NLMUSD OK's student reps from all school levels

■ Every school site in Norwalk-La Mirada Unified School District will be able to elect a student representative to the district board of education.

By Vincent Medina Contributor

NORWALK - The Norwalk La Mirada Unified School District Board of Education voted to amend student board member bylaws to allow representation from each school

As the school board considered amending the board bylaw 9150 for the student representative during their Monday meeting, board member Robert Cancio motioned to allow more student representation.

"[Student board member bylaws] only represent high schools, we're not even getting representation to the middle schools or elementary schools," Cancio said. "So, I think that the only modification that would be appropriate is to allow the student board member to bring their respective colleagues to showcase their respective school

After some discussion, Cancio motioned to allow representation from every school site in the district, including high schools, middle schools and elementary schools.

School board legal counsel, Jacobsen, expressed Rob concern that the elementary school representative would need to understand their position's responsibilities. The student representative would have the powers of any board member to vote and serve on committees.

"If we're saying that we're going to have kindergarteners on committees for the school board, I just want us to see the big picture here," Jacobsen said. "The policy talks about voting, making amendments, serving on committees and attending graduations."

Cancio defended his position, explaining it would help students learn about democracy and encourage them to pursue

"I think that this really offers a teachable moment for our young leaders in their school sites," Cancio said. "It's so exciting when you see the president of an elementary school elected by their peers, speaking about an item they are so passionate about."

However, the board agreed the student representative from elementary schools would be from fifth grade.

The student representatives would also rotate so each school representative could address the board.

The school unanimously passed the motion and determined that it would be revised and presented at a future board meeting for adoption.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

Today's topic may sound like science fiction. Can we include meat (real meat) in our diets without farms and ranches, without killing billions of animals every year, and without contributing (as much) to global

"Cultivated meat" is grown in a laboratory from animal cells. Think of brewing beer, but instead of growing yeast or microbes, animal cells are grown. In this field of tissue engineering, a scientist might perform a biopsy (typically harmless) to harvest tiny pieces of stem cell tissue from an animal; or use cells from a cell bank (cell banks already exist for medication and vaccine development); or use a fertilized egg.

These animal stem cells are placed into a large, clean, and controlled stainless-steel tank. They are bathed in vitamins, sugars, salts, amino acids, and fatty acids. Stem cells multiply and differentiate into muscle, fat and connective tissue. They take perhaps two weeks to grow, and the resulting product can be shaped into a variety of forms. There is theoretically no limit to how much meat can be grown from a single cell. The resulting product has been referred to as cell-cultivated meat, cultured meat, cell-based meat, cell-grown meat, or lab-grown meat.

The first lab-grown meat was developed in 2013 by researchers in the Netherlands. Currently, there are some 150 companies working on products including beef, chicken, pork, lamb, and fish. In June, the U.S. Department of Agriculture approved the sale of lab-grown chicken made by both Upside Foods and by Good Meat. At this time, Singapore and the United States (Singapore came first) are the only countries to have approved cell-based meat for consumer consumption. It can now start to appear in restaurants and grocery stores.

What are some benefits of producing cultivated meat?

- Clearly, there is no need to breed or kill animals.
- Emissions of greenhouse gases such as carbon dioxide and methane are hugely reduced.
- Land isn't necessary for grazing, growing feed, or raising the animals, so clearing of land and forests is

There is far less chance for contamination and variability. Currently, many animals are given high doses of antibiotics, and this can lead to antibiotic resistance. Many are raised with synthetic growth hormones.

By adjusting nutrient profiles to achieve less saturated fat and cholesterol, or more vitamins and healthy fats, nutritional quality and impact on human health are improved.

The negatives?

Due to the current manufacturing process, it's possible that cultivated meat may not provide significant savings in water or energy use, or reduced carbon dioxide

Presently, the process is very expensive, and cultivated meat costs much more than meat from conventional sources.

