Longstanding senior center class provides more than just education

HEALTH WELLNESS

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

Feel free to insert a Popeye joke here; I eat a lot of spinach. I add a large handful of baby spinach to my morning smoothie, and include it when I throw together sandwiches, scrambled eggs, salads, or soups.

When we buy fresh, bunched spinach at the grocery store, it is often savoy spinach, which has wrinkled and curly leaves. Flat spinach, available as baby spinach when harvested earlier, is extremely popular and is often found bagged, canned, or frozen. Baby spinach is the best choice for eating raw.

Spinach is not only low in calories, but has no fat. Look at just a few of the things it does for us:

- Spinach is rich in potassium, which helps to lower blood pressure and reduce the effects of sodium.
- Spinach is a great source of iron, which helps the body make hemoglobin (needed to transport oxygen in the blood), maintain a healthy pregnancy, support the immune system, and aid digestion.
- Spinach is rich in magnesium, which maintains our muscles and nerves, heart rhythm, immune system, and blood pressure.
- Spinach is rich in lutein, an antioxidant shown to help preserve cognitive abilities, and to protect against agerelated eye diseases like macular degeneration and cataracts.
 - Spinach is high in vitamin K, which is essential to bone health and growth. It contains calcium, but note that calcium from dairy sources is more easily utilized.

- Spinach is high in vitamin A, which is used to grow tissue (which includes our largest organ...the skin). Vitamin A supports the skin's immune system, and also helps with hydration, reducing the appearance of fine lines and
- Spinach is rich in fiber, which is important for healthy bowels, processing sugar and controlling diabetes, and more.

What are the potential downsides?

- Because spinach is rich in fiber, when consumed in large quantities it may cause gas, cramping and abdominal
- Those who have had calcium oxalate kidney stones will want to avoid spinach (as well as nuts, peanuts, rhubarb, and wheat bran).
- Those who take one of the older blood thinners, coumadin (warfarin), must be aware that spinach (and other deep green leafy vegetables) can counteract the drug's effectiveness.

If you wish to start your day with a great smoothie, I'll offer my own recipe again: Toss into a blender four ice cubes, a handful of fresh or frozen blueberries, a half banana, a heaping teaspoon of plain Greek yogurt, a heaping teaspoon of peanut butter, a third of a medium size avocado, a splash of any milk (or milk substitute), and my "secret" ingredient: a few chocolate chips. Bon Appétit!

Why do men skip going to the doctor?

Contributed by Kaiser Permanente

For many men, due to cultural or other reasons, they often neglect to schedule annual checkups that are vitally important or postpone seeing a doctor when experiencing health issues because of the belief that "being a man" or masculinity means you should tolerate pain.

Unfortunately, such behavior can lead to serious consequences, as early detection and treatment often are the keys to the cure of many health problems.

With June being "Men's Health Month," it's important for men to understand that good health should never be taken for granted and that seeking help is not a sign of weakness, says Dr. Fred Alamshaw, a family medicine physician with Kaiser Permanente Southern California.

"It's important to know that catching a disease in its early stages can be the difference between life and death," Dr. Alamshaw said.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), 13.2% of men aged 18 and older in the United States were considered to be in fair or poor health in 2021. "One conclusion to this troubling statistic is that many men are inclined to not see a doctor until in the later stages of physical or mental ailments,' said Dr. Alamshaw, who is chief of family medicine at Kaiser Getty Images Permanente Orange County.

A new tool for emergency responders: AI

By Andrew Lara

Andrew Lara is a critical care nurse and mayor pro tem in Pico Rivera.

The majestic mountains and vast sun-kissed coastlines have long made California one of the most attractive destinations for outdoorsmen, tourists, and families looking for a new place to start their lives. However, the California climate has been under attack by a series of intense wildfires, burning thousands of acres of land and costing hundreds of millions in taxpayer dollars. Not only do wildfires wreck communities and cause devastating climate and economic damage, but they also lead to public health

By far the most wildfire-prone state in the nation, accounting for one-third of all burned acres in the country, California is struggling to meet this dynamic challenge and wildfires are only expected to continue increasing in frequency. Wildfires also put millions of citizens at risk of serious health complications, leading to lung damage, stroke, and heart attack.

Wildfires aren't going away any time soon and the resulting damage could be catastrophic and nearly impossible to control. Thankfully, crucial resources to help emergency responders and our public health system mitigate these risks are being developed.

The environmental and economic damage wildfires cause is obvious, as clips of planes and helicopters frantically dropping gallons of water and flame retardant in an attempt to contain the combusting wilderness are common. What's less obvious are the fires' effects which cause lung damage, induce asthma, contribute to chronic pain inflammation, and exacerbate cancer informing the level of care and urgency needed prior to entering risks. These factors put immense pressure on first responders, a hospital or working with a physician expert. In high pressure who are tasked with containing the fires and providing critical medical relief to families in danger.

