Historical house to make way for new commercial building

■ A new commercial building will replace a historical house in Norwalk after the city planning commission approved the plans.

By Vincent Medina Contributor

Planning Commission approved the construction of a new twostory commercial building at the corner of Norwalk Boulevard and Rosecrans Avenue during a special meeting Wednesday evening.

CNC Worldwide Incorporated, the property owners, also applied for rezoning the parking lot to utilize commercial space. The project will demolish the existing structure at 12217 Rosecrans Ave, across the street from Cesar Chavez Elementary School and Waite Middle School.

Daniel Kim, the project architect, explained that the property owners are doing their best to work with the city and compromise on developing the new building.

"We've been working closely together with the planning department. So, most of the concerns have been resolved and incorporated in our design," Kim

However, residents in the area, such as Ramon Fernandez Silva, raised concerns that the height of the 32-foot-tall structure would violate their privacy.

"For a resident, I say that trees NORWALK - The Norwalk should be planted so my privacy is not infringed upon," Silva said. "I need clarification or I can't say whether I support it or not."

> Kim reassured the commission and residents that measures were taken to maintain privacy. He also said pine trees would be planted along the wall for screening.

"The windows along the property are above the eyeline, so they're only for the lighting and the use of the second-floor offices is limited to the owners only," Kim said. "Those elements have been carefully discussed during the design phase, so neighbors do not have to worry about their privacy.'

Commissioner Kim Apodaca expressed that she favored the project but is sad the existing building will be demolished as it has historical significance to Norwalk.

"It's long and can feel lonely, but Mikel kept himself motivated by having a goal each and every week and did everything he possibly could achieve those goals. But the highlight of the year for Udengwu was the throw he pulled off at the CIF-SS Division 3 Finals on May 13 at Moorpark High School in May.

On his first throw he sent the discus flying 193-0 feet that would eventually give him the title. The throw was 13 feet longer than the second-place throw of 180-08.

"I thought it was a mishap," said Udengwu, of the throw. "My PR (Personal record) was 171' at the 605 League finals.

Nieman also reflected on Udengwu's first year in track and field and his senior year, "When Mikel first stepped into the throw ring, he threw a 70 feet discus," he said. "But because of his work ethic, attention to detail and his ability to understand the fundamentals, he started his senior year throwing 128 feet, 11 inches.

"Every week he would throw five or more feet further with new PR's. By the time we got to the Mt. SAC Relays, he threw a 170 which placed him fourth."

He was first in the prelims and beat the state's number-one ranked Brandon See. He would beat See again for the CIF title and Udengwu was the No. 2-ranked discus thrower in the state.

"I looked to boost his confidence in the sport so that he would return in the following years and build upon himself," said De La Torre of the decision. "He did just that and in his junior year he returned and made amazing

The team started entering invitational meets in his junior year where the athletes could compete on a larger stage.

Udengwu ended up hitting new PR's in the discus (129-11) and shot put (40-11.5). That same year he took first at league finals again in the discus (116-07) and shot put (39-3.5) and was voted field event MVP by the league and qualified to move on to CIF Preliminaries.

After his win in CIF, Udengwu was under the weather, but finished second at the Masters with a toss of 181-10 on his fifth attempt and qualified for state.

With weather still a factor in his state competition, Udengwu advanced to the state finals with a toss of 179-9 and finished 11th (159-7). But he was proud of his attempt and appearance in state.

"It was a blessing," said Udengwu of his state participation. "I never saw myself going that far.

"I felt a lot of pride for making it that far. I felt proud to represent John Glenn at state.'

Mikel's older brother, Edwin, was a star running back and had a record-setting year with 2,000 allpurpose yards. Mikel said of his brother, "I definitely looked up to him," he said. "He did everything right and the foundation that he built, gave me a big jump going into high school."

Edwin Udengwu was a sprinter on the track team and played football at Fullerton College.

"Mikel is a great athlete," Nieman concluded. "He's a hard worker and a great person. He will "Mikel knew he could perform do great things. It was an honor coaching him in Football and Track and Field."