- Studies are looking into long-term health effects, as well as the nutritional value.
- Does it truly taste like the real thing? I haven't tried it...yet...so I can't contribute my opinion.

Is lab grown meat suitable for vegetarians or vegans? It is indeed still animal meat, regardless of how it is produced. There are many reasons people choose a vegetarian or vegan diet; if it is due to animal welfare reasons, then cultivated meat might be acceptable. Whether this will be considered Kosher is yet to be seen!

It's difficult to predict future trends. It may be years before these products are commonly available, and decades before cell-based meat might replace a substantial portion of the traditional meat industry. A major hurdle will certainly be consumer acceptance. For now, studies show that people prefer plant-based options when considering alternative forms of protein. Of course, very few people have actually

Finally, this new product is, well, weird. I have, however, discussed in past columns that due to climate change, increasing population, etc., our Earth may not be able to support continued animal agriculture. Instead, insects may become a widespread protein source. Call me traditional, but this option sounds far better!

Fentanyl is killing a shocking number of young Americans

By Senators Joni Ernst and Tim Kaine

Sen. Joni Ernst is a Republican from Iowa. Sen. Tim Kaine is a Democrat from Virginia.

Illicit fentanyl that originates abroad is one of the most damaging weapons employed against our homeland, destroying lives and families across our country.

The drug is the leading cause of death for Americans ages 18 to 49, according to a Washington Post analysis. And based on figures released by the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, an average of 195 Americans died every single day in 2021 due to this lethal drug, which is primarily smuggled into the US from Mexico. To put that in perspective, that is about the equivalent of the death total on 9/11 about every 15 days.

Although they are a thousand miles away from the border, Iowa and Virginia – the states we represent – are feeling the impact. Among Iowans under the age of 25, drug overdose deaths have increased 120% in the last five years, according to the Iowa Department of Health. In 2012, there were 50 fentanyl overdose deaths in Virginia, according to the Virginia Department of Health; in 2022, that number skyrocketed, taking the lives of nearly 2,000 people.

The culprit is clear. Mexican transnational criminal organizations are sprawling enterprises that have diversified their illicit activities, which now range from drug smuggling to human smuggling, black market tobacco products and petty retail theft. Cartels' fentanyl trafficking far surpasses the US government's response. We must scale our efforts immediately to combat this national security threat.

To truly end the fentanyl epidemic, the response must be proportionate to the problem. That is going to take a coordinated, whole-of-government approach that begins with prioritizing the issue, followed by strong interagency coordination. That's why we introduced the Disrupt Fentanyl Trafficking Act of 2023 this week to direct more federal attention and coordination to deter the criminal networks responsible for trafficking.

The national security challenge of dismantling the cartels is daunting. US Northern Command estimates drug cartels operate widely in about a third of Mexico's territory, and the International Crisis Group estimates that over 500 armed groups operated in Mexico between 2009 and 2020.

Fentanyl can be churned out quickly and cheaply, with precursor chemicals coming mainly from Chinese companies and the use of pill presses to create individual tablets. Cartels manufacturing fentanyl in Mexico then smuggle this deadly substance across the border into America.

Mexico's leadership has not scaled military and law enforcement to respond, despite thousands of homicides linked to cartel violence in Mexico last year. In fact, the joint effort between the US and Mexico to fight drug trafficking has faced significant challenges since Andrés Manuel López Obrador became president in 2018. López Obrador has refused to acknowledge Mexico's role in the crisis, insisting illegal fentanyl is not produced in the country despite ample evidence to the contrary.

This denial has only exacerbated the situation. Between 2017 and 2021, the number of fentanyl trafficking offenders increased 950%, from 146 to 1,533 in the US. And there is no question as to who is trafficking these illicit drugs to our communities. Over the course of one year, investigators in the US Drug Enforcement Agency's Omaha office linked 26 cases of drug and fentanyl trafficking in five states in our nation's heartland directly to cartels. Curbing fentanyl trafficking and breaking up cartel networks demands an aggressive and clear approach.