The danger also extends to first responders, who are subject to the same risks from fires as those they save. As a former mobile intensive care nurse who has worked alongside LA County Emergency Medicine and hand-in-hand with first responders, I know all too well the risks these men and women face.

This is why they should both receive earlier lung cancer screenings - which currently doesn't begin until age 50 - and have access to technology that allows them to quickly and efficiently do their job.

Oregon Health and Science University and Philips have teamed up to prepare emergency responders with a partnership through Biomedical Advanced Research and Development Authority (BARDA). The technology they are developing equips firefighters, paramedics, and emergency medical technicians with artificial intelligence that quickly provides ultrasound images and correctly interprets them within seconds. This is artificial intelligence (AI)-enabled software being developed for a handheld device that emergency responders can transport and utilize as efficiently as a watch or cell phone.

The benefits for emergency responders and our public health apparatus will be transformative, providing EMS the capacity to accurately diagnose lung damage and internal injuries on site, emergencies where quickly and accurately diagnosing injury could be the difference between life or death, this technology makes our emergency responders as prepared as possible to administer life-saving medical care.

However, like all dynamic new initiatives, congressional support will be pivotal to ensuring future innovations realize their full potential for society. This is why I am grateful our state is represented by Congresswoman Anna Eshoo.

Congresswoman Eshoo has had a distinguished career standing up for public health and our state. As former chair and now ranking member of the Energy and Commerce Health Subcommittee, Congresswoman Eshoo has expanded Medicaid, ended surprise medical billing, and shepherded the Affordable Care Act into law. Congresswoman Eshoo has always prioritized public health, and I am confident that she will work with her colleagues on the Energy and Commerce Committee to support critical programs like BARDA.

Many think California is the most beautiful state in the country because of its terrain, but it's the people who truly make it incomparable. More wildfires are coming, and we need to be prepared when they do. My friends and neighbors are at great risk if we don't.

Time to go, Mr. Chief Justice

By Keith Raffel

Keith Raffel has served as the senior counsel to the Senate Intelligence Committee, started an award-winning internet software company and written five novels, which you can check out at keithraffel.com. He currently spends the academic year as a resident scholar at Harvard.

Chief Justice John Roberts has long proclaimed his commitment to the Supreme Court's institutional legitimacy and to interpreting the Constitution based on precedent and nonpartisanship. He's failed. It's time for him to go.

Of course, there's no chance the chief justice is about to be fired. That would require a majority of the House of Representatives to impeach and two-thirds of the Senate to convict on the basis of "high crimes and misdemeanors." And Roberts is no criminal. A couple of friends we have in common tell me he's a good guy. He's just a failure in leading the court.

I started a company in Silicon Valley. When presenting to investors and the board, I told them what my goals and deliverables were. If I fell way short of what was promised, I'd expect to be fired or to quit. Since Roberts can't be fired, he should resign.

When it comes to institutional legitimacy, faith in the Supreme Court has plummeted to its lowest point since Roberts became chief justice in 2005. In an April NPR/PBS NewsHour/ Marist poll, 62% of respondents said they have not very much or no confidence in the court. That number is up from 38% five years

The scent of corruption seems to be wafting through the Supreme Court chambers as well. Justice Clarence Thomas has accepted luxury vacations, lavish gifts, tuition money for his great nephew and free rent for his mother from billionaire in predominantly African American precincts. In 2019, two Harlan Crow. This was despite the fact that Crow's interests as a real estate developer and investor have had business before the court. On top of that, Thomas failed to disclose the earnings of his wife who vigorously supported the false claim that Donald Trump had won the 2020 presidential election. Has Roberts addressed these wounds to the court's reputation? No, not specifically. Has he supported a code of ethics for Supreme Court justices? No, not specifically. He did say earlier this week, "I want to assure people that I'm committed to making certain that we as a court adhere to the highest standards of conduct." But the time has passed for such vague words. Justice Thomas has made him look foolish

In fact, questions about spousal moneymaking have tainted the chief justice himself. Roberts's wife reportedly generated $10.3 million in commissions from law firms over an eight-year period for placing new hires. A Supreme Court spokeswoman said that a judge "need not recuse merely because" their spouse recruited for law firms who had issues before the court. Maybe that's the letter of the law, but it sure looks corrupt and further undermines the court's legitimacy.

At his confirmation hearing, Roberts made a metaphorical promise to "call balls and strikes, and not to pitch or bat." He was promising to be like a baseball umpire who ensures rules are followed but is not a participant in the political game.

In 2013's decision in Shelby County v. Holder, Roberts wrote an opinion that threw out a key section of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Here he did not merely call balls and strikes, he struck out the batter. With four colleagues, he usurped Congress' role by taking on a legislative function. In the five years after the ruling, nearly a thousand polling places were closed, many professors wrote in an American Economic Association paper: 'Although only a few years have elapsed since the Shelby County decision, we are already starting to observe erosions in black Americans' socioeconomic status. ... Our findings suggest that perhaps Chief Justice Roberts should be slightly less optimistic about the state of democratic equality in the South.