It's time for the United States to get creative with healthcare

By Aaron E. Carroll

Aaron E. Carroll, M.D. is a Distinguished Professor of Pediatrics and Chief Health Officer at Indiana University. He earned an MD from the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine

Despite just experiencing a pandemic in which over one million Americans died, health care reform doesn't seem to be a top political issue in the United States right now. That's a mistake. The American health care system is broken. We are one of the few developed countries that does not have universal coverage. We spend an extraordinary amount on health care, far more than anyone else. And our broad outcomes are middling at best.

When we do pay attention to this issue, our debates are profoundly unproductive. Discussions of reform here in the United States seem to focus on two options: Either we maintain the status quo of what we consider a "private" system, or we move toward a single-payer system like Canada's. That's always been an odd choice to me because true single-payer systems like that one are relatively rare in the world, and Canada performs almost as poorly as we do in many international rankings.

Moreover, no one has a system quite as complicated as ours.

A more productive debate might benefit from looking around the world at other options. Many people resist such arguments, however. They think that our system is somehow part of America's DNA, something that grew from the Constitution or the founding fathers. Others believe that the health care systems in different countries couldn't work here because of our system's

I think those are bad excuses. Our employer-based insurance system is the way it is because of World War II wage freezes and I.R.S. tax policy, not the will of the founders. And much of health care is regulated at the state level, so our size isn't really an outlier. We could change things if we wanted to.

In the first half of the year, I was privileged to visit five other countries and learn about their health care systems. In February I traveled to Britain and France with Indiana University's Kelley School of Business, and more recently, with the Commonwealth Fund and AcademyHealth, to New Zealand, Australia and Singapore.

Australia and New Zealand are two other countries with single-payer systems out there, although their systems differ greatly from that of Canada and from each other's. Unlike our neighbor to the north, they allow private insurance for most care, which can be applied to pay for faster access with more bells and whistles. In addition, Australia's system has fairly high out-of-pocket payments, in the form of deductibles and co-pays.

France's system is close to a single-payer one because almost everyone gets insurance from one of a few collective funds, mostly determined by employment or life situations. They also have out-of-pocket payments and expect most people to pay upfront for outpatient care, to be reimbursed later by insurance. That's something even the United States system doesn't do.

Britain, on the other hand, has no out-of-pocket payments for almost all care. Private insurance is optional, as it is in other countries, to pay for care that may come faster and with more amenities. Relatively few people purchase it, though.

In fact, explicit tiering is a feature, not a bug, of all of these other systems. Those who want more can get more, even in Singapore's public system. But "more" isn't better care; it's

As I've written about before, Singapore has a completely different model. It relies on individuals' personal spending more than almost any other developed country in the world, with insurance only really available for catastrophic coverage, or for access to a private system that, again, relatively few use.

America could learn a thing or two from these other countries. We could take inspiration from them and potentially improve access, quality and cost. However, it's important to frame our examination correctly. Focusing on these countries' differences misses the point. It's what they have in common — and what we lack — that likely explains why they often achieve better outcomes than we do.

Universal coverage matters, not how we get there.

The pandemic should have been an eye-opener in terms of how much work we need to do to repair the cracks in our health care foundation. Unfortunately, we seem to have moved on without enough focus on where we fall short and what we might do about it. It's outrageous that the health care system hasn't been a significant issue in the 2024 presidential race so far.

Even if we did have that national conversation, I fear we'd be arguing about the wrong things. We have spent the last several decades fighting about health insurance coverage. It's what animated the discussions of reform in the 1990s. It's what led to the Affordable Care Act more than a decade ago. It's what we are still arguing about. The only thing we seem able to focus on concerns insurance — who provides it, and who gets it.

No other country I've visited has these debates the way we do. Insurance is really just about moving money around. It's the least important part of the health care system.

Universal coverage matters. What doesn't is how you provide that coverage, whether it's a fully socialized National Health Service, modified single-payer schemes, regulated nonprofit insurance or private health savings accounts. All of the countries I visited have some sort of mechanism that provides everyone coverage in an easily explained and uniform way. That allows them to focus on other, more important aspects of health care.

The U.S. spends more on healthcare than any other country. We need to spend it better.