As members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, we know the US Department of Defense plays a crucial role in the nation's counter-drug intelligence and monitoring operations, and these operations are meant to provide federal law enforcement with actionable intelligence to further investigations. However, a lack of interagency cooperation has hampered our government's counter-fentanyl efforts. And the ripple effects of failure are being felt in every single state.

To solve this problem, our bipartisan legislation would classify fentanyl trafficking as a national security threat to the US, encouraging the DoD to use resources like training and up-to-date information sharing to support counter-fentanyl efforts more actively, improve coordination efforts between Defense, State, Treasury and federal law enforcement agencies to address this crisis, and direct the Pentagon to develop a fentanyl-specific counterdrug strategy that includes enhanced cooperation with Mexican defense officials.

While recent talks with Mexican officials have been productive, more needs to be done. Mexico and the US need to be active partners in combating criminal organizations and curtailing illicit drug trafficking. Increased coordination between our countries will expand awareness of the problem and ultimately help ensure that cartels can no longer hide from justice. The more we coordinate with Mexico, the more the US can scale counter-cartel operations and build a more credible deterrent.

The DoD has a role to play in curbing the crisis. It's time to put the Pentagon's tools to use and save lives.

To deter China, more must be done to bolster US fleet

By Austin Bay

Donald Rumsfeld got scorched by media rubes for saying: "You go to war with the army you have, not the army you might want or wish to have at a later time."

But he was right, and his instant maxim certainly applied to America's response to 9/11's surprise attacks.

You certainly go to war with your navy as it is, not what it could be in eight to 12 years. Building warships, training naval ship and air crews, modernizing fleet support facilities and maintenance operations: The complex enterprise of creating a war-winning fleet has a very long lead time.

Is a war with China likely? We are in what is now sometimes called the "Davidson window of vulnerability" versus China. In 2021 former Indo-Pacific Combatant Commander Adm. Phil Davidson told the Senate Armed Services Committee China's leaders were "accelerating their ambitions to supplant the U.S." and might attack within the next six years — 2027.

Davidson, the commander who would fight that war, thinks we are not prepared to win a war with China in the western Pacific.

Sen. Roger Wicker, R-Miss., has served on the Armed Services committee for several years. Credit Wicker with seeing China's naval forces expand while the U.S. Navy shrinks. In 2017 he tried to kick-start naval and commercial shipbuilding with an act to expand American maritime industrial capacity.

On May 3, Wicker gave a Senate speech that begins with a blunt warning: "I come before the Senate today to discuss the United States Navy's ability to deter conflict in the Pacific. As China's navy has grown, ours has shrunk — and we are running out of time to tilt the balance of power back toward the United States and to ensure that deterrence does not fail in the Western Pacific."

Deterrence. Scipio Africanus, the Roman general who defeated Hannibal, put it this way: "If you want peace, prepare for war." War in the western Pacific would be a naval war. Wicker believes U.S. forces can no longer demonstrate the overwhelming military strength and preparedness it takes to convince Chinese leaders that they would lose a war with America.

More from Wicker's speech: "China's rising strength on the seas is a direct threat to international peace and security. Their ability to control the major sea lanes strikes at the heart of free and market-based economies in Asia and across the globe. For a few minutes today, I will outline that threat, our lack of preparedness, and what it will take for us to deter China from acting irresponsibly." Wicker quoted U.S. naval theorist Alfred Thayer Mahan: "Whoever rules the waves rules the world." Then added "Beijing knows a great navy is a necessary step in their march for regional dominance."

The senator describes a war for national survival. In late 1992 I was serving as a strategic wargaming consultant in the Secretary of Defense's Office of Net Assessments. Net Assessments director, the great Andrew Marshall, gave his consultants a long-term thought experiment: How could the U.S. fight and win a war for national survival against China circa 2020 or 2025?

