Tesla dealership approved by planning commission

■ Tesla is taking over the former Walmart on Imperial Highway.

NORWALK — A Tesla dealership will replace the former Walmart after the Norwalk planning commision approved the plan during their meeting on Wednesday.

Manaraj Bhatia, senior planner, explained the modifications the building will undergo and the impact the renovation will have on the surrounding residential area.

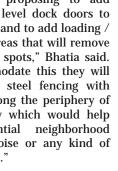

"They're proposing to add three grade level dock doors to the building and to add loading / unloading areas that will remove 336 parking spots," Bhatia said. "To accommodate this they will add tubular steel fencing with winds all along the periphery of the property which would help the residential neighborhood from any noise or any kind of disturbances."

The new facility would also create approximately 120 new jobs in the city.

Christian Hogue, the design and architecture lead at Tesla, expressed his consideration for the surrounding residents. He addressed the concerns of test driving along residential streets and the schedule for deliveries at the Tesla center.

'We're in agreement that all the delivery should be done during the day and deliveries will be done in front of the building out of consideration to the people that are living a few feet away from the building," Hogue said.

History shows Trump will be hard to beat in the Republican primary

By Ross Barkan

Ross Barkan is an author and a contributing writer to The New York Times Magazine.

Ron DeSantis, the 44-year-old governor of Florida, has entered the presidential race, establishing himself as the most formidable Republican rival to Donald Trump.

Mr. Trump, an inveterate liar who tried to overturn the last election, is alienating to a wide swath of voters, and many establishment Republicans have been happy to hunt out alternatives, particularly in Mr. DeSantis. After a rough midterm for Republicans that included the defeat of several Senate candidates endorsed by Mr. Trump, the former president appeared vulnerable.

But since then, it has grown clear that counting him out as the likely Republican presidential nominee is foolhardy. Several factors — among them, the intense support he draws from a sizable chunk of the Republican base and his singular talent for commanding media attention — help explain why Mr. Trump holds a commanding position in the primary. History offers at least one parallel for why it will be so difficult for Mr. DeSantis and other G.O.P. contenders, like Nikki Haley, 51, the Trump administration's ambassador to the United Nations, and Senator Tim Scott, 57, a South Carolinian like Ms. Haley, to take him

There was, more than a half-century ago, another de facto leader of the Republican Party who reeked of failure. Pundits mocked and dismissed him as a has-been. Rivals across the ideological spectrum no longer feared him and cheered on his slide into irrelevancy.

By the end of 1962, few believed there was a future for Richard Nixon, a former vice president. In 1960, he lost one of the closestever presidential races to John F. Kennedy, and members of the liberal Republican establishment, including Dwight Eisenhower, were glad to see him fall.

After losing to Kennedy, Nixon tried to regroup, entering the 1962 California governor's race against the well-liked Democratic incumbent, Pat Brown. Nixon, who had served as a representative and senator from the state, was initially expected to triumph and use the governorship as a steppingstone to the presidency. Instead, Brown swatted Nixon away after the former vice president had to endure a bruising primary battle against a Republican who was popular with the sort of movement conservatives who would, in the coming years, seize control of

On the morning after his loss to Brown, Nixon famously told radicals and filthy-speech advocates" upending California and journalist Howard K. Smith titled a television segment "The Political Obituary of Richard M. Nixon."

In the wake of these humiliations, Nixon's tenuous comeback hinged on persuading both Republican voters, who could find more attractive warriors for their cause, and influential party and media elites that he wasn't completely finished. In 1964, Nixon flirted with running for president but backed away. (Mr. Trump, of course, did not feel chastened for supporting weak and beatable candidates in the midterms last year and instead waited roughly a week to announce another presidential run.)

Nixon decided to support Barry Goldwater, the far-right Arizona senator who lost in a landslide to Lyndon Johnson, the Democratic president. Nixon's attachment to Goldwater won him some plaudits with the base of the party — he was one of the few prominent Republicans to stick with the senator — but didn't help alter the perception that he was a serial loser. To complete his rehabilitation, in the 1966 midterms, he strategically stumped for anti-Johnson Republicans who were poised to ride the white backlash to the Great Society and civil rights programs.

By 1968, Nixon had established himself as a foreign policy maven, having undertaken many world tours in the 1960s, and cast himself as an arch, erudite critic of the Johnson administration.

His period of vulnerability was briefer, but Mr. Trump today, like mid-'60s Nixon, has reasserted himself as a party kingpin. Now he, too, is contending with a popular governor from a large swing state.