Only the United States can't decide on a universal coverage scheme, and not only does it leave too many people uninsured and underinsured, it also distracts us from doing anything else. We have all types of coverage schemes, from veteran's affairs to Medicare, the Obamacare exchanges and employer-based health insurance, and when put together they don't work well. They're all too complicated, too inefficient and fail to achieve the goal of universal coverage. Our complexity, and the administrative inefficiency that comes with it, is holding us back.

When I was younger, I was more of a single-payer advocate, until I realized how many systems perform better than Canada's. More recently, I favored the tightly regulated, entirely private insurance system of Switzerland because it performs exceptionally well using a private scheme I thought would be more palatable to many Americans. Today, though, I really don't care how we get to universal coverage.

If we could agree on a simpler scheme — any one of them — we could start to focus on what matters: the delivery of health services

Public delivery systems are essential, but so are private options.

What separates the countries I traveled to from the United States is that they largely depend on public delivery systems. Most people get their hospital care from a government-run facility. However, each country also has a private system that serves as a release valve. If people don't like the public system, they can choose to pay more, either directly or indirectly, through voluntary private health insurance, to get care in a different system.

The care delivered in these public systems is often just as good, in terms of outcomes, as what is delivered in the private system. The same doctors often work in both settings. What is different is the speediness of care and the amenities that come with it. If you choose to get care in a public system, you often have to wait in line. Most often, the wait doesn't lead to worse outcomes, and people accept it because it's much cheaper than paying for private hospital care. Those who don't want to wait, or feel they can't, can pay more to jump the queue.

In fact, explicit tiering is a feature, not a bug, of all of these other systems. Those who want more can get more, even in Singapore's public system. But "more" isn't better care; it's more choice in terms of physicians, private rooms, fancier food and even air conditioning. (While many Americans see the latter as a necessity, most people in Singapore — where it's much hotter — don't agree.)

In the United States, on the other hand, most care is provided by private hospitals, either for-profit or nonprofit. Even nonprofit systems compete for revenue, and they do so by providing more amenity-laden care. This competition for more patient volume leads to higher prices, and while we don't explicitly ration care, we do so indirectly by requiring deductibles and co-pays, forcing many to avoid care because of cost. Our focus on what pays — acute care — also leads us to ignore primary care and prevention to a larger extent.

I'm convinced that the ability to get good, if not great, care in facilities that aren't competing with one another is the main way that other countries obtain great outcomes for much less money. It also allows for more regulation and control to keep a lid on prices.

I'm not arguing it would be easy to expand the number of public hospitals in the United States. It would be politically difficult to expand the government's role in delivering health care, directly or indirectly. But allowing people to choose whether to accept cheaper care delivered by a public system or to pay more for care in a private system might make this much more palatable. By doing so, we could make sure that good care is available to all, even if better care is available to some.

Strong social policies matter.

I have been to Singapore twice now to learn about the country's health care system, and twice I've watched my hosts spend significant time showcasing their public housing apparatus. More than 80 percent of Singaporeans live in public housing, which involves more than one million flats that were built and subsidized by the government. Almost all Singaporeans own their own homes, too, even publicly subsidized ones; only about 10 percent of them rent.

Because of government subsidies, most people spend less

Only the United States can't decide on a universal coverage than 25 percent of their income on housing and can choose between buying new flats at highly subsidized prices or flats dunderinsured, it also distracts us from doing anything else.

This isn't cheap. It's possible, though, because the government is only spending about 5 percent of G.D.P. on health care. This leaves a fair amount available for other social policies, such as housing.

Other social determinants that matter include food security, access to education and even race. As part of New Zealand's reforms, its Public Health Agency, which was established less than a year ago, specifically puts a "greater emphasis on equity and the wider determinants of health such as income, education and housing." It also specifically seeks to address racism in health care, especially that which affects the Maori population.

In Australia I met with Adam Elshaug, a professor in health policy at the Melbourne School of Population and Global Health. When I asked about Australia's rather impressive health outcomes, he said that while "Australia's mortality that is amenable to, or influenced by, the health care system specifically is good, it's not fundamentally better than that seen in peer O.E.C.D. countries, the U.S. excepted. Rather, Australia's public health, social policy and living standards are more responsible for outcomes."

Addressing these issues in the United States would require significant investment, to the tune of hundreds of billions or even trillions of dollars a year. That seems impossible until you remember that we spent more than $4.4 trillion on health care in 2022. We just don't think of social policies like housing, food and education as health care.