We've thought a lot and done much — but haven't done enough. The "hull deficit" — the shortage of warships and support vessels — is real. Wicker pointed out that in 2030 China will have a fleet of 440 warships. The U.S. Navy? Perhaps 290.

Wicker got into the nitty specifics of modern naval warfare, such as the number of missile-carrying vertical launch systems (VLS, also called vertical launch cells) China's ships will carry. These launchers "are the primary offensive tool of any navy. A recent analysis found Beijing has more vertical launch cells than the U.S. and our allies combined."

Wicker then excoriated the Biden administration's shipbuilding program as being inadequate and "ceding control of the western Pacific to the dictator, Xi Jinping, and his communist fleet."

Harsh words but the facts and Chinese aggressive behavior warrant them.

Downey teen overcomes homelessness to earn full-ride college scholarship

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

■ The city planning commission approved plans for an industrial warehouse.

year of unexpected tribulation and hardship, recent Downey High School Graduate Armando Ramirez has been awarded the Minute Man Scholarship.

The Minuteman Scholarship is a U.S. Army Cadet Command initiative to offer Guaranteed Reserve Forces Duty (GRFD) scholarships to candidates who self-select for service in the reserve component, providing full tuition and fees for up to four years at a public or private school.

Ramirez will pursue accounting and finance at Loyola Marymount University on a full-ride worth over $250,000, and will participate in Reserve Officers' Training Corp (ROTC) at UCLA. Upon graduation, he will serve as an officer in the United States Army with no college debt.

Eventually, he wants to pursue a master's degree.

It was not an easy road for Ramirez to get to this point, however, as he was forced to endure tragedy and resulting hardship at the start of the school year.

"In August, my grandfather all that. Work, you just had to fit passed away, and he was the sole it in." provider for my family here in Downey," said Ramirez. "Once he passed away, it was kind of the domino effect: Okay, there goes the house. Then my mom and my little brother, they ended up moving to Texas leaving myself and my older brother here, so we were kind of like, 'We need to make this work, we need to find a place to go.'

Ramirez says that going to Texas with his mom and his 13-year-old younger brother was not an option.

"I couldn't move. Before Downey High School I was moving every year," said Ramirez. "Downey was going to be my first school where I finally put my foot down and I said, 'I'm not leaving.' No matter what, I'm going to just be here, and I'm going to make it possible for me to stay at a school for the whole Staying with his brother wasn't likely either.

"When you have two in the package, it's a lot harder to ask for a room," said Ramirez. "We kind of just understood that, 'Hey, you're going to do your thing, I'm going to do my thing, but we've always got each other's back."

Ramirez was able to stay afloat surviving on money he had saved from a summer job doing groundskeeping and irrigation around Downey Unified School District, all while couch-surfing between "four or five places' between Norwalk, Downey, Lynwood, and South Gate.

He continued to pick up other work where he could, when Downey High School Principal Tom Houts – who had helped Ramirez get his first summer job - checked in with a new opportunity at Robert F Jacobs Law Office.

doing legal assistant work," said Ramirez. "The law firm specializes in immigration and criminal law, so I hear a lot of stories of immigrants coming to America and trying to obtain their Visa.

"I take the steps that are DOWNEY - Following a needed to legally process them into America. It's very much a fulfilling job, when you complete a whole client's story, and you do all the application process for them, and you see them be able to reap the rewards, it kind of fulfills you as a person. Like, okay, what I'm doing is actually making a big difference in a lot of people's lives."

> Ramirez spent most of his time after school at work.

"I was working that every single day of the year basically,' said Ramirez. "When I got that job, the moment I'd get off of school, I'd be staying there for however late I possibly could until they said, 'Alright, we gotta close it up.'

The law office wasn't open on weekends though, and Ramirez still needed to make as much money as he could.