In the 1968 G.O.P. primary, Nixon had to outflank three prominent Republican governors — George Romney of Michigan, Nelson Rockefeller of New York and Ronald Reagan of California - who could offer, in the immediate term at least, more allure.

Reagan, who had defeated the formidable Brown in 1966, was older than Nixon but had the swagger and ease of a much younger man, marrying the sort of sunny optimism Nixon could never muster with the raw appeal to a growing reactionary vote that

Just as Mr. DeSantis, with his wars on critical race theory, "woke" Disney and Covid restrictions, is trying to outmaneuver Mr. Trump on the cultural terrain that's always been so vital in Republican primaries, Reagan outshone Nixon with his open disdain for Johnson's landmark civil rights agenda, the burgeoning antiwar movement and the emerging hippie counterculture. He railed against the "small minority of beatniks, the assembled press at the Beverly Hilton Hotel they wouldn't successfully demoralized Brown, who remarked, shellshocked, have him to "kick around anymore." That November, the after Reagan's triumph that "whether we like it or not, the people want separation of the races."

> Nixon rebuffed Reagan and the others in one of the last primaries in which delegates and party insiders, rather than the will of voters, played a significant role in determining the nomination.

> Here the present diverges from history. Nixon was far more introspective, methodical and policy-minded than Trump. He was, by 1968, a significantly stronger general election candidate, winning the most votes — Trump has twice lost the popular vote despite the segregationist George Wallace's third-party bid, which ate into Nixon's support.

> But just as a divided primary field worked to Nixon's advantage, so it may for Mr. Trump, especially if several other candidates become viable. In such a scenario, Mr. Trump may need only pluralities in pivotal early states to take the nomination. His core fan base might be enough. Though Mr. Trump's 2016 campaign was often shambolic, it managed a finely tuned nativist, antifree trade and anti-globalization message that cut through the noise of a chaotic primary season. In Nixonian fashion, Mr. Trump tapped into his party's reactionaries and delighted the grass roots.

> The question is whether Mr. Trump can do it again. One of Nixon's great political strengths was to assume, even at the height of his powers, the position of the aggrieved — to convince a palpable mass of voters that they, and he, were the outsiders. Genuinely self-made, this posture came naturally to Nixon. Mr. Trump, though the son of a millionaire real estate developer, has nevertheless effectively adopted it throughout his political career, once boasting of his love for the "poorly educated."

> Mr. DeSantis enters the fray hoping that Mr. Trump's many flaws, continuing legal troubles and political baggage ultimately render him weaker than he appears today. But looking at the historical parallel, even Reagan, a once-in-a-generation political talent, could not dislodge Nixon. As Mr. DeSantis's Twitter announcement debacle suggests, he will need to quickly, and considerably, improve his standing. Perhaps then, with the help of a Trump implosion, can he hold out hope for 2024 — or even, as Reagan's example suggests, a future presidential run.

> If 1968 is any guide, Mr. Trump will be tough to beat. In a crowded field, among a hungry younger generation of contenders like Mr. DeSantis, he will have to manufacture anew this kind of populism. He might just do it.

China's economic prospects are being underestimated

By Steven Rattner

Steven Rattner was a counselor to the Treasury secretary in the Obama administration.

to an uncharacteristically brilliant blue Beijing sky. The forsythia and cherry trees were in full bloom, and the city was sparkling.

That, for me, proved to be a metaphor for at least part of my weeklong visit this spring. On many levels, China is back. Offices were filled with workers putting in their typically long days. Executives mostly radiated optimism about their businesses. A robust pipeline of exciting start-ups suggested China will continue to be a leader in innovation. And the energy and drive that excited me on my many past visits were abundant.

Yes, China has its share of economic challenges, particularly how much President Xi Jinping remains committed to maintaining the country's progress toward a market economy. Often he seems to put more emphasis on control than on growth. I oversee significant investments in China, and these signals are a cause of concern.

Yet while the Western press displays increasing skepticism, I believe China will continue to prosper. And as our biggest strategic rival, it will continue to use that prosperity to anchor its assertiveness on issues from the South China Sea to spy balloons and unfair trade practices.

extensive lockdowns — China's economic performance has been far superior to our own. From the beginning of 2020 until the end of last year, China's economy grew a cumulative 14 percent after adjusting for inflation, while ours has expanded by less than 6

Growth is projected to reach 5.2 percent this year, compared with 1.6 percent for us. And while we battle an inflation rate stubbornly above 4 percent, China's prices will most likely rise by just 2 percent this year. As a consequence, interest rates remain low, helping encourage investment.