The court's judgment in the 2010 Citizens United case allowed unlimited independent campaign spending by corporations and thereby inflated the influence of big money in politics. Over a hundred years ago, Theodore Roosevelt argued, "All contributions by corporations to any political committee or for any political purpose should be forbidden by law." It didn't matter what Roosevelt thought or Congress legislated — Roberts' Supreme Court decided the issue.

In the case of Dobbs v. Jackson, he sided with the majority to overturn the half-century old precedent set down in Roe v. Wade that gave women the right to control their own bodies in the early months of pregnancy.

At his confirmation hearing, Roberts promised, "I will be vigilant to protect the independence and integrity of the Supreme Court, and I will work to ensure that it upholds the rule of law and safeguards those liberties that make this land one of endless possibilities for all Americans."

No, Mr. Chief Justice. You have lost the faith of the American people in the court you lead. You have failed to maintain the court's integrity. You have failed to safeguard American liberties. Three strikes and you're out! Get off the bench.

More is needed than just debt-ceiling deal

By Veronique de Rugy

Veronique de Rugy is the George Gibbs Chair in Political Economy and a senior research fellow at the Mercatus Center at George Mason University.

We have a debt-ceiling deal. It's a relief for most people. This deal avoids a default and the need for the Department of the Treasury to make hard choices over which bills to pay. It gives Republicans the sense that a step was taken toward fiscal responsibility and gives Democrats the sense that they've made an unprecedented sacrifice. Many hope their spending restraint days are over. But a deeper look into headline-grabbing projections of huge savings reveals that nothing could be further from the truth.

Much more needs to be done, and it needs to be done pronto.

Indeed, while we may celebrate the end of another round of debt-ceiling drama, it won't make much of a difference in the long-term trajectory of the U.S. debt. According to the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget, the plan as drafted will bloat the debt to 115% of GDP by 2033, as opposed to 119% before the deal, and reduce the deficit by at least $1 trillion and at most by $2 trillion over 10 years.

While it's not nothing, it's a drop in the current deficit bucket, which the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) projects to be over $20 trillion over the next 10 years, or 7.3% of GDP in 2033. That's almost twice what was projected 10 years down the road at the end of the last financial crisis.

All the above assumes that the CBO's own assumptions —

some of which are nowhere near certain — are correct. Even ignoring the likelihood that politicians will use every gimmick in trends. However, these costs might increase at a faster rate than the deal to spend more, 10-year projections are always unreliable. As such, I expect much more spending and borrowing than is

For one thing, the CBO's projections are based on current law and existing policies. Future policy changes, such as tax reform or changes to entitlement programs, are almost certainly not fully accounted for. If such changes result in more revenue or less spending, the actual outcomes would be better than projected, and vice versa.

In this case, the CBO assumes that some of the provisions in the 2017 Trump tax cuts will expire on schedule, which would reduce deficits. That's unlikely to happen. Republicans' identity is tied to tax cuts while President Joe Biden has pledged not to raise taxes on those making below $400,000. That points to an extension of the tax cut provisions, which would add an estimated $2.5 trillion to the deficit over 10 years ($2.8 trillion counting additional interest payments). Plus, even if taxes did rise, economic growth would slow, reducing revenues and increasing deficits.

Projections obviously don't account for unforeseen events like natural disasters, economic shocks or geopolitical upheavals. Yet such events will occur and significantly impact the economy and government finances — and they always lead to deficits larger than projected. With the war in Ukraine still going on and the threat of conflict in the Taiwan Strait, it isn't hard to see additional unplanned defense spending in our future.

The CBO projects future health care spending based on current anticipated. An aging population and changes in workforce participation can have significant fiscal implications. If the CBO's assumptions about any of these factors are inaccurate, it will reduce the precision of their long-term projections.

But the biggest potentially unaccounted for changes are from two things that readers are painfully familiar with: persistent inflation and rising interest rates.

Right now, the CBO projects that the 3-month treasury bill rate will average around 2.5% over 10 years — 2 percentage points below today's level. In a recent talk at the Peterson Institute, former Treasury Secretary Larry Summers noted that with so much debt and borrowing, and with inflation above 2% likely to persist, a rate of 4% would be a better estimate. Adding just 1% to the interest level would add about 1.3% of GDP in interest payments to the deficit 10 years from now.

Finally, the CBO assumes that inflation will indeed return to its 2% target. This is currently unlikely. What's more, if shortterm investors get spooked by growing government spending and the lack of plans to pay it back, they might also assume more inflation in the near future. That can jack up inflation today, impacting interest rates and the deficit.

Unless we get an unexpected surprise in the other direction something like a miracle economic and productivity boost from the AI revolution — expect deficits to be larger than projected. This means Congress needs to get right back to work that WILLIAM ROBINSON be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250.