So, he picked up yet another job, this time trucking out of a port in El Monte.

school, get all your stuff done as much as possible," said Ramirez. "Social life was barely there, but I mean whenever you see someone, just say hi, be polite,

"Eventually, when you work so much, it eventually just becomes second nature to not think about time, but just think about the things that I gotta get done, and then you can fall asleep, or then you can eat."

Ramirez says that "time is always there, you just got to use

"You gotta be willing to sacrifice some things to be able to accomplish the things that you need to accomplish," said

Still, the wear and tear of his work-heavy life took a toll, which he recorded some of the highest Houts took notice of.

"He pulled me in one day He basically can choose any because he started noticing first of 150 different careers paths period I'd be coming late pretty often, and he's like, 'Hey man, what's up? Some of your grades are slipping.' I was like, 'I'm just tired. I'm exhausted.' I felt beat, but I'm trying to show up every "He helped me out here in school, fixed my schedule around to allow me more time to breathe and work if I needed to work and get extra hours.

Houts even hooked him back up with his old groundskeeping

And if this wasn't enough, Ramirez did this while balancing high level and AP classes, while also being an active member of the student body, participating in Key Club, ASB, and football.

"It was definitely a challenge, but I look back now and it's just like, 'Wow, at least I got through it," said Ramirez. "It was really cool to feel that, especially graduating and knowing, wow, I for sure did this."

The scholarship is being awarded to Ramirez by Civilian Aide to Secretary of the Army (CASA) Mario Ğuerra. Guerra now, I'm just has given 15 scholarships since shelter from SEAACA's service This enhanced program will help kitten population," said Denise

"For me, it was just during being appointed CASA five years available to him. He chose to really think about it twice; it's ago, but never to a student in his study finance.' hometown of Downey.

> Guerra said he has "been looking forward to this day.'

"After facing the tragic loss of his grandfather, who was his caretaker, this exceptional young man was faced with the challenge of finding a stable living situation. However, the Downey community rallied together, embracing him with open arms and providing unwavering support, ensuring that he could complete his senior year of high school just as he had started it: as an outstanding student, athlete, and all-around remarkable individual. He took honors classes and excelled with an amazing GPA. He even worked three jobs during his senior year," said Guerra. "Before being sworn in last week testing available in our Army.

"Congratulations to him and our DUSD family who embraced this young man and nurtured his great potential. The leadership at DUSD and Downey High are to be commended.

"This is a great story of perseverance combined with attitude, effort, and opportunity. And what a small helping hand can mean to a special young man. Armando clearly deserves this scholarship and I look forward to seeing the many great things he will accomplish in the future. And I couldn't be prouder to be part of the journey for such an outstanding young man."

The Army wasn't necessarily on Ramirez's radar, however he's happy to do what needs to be done to set him up in the best else in my life. It's like, I don't just the next thing I've got to do, okay let's knock it out," said Ramirez. "What's it going to give to work a lot, being stressed me in return? I'm never going to do something that's not going to eventually benefit me, you know what I mean?

"When it comes to school, work, anything like that, if you're investing your time for so long into something, you want to make sure it gives you something

Despite all he's bene through, Ramirez continues on with a smile. He says it's "the best way to go about life."

"I've always been a positive person. I love positivity. I love to radiate positive energy, and surround myself with positive energy," said Ramirez. "I feel like if you're not enjoying your life, all the problems are going and it wasn't for these people, I to seem a lot more apparent. wouldn't be in the position I am Things start to seem like they're right now." "It's kind of like everything worse than what they are.

"Even going through all this couch-surfing stuff, and homeless, and you know, having out from school, it's just, when you're in a happy moment, enjoy it, because you don't know when the next time you're going to get a happy moment is.'

He expressed thankfulness to Downey High School.

"I always say thank you to [Mr. Houts] because this man made a lot happen for me, and I truly accredit that to Downey High School, Mr. Houts, and the whole staff and organization, they were always looking out for me," said Ramirez. "Downey High School is a really, really good high school and I never would have wanted to change my path before...

"If it wasn't for this school,