To be sure, China's rebound from Covid has been weaker than many expected. And the country has a significant jobless problem: 20.4 percent of people ages 16 to 24 looking for a job were out of work last month. Much of that stems from an economy that hasn't quite revved up enough to absorb all of the roughly 10 million newly minted college graduates who enter the work force each year.

During my visit, Chinese officials took what felt like special commitment to sound economic policies as well as their openness innocent victim of American power. to foreign investment and regulatory reforms.

I visited with investors and businessmen, the disappearance of the prominent Chinese investment banker Bao Fan came up at almost every meeting, sometimes brought up by us, sometimes — defensively — by our Chinese counterparts. Security in China, always tight, seemed even tighter. I felt more aware of the omnipresent Chinese surveillance, with cameras and facial recognition technology everywhere. Just taking a short train ride required passports to be shown and scanned, both on entry and

More than in the past, Chinese investors and entrepreneurs are carefully noting — and following — every signal from the government and worrying that Mr. Xi might suddenly announce another capricious and unexpected intervention into the private sector. Starting consumer internet platforms has been de-emphasized; investment in new industries such as energy transition and artificial intelligence appears to be the priority.

In at least some of these areas, China has achieved Despite its ham-handed Covid response — particularly the notable success. It controls 77 percent of the world's battery manufacturing capacity, and last year nearly 60 percent of global electric vehicle sales were in China. The country produces more than 80 percent of the world's solar panels, American tariffs notwithstanding.

> As the days passed, the Beijing sky reverted to its more customary slate gray, and so, too, the initial brightness of my mood about the China of 2023 began to dim a bit. Underneath the self-confidence that I had always associated with China, I sensed a measure of uncertainty, largely as a result of the antagonism that many Chinese feel is emanating from Washington, which has led in turn to a feeling of resentment on the part of some Chinese toward the United States.

> As Mr. Xi underscores China's role as an independent superpower, the preferences of Chinese consumers appear to be shifting. In the past, they favored marquee foreign brands, from Nike sneakers to BMW cars. Today, they are moving toward local brands, like Anta sneakers and BYD cars.

My meetings in China are typically dominated by questions pains to be welcoming. At the Davos-like China Development from me and my team. On this trip, our Chinese colleagues often Forum, where American attendance was spotty but European turned the tables at least briefly, asking us what the United business leaders were in abundance, Chinese officials read States was likely to do about issues such as Taiwan and potential On my first trip to China in more than three years, I awoke carefully scripted remarks, unfailingly emphasizing their investment limitations. Some declared that China was a kind of > These subtle differences were largely at the margin; at least Their positivity belied the evident tenseness. As my team and from my interactions, the Chinese business community remains eager for American investment dollars and for continued commerce with us.

> > That said, the trade restrictions imposed by both President Donald Trump and President Biden have had an evident impact. Exports to the United States of items subject to a 25 percent U.S. tariff, from furniture to consumer electronics, are down by more than 20 percent from 2017.

The restrictions on the sale of sensitive advanced technology to China are also taking their toll. Chinese experts acknowledge that the country's march toward the forefront of artificial intelligence will be impeded by the ban on purchasing the most advanced semiconductors.

To its credit, in addition to toughness, the Biden administration is extending an olive branch. In a very thoughtful recent speech, Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen called for "constructive engagement" with China — in effect, trying to achieve a win-

That's an ambitious goal that will be best achieved by getting our own house in order. China has proved it can continue to grow faster than we do. We need to outcompete the country by raising our growth rate through initiatives like addressing our imprudently large budget deficit and our stultifying rules on the building of industrial facilities.

And we should buttress our human capital by increasing STEM graduates so that we can maintain our technological edge and by restructuring our immigration policies to attract talented people from all over the world and keep our most promising foreign students here.

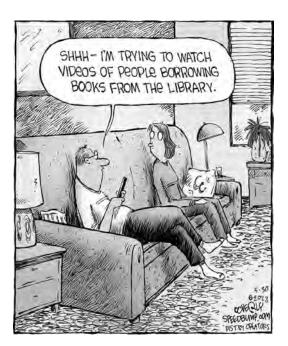

Most important, we should not delude ourselves with the fantasy that China is going to fall under its own weight. The question, for America and its adversary, is whether this rivalry need be destructive or if a more prosperous, cooperative future is still possible.

La Mirada advances to first-ever CIF State playoff game

■ SOFTBALL, BASEBALL PLAYOFF ROUND-UP: Matadores have bright young team for the future.

By John M. Sherrard Contributor

Softball team this year.