Other countries, on the other hand, recognize that these issues are just as important, if not more so, than hospitals, drugs and doctors. Our narrow view too often defines health care as what you get when you're sick, not what you might need to remain well.

When other countries choose to spend less on their health care systems (and it is a choice), they take the money they save and invest it in programs that benefit their citizens by improving social determinants of health. In the United States, conversely, we argue that the much less resourced programs we already have need to be cut further. The recent debt limit compromise reduces discretionary spending and makes it harder for people to access government programs like food stamps. As Mr. Elshaug noted, doing the opposite would lead to better outcomes.

We are already doing what other countries can't.

These other countries' systems are not perfect. They face aging populations, expensive new technologies and often significant wait times — just like ours does. Those problems can make some people quite unhappy, even if they're not more unhealthy.

When I asked experts in each of these countries what might improve the areas where they are deficient (for instance, the N.H.S. has been struggling quite a bit as of late), they all replied the same way: more money. Some of them lack the political will to allocate those funds. Others can't make major investments without drawing from other priorities.

Singapore might, though. With its rapidly aging population, it likely needs to spend more than the around 5 percent of G.D.P. Jeremy Lim, director of the country's Leadership Institute for Global Health Transformation and an expert on its health care system, said that while Singapore will need to spend more, it's very unlikely to go above the 8 percent to 10 percent of G.D.P. that pretty much all developed countries have historically spent.

That is, all of them except the United States. We currently spend about 18 percent of G.D.P. on health care. That's almost $12,000 per American. It's about twice what other countries currently spend.

With that much money, any of these countries could likely solve the issues it faces. But spending substantially more on health care is something they feel they cannot do. We obviously don't have that issue, but it's intolerable that we get so little for what we spend.

We cannot seem to do what other countries think is easy, while we've happily decided to do what other countries think is impossible.

But this is also what gives me hope. We've already decided to spend the money; we just need to spend it better.

Whittier school board selects Josefina Canchola to fill vacant seat

WHITTIER - Whittier Union High School District's Board of Trustees voted to appoint Josefina E. Canchola to serve the remainder of retiring board member Dr. Ralph S. Pacheco's term during a special board meeting on June 10.

Following the announcement of Dr. Pacheco's retirement from the Board, which will be effective July 7, the Board of Trustees unanimously voted in favor of a provisional appointment to fill the Trustee Area 3 seat during a May 9 meeting.

During the special board meeting, the Board of Trustees interviewed six candidates, all of whom reside within the Trustee Area 3 boundaries in the cities of Santa Fe Springs and Norwalk. Canchola, along with Francis Carbajal, Edith Echeverria, Marcos Garcia, Gabriel Jimenez and Dora Sandoval, were interviewed in open session following a public comment

At the conclusion of the interviews, the board deliberated during open session and then voted to appoint a provisional seat to Canchola, who will take the oath of office and begin her tenure on July

"This is more than an honor, to me, it's a responsibility because I'm not only looking at giving back to the local community, but trying to build more opportunities for our local scholars and to create strong connections between families and the school district," Canchola said. "Not only do we want to provide our students with a really amazing academic experience, but we also want to tap into their natural talents and support them in whatever their path will be."

Canchola, who earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in sociology from the University of California,

Canchola also serves as a senior advisor, staff developer and trainer for the Chicano Latino Youth Leadership Project and is the president-elect for the UCR Alumni Association Board of Directors.

"On behalf of the Board of Education, we want to extend sincerest thanks and appreciation for the six candidates who demonstrated tremendous commitment to our students during the entire selection and interview process," Board President Jaime López said. "While we will miss Dr. Pacheco's insight and presence, we are looking forward to this new chapter for the Board and we are excited to begin a strong and productive partnership with Josefina Canchola. She will be an excellent leader for our Whittier

Canchola will serve the remainder of Pacheco's term from July 2023 through the first Friday of December 2024.

Pacheco, who recently served during the April 11 Board meeting, which will bring his service to the District to a close after 32 years. He submitted his formal resignation letter to Los Angeles County Office of Education Superintendent Dr. Debra Duardo on May 8.

