Please don't make us read any more essays written by artificial intelligence.

These are bland, and boring because they sound like Miss Quinn's eighth grade English comp class, with their formulaic insistence on Firstly, Moreover, Additionally, Despite and For These Reasons.

Take the imaginary story about the Carpenters' legacy. A human reporter would have called up least one song that stirs the memories: let's say, "Ticket to Ride," or "Rainy Days and Mondays," or "Goodbye to Love." An inquiring human being would have looked for a quote from Richard for a personal insight into Karen. In short, flesh and blood writers engage the reader when they follow their own curiosity and write the story.

When they programmed the three core elements of AI, namely: 1. Data, 2. Model, and 3. Compute, they left out Emotion, Imagination, and a Sense of Humor.

Don't let it happen here. Lorine Parks

DOWNEY - Jessica Parra went to law school. It is what her parents wanted, but not entirely what she wanted for herself.

So, she sat down and started writing about a girl named Rubi.

In Parra's new and first-ever book "Rubi Ramos's Recipe for Success," title character Rubi tries to navigate many of the complexities and struggles of being a young adult, living up to parental expectations, and self-discovery

"My whole thing with this book, you know, so often when we see BIPOC representations in from Australia, readers from all media that aren't penned by BIPOC creators, the focus is so much on BIPOC pain and trauma So for of parents sacrificing a lot for their example, you know when we get children to have a quote 'better life;' stories about brown people it is so often about immigration, and crossing the border, and things like that," said Parra. "I think those question that I tried to answer with stories are very important as well, including love, college admission, and there is still always a place for young person..."

that stuff, but I wanted to spend [Rubi's] joy and celebration and success for young people."

Parra, 41, said that the book somewhat auto-biographical, taking inspiration from real events and people in and throughout her own life.

"I think I needed to really work on some of my early childhood issues and stuff," said Parra. "Like Rubi, I had parents who, you know, they're immigrants - my mom is from Guatemala, my dad was from Cuba – so, for them the definition of success was going to law school or medical school."

She became a lawyer, satisfying a debt she felt she owed to her parents for their own sacrifices, while suppressing a creative itch that she always had, but did not feel she could act upon.

"I've had readers from India, over the world DMing me how they also feel that struggle, you know, the pressure they feel to pay off that debt. For me, I felt that so much," said Parra. "That was really the core 'Rubi,' is what does that do to a

The book is targeted for a young-adult audience, but Parra says adults may also be able to find it relatable. She hopes that 'Rubi' teaches her readers that they can "make new recipes for their life."

"I could say that I lived some of Rubi's journey in the sense that while she's wanting to pursue baking, it could really just be like a metaphor for anything that anyone wants to pursue," said Parra. "For me, part of it was writing, but also, it was me wanting to do some of the things that I felt I couldn't do until I reached these milestones or whatever to make my parents proud, or make myself proud, or make society proud even.

"I like to think that Ruby just got there a lot quicker, because eventually did end up getting there... If [the book] could just give a kid, or an adult a glimpse into 'maybe I can go for this thing I've always wanted to do and put it on the backburner,' then to me that was like worth those moments of going back and really having to dig into those wounds."

"Rubi Ramos's Recipe for Success" will be released on May 16, and will be available anywhere books are sold.

The hypothesis is that by helping the client manage their psychosis, they'll better manage their diabetes, for example," said Toby Ewing, executive director of MHSOAC. "And so total health care costs actually will go down."

Now that Oriyavong has learned how to recognize her triggers and symptoms, she's on track to graduate high school a semester early. She's thinking about getting a job and attending community college.

"I used to think that people who are schizophrenic, they wouldn't live normal lives, even that people would be scared of them." Oriyavong said. "But actually, they can live just like normal people."

This article was produced by KFF Health News, which publishes California Healthline, an editorially independent service of the California Health Care Foundation.

By Samantha Young

Oriyavong first heard the ringing bells and tapping sounds in her head when she was in middle disorganized speech, and trouble school. Whispering voices and shadowy visions, ones that made her feel superior and special, soon followed.

It wasn't until Oriyavong ran out of her classroom in terror one day that her teachers and parents on Mental Illness, an advocacy realized she needed help they couldn't provide. The shadow people were telling Oriyavong that her classmates were going to hurt her.

"It felt like the hallucinations were my friends, so it didn't feel lonely," said Summer, now a junior at an independent study high school in Sacramento County. "It just felt scary."

The 16-year-old from Rio Linda, a suburb of Sacramento, was the fortunate beneficiary of what her mom described as lifesaving mental health care from an early psychosis program at the University of California-Davis, covered largely by Medi-Cal, California's version of Medicaid. The UC Davis program offers intensive treatment that doctors hope will enable people with severe mental illness to live normal lives – and save taxpayers money costlier, emergency interventions.

Oriyavong is among as many as 2 million people in the United SACRAMENTO — Summer States with schizophrenia, a brain disorder with symptoms that can include delusions, hallucinations, thinking.

Treatment Proved a Lifesaver

More than half of Americans who suffer from schizophrenia or another mental illness didn't get the care they needed in 2021, according to the National Alliance group. Commercial insurance plans are not required to cover the type of specialty care recommended by the National Institute of Mental Health for severe mental illness, and most do not.

Federal law requires states to provide mental health treatment to Medicaid enrollees under 21, and a few places, such as New York and Texas, have statewide programs. In California, the level of care can depend on where you live: Counties are charged with providing specialty care for people with severe mental illness who are enrolled in Medi-Cal. And counties parcel out funding in different ways. (Medi-Cal insurers, which serve roughly 15 million people with low incomes or disabilities, cover treatment for mild to moderate mental health conditions such as anxiety.)

"This care is not available to all that might otherwise be spent on Californians," said Tara Niendam, executive director of UC Davis programs elsewhere."Summer is lucky she was on Medi-Cal and she lived in Sacramento County."

For California Teen, Coverage of Early Psychosis

The UC Davis program costs more than Medi-Cal pays, and Sacramento County taps state and federal grant funding to cover the difference. As of last year, 41% of California counties now have early psychosis programs or were developing them, Niendam said.

During her two-year stint with the UC Davis EDAPT clinic, Oriyavong went through coordinated specialty care for early psychosis, treated by a team of psychiatrists, therapists, educational specialists, and peer and family advocates. She was often at the clinic two to three times a week – more if she was going through a bad stretch, like cutting herself or stealing Benadryl to overdose.

Oriyavong didn't have to pay for any of it, including two stays at mental health hospitals and another at a local intensive care unit. Her mother, Sheri Oriyavong, never had to negotiate coverage. Without Medi-Cal and Sacramento County paying the bills, "it would just be too much," she said.

In most cases, schizophrenia first appears in men during their late teens or early 20s. In women, it often strikes during their 20s > Extending such treatment to the estimated 27,000 Californians expected to develop psychosis each year remains a massive undertaking, with only a tenth as many slots available statewide, Niendam told lawmakers at an Assembly budget hearing in mid-April How much it would cost is unclear, and the state Mental Health Services Oversight and Accountability Commission, MHSOAC, is seeking the go-ahead from the legislature to map out costs and benefits.

Advocates believe taxpayers will save money in the long run by helping patients hold down a job and avoid becoming homeless.

"It would be an investment upfront, but it would be a savings down the road," said Kerry Ahearn, chief executive officer of Aldea Children & Family Services, a nonprofit that provides specialty mental health services in Napa, Solano, and Sonoma counties. "People used to think people with psychosis were one in a million and it's so severe you can't treat it. It's not true."