In the regular season, the Matadores won their third league title in a row and fifth in the last seven competitive years. COVID shortened the 2020 season.

However, the playoffs were a different story. A quick firstround loss and then with a shortened and injured team, they were soundly defeated in an unexpected appearance in the CIF State Southern California Regional first-round game.

Coming into this season, La Mirada was undefeated with a 35-game league winning streak which ended this season.

Prior to this season, the Matadores had five 20 win and above seasons and had advanced to the second round or quarterfinals four out of the last six seasons.

Their best season since the 2018 season was the next when you're down your first two year with 25 wins and a CIF Quarterfinal appearance.

Needless to say, La Mirada has had some great success since their last season under the .500 mark in 2015.

During this season, they did fall just short of their usual 20-plus win plateau but won 15 by of their last 18 regular-season games, which included a sevengame winning streak.

A quick exit in the CIF-SS playoffs came at the hands of a 6-5, eight-inning loss in the first round to Pacifica of Garden

Believing that the season was over, a few players began their summer regimen of travel ball games shortly after that firstround loss May 4.

Just less than a month (25 days) later, the Matadores are suddenly playing in a CIF State game with a limited roster, against a very tough Torrance team. The final score was Torrance 16, La Mirada 2 in five innings.

With no excuses, but with just a few days of practice with four LA MIRADA – It was a tale key players ineligible due to the of two seasons for the La Mirada CIF end of season rule, a suddenly injured player and another player under the weather, the Matadores entered the unknown - an invitation to their programfirst state playoff game. It was due in part to a few teams above them bowing out of the state competition for various reasons.

> "It was tough," said La Mirada Softball coach Brent Tuttle of the state invite. "We came in knowing we were going to have some key pieces (missing) because of the travel-ball rule. Then over the weekend our starting pitcher (sophomore Montserrat Reyes-Cardenas) had a bad bullpen pitching where she twisted her

"She went out there and gave us two really good innings (1 H, 1 R, 3 Ks) and it wasn't worth it when she told me she started feeling something, so we went to "Q" (Quira Castillo), who actually got sick right before the game. So, pitchers, it's a little tough."

After a 1-2-3 inning by Reyes-Cardenas in the top of the first, La Mirada actually took a quick 2-0 lead on Torrance.

Leadoff batter, sophomore walked, was sacrificed to second sophomore centerfielder Alyssa Avila and came home with the first run on a double to left center by sophomore third baseman Angelyna Conde.

"(Tuesday) we didn't have a full squad," Urbina said. "When we don't have our full team here, it just brings everything down. We just tried to make the best out of our last game.

I think we're going to do good next year. We should have a good little team and make a better run.'

baseman Natalie Craig and a roster. second out, Conde came home with the second run on an infield error by Torrance.

"This season was really good," Conde said. "We have a good group of girls. We're young and shortstop Amanda Urbina are really tight. I'm excited to see what the future holds for this

> That turned out to be the only hit of the game over the final four innings. Torrance cut the lead in half, 2-1, in the second inning and opened up the scoring with seven in the third and eight more in the

> 'We couldn't be more proud of these kids," Tuttle added. "We got deflated out there when they put up that big number in the third inning."

Tuttle went on to talk about

After a walk to senior first the future and his rather young

"The season was great with these young kids with the core group of sophomores and with the juniors and the two seniors," he added. "The expectations were there. We never set out to win a league title, but we always plan to do it, but our ultimate goal is to get in the playoffs.

"These kids are always ready to play at the drop of a dime. They know they can play with anybody. We had a great year and the future looks bright. We try and create good kids both on and off the field."

La Mirada played a tough non-league schedule against some top teams in the country – Los Alamitos, Norco, Pacifica, and so on, but ended up with some good numbers looking toward the Reyes-Cardenas led the staff 3 HR). with a 8-1 record, 113 strikeouts in 73 innings pitched and entered the first playoff game with a 0.67

She ended up with an ERA slightly about one after the 6-5 playoffs loss.

"If she gives me a 1.0 ERA Rd next year, I'd be happy with that," smiled Tuttle.

The top five hitters for La Mirada had some pretty eyepopping numbers.

Urbina led with a .425 average with 34 hits, 26 runs scored and eight home runs. Junior catcher/ infielder Rebecca Eckart finished with .402 average, 33 hits, 17 runs and five HRs and six doubles.

They were followed by Avila (.351, 27 H, 11 R, 24 Sgl.), Craig (.321, 26 H, 13 R, 7 Dbls.) and Conde (.318, 27 H, 13 R, 6 Dbls.,