"We are delighted to welcome Josefina Canchola as a member of the Board as we continue to pursue our mission 'To Achieve Maintain Excellence," Superintendent Dr. Monica Oviedo said. "She will bring an outstanding perspective and high-level expertise to her role.

LA Archdiocese cites 'dismay and pain' of Dodgers honoring 'Sisters' group

By City News Service

LOS ANGELES - As the Dodgers prepare to host LGBTQ+ Pride Night on Friday -- when they will honor the self-described "queer and trans nuns" group the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence -- Los Angeles Archbishop José Gomez Tuesday said he will dedicate a Mass that day "for healing due to the harm caused by the Dodgers decision to honor a group that intentionally denigrates and profanes the Christian faith."

"Friday, we celebrate the feast of Jesus' Sacred Heart," Gomez said in a statement. "... We will be praying in a special way for our city and country, for an end to prejudice, and for renewed respect for the religious beliefs of all Angelenos and all Americans."

The statement went on to say, "In a message to the faithful, the Archdiocese emphasized the 'disappointment, dismay and pain' caused by the actions of the group against the Christian faith and the Dodgers decision to honor the group even after acknowledging the concerns of the community.

In a statement to City News Service, the Dodgers said, "We do not have comment" on the archdiocese's statements.

The archdiocese's criticisms come three days before the Dodgers will host their LGBTQ+ Pride Night, when, among other events, they will honor the L.A. chapter of the Sisters organization with a Community Hero Award for the group's efforts to promote human rights, diversity and "spiritual enlightenment."

The group's invitation first stirred debate early last month after various Catholic groups and even U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Florida, loudly objected.

Bowing to that pressure, the Dodgers on May 5 withdrew the invitation - - only to reverse course Gomez said he will celebrate a Mass on May 22, following criticism at the Cathedral of Our Lady of the from LGBTQ+ groups and elected officials. On that day, the team archdiocese has also called "on all publicly apologized to the Sisters Catholics and people of goodwill to organization and again invited the group to take part in the Pride Night

The Sisters had earlier issued a statement expressing "deep offense" at being uninvited -- calling the decision a capitulation to "hateful and misleading information from people outside their community."

The group insisted it is a nonprofit organization "annually raises thousands of dollars to distribute to organizations marginalized supporting communities." The Sisters' website describes the organization as "a leading-edge order of queer and trans nuns.

Following their apology, the Dodgers said in a statement that the group's members "have agreed to receive the gratitude of our collective communities for the lifesaving work that they have done tirelessly for decades."

"After much thoughtful feedback from our diverse communities, honest conversations within the Los Angeles Dodgers organization and generous discussions with the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence, the Los Angeles Dodgers would like to offer our sincerest apologies to the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence, members of the LGBTQ+ community and their friends and families," according to a team

" ... In the weeks ahead, we will continue to work with our LGBTQ+ partners to better educate ourselves. find ways to strengthen the ties that bind and use our platform to support all of our fans who make up the diversity of the Dodgers family.'

In his statement Tuesday,

Angels on Friday at 12:10 p.m. The stand together in prayer, following the Dodgers plans to honor the (Sisters) group.'

"The Archdiocese of Los Angeles stands for the Gospel of Jesus Christ, which means we stand against any form of bigotry, hate or sacrilege," the archdiocese's Tuesday statement said. "The Archdiocese calls on Catholics to stand together in prayer. The hurt in our hearts can only be healed by the love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.'

The archdiocese comments come one day after the U.S. Conference of Bishops issued a statement that said, in part, "This year, on June 16 -- the day of the Solemnity of the Sacred Heart of Jesus -- a professional baseball team has shockingly chosen to honor a group whose lewdness and vulgarity in mocking our Lord, His Mother, and consecrated women cannot be overstated. This is not just offensive and painful to Christians everywhere; it is blasphemy."

The bishops' statement also called on Catholics nationwide to join the L.A. Archdiocese in prayer on Friday "by praying the Litany of the Sacred Heart and making an act of reparation -- an act offered to the Lord with the intention of repairing the spiritual damage inflicted by

The invitation was signed by the Most Rev. Timothy P. Broglio of the Archdiocese for the Military Services, USA, and president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, along with New York Cardinal Timothy M. Dolan, and joined by
