Rios elected Norwalk mayor

NORWALK - Margarita Rios was elected by her city council colleagues Tuesday to serve as Norwalk mayor in 2024. It will be her second stint as mayor.

Tony Ayala was chosen as vice mayor.

Rios was first elected to the Norwalk City Council in 2017, becoming the first Latina to serve on the council since 1992. She served as vice mayor in 2018 and was elevated to mayor in 2019.

Rios has been a Norwalk resident since 1989. Her early education included Edmondson Elementary and Waite Middle Schools. She attended Cerritos College, earning her Associate's Degree before transferring to California State University, Long Beach. She graduated in 1997 with a Bachelor of Science in Criminal Justice and minor in Psychology.

Rios pursued a law enforcement career. During her two decades of law enforcement experience, her assignments included criminal investigations, background investigator, and school resource officer.

During her first tenure as mayor, Norwalk experienced one of the lowest crime rates. She was instrumental in receiving funding for the Holifield Park playground and the Hermosillo Park plan. Rios also initiated a Business Watch program, and increased revenue to the city's general fund by implementing U.S. Passport services to the public.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

You are suffering from cough, body aches, headaches, and a mild fever. Do you have RSV, COVID, a common cold, or the flu? The answer is...it's difficult to say! Welcome to my world; all of these diseases can look remarkably similar, and are quite common at this time of the year. We will touch on each here, but with flu season now upon us, let's focus on that.

Flu season peaks between December and February. It's caused by a variety of viruses that are transmitted through droplets of moisture when we cough, sneeze, or even just speak. We can be contagious before symptoms appear, and for seven days after. Flu viruses can settle and accumulate on door handles, kitchen surfaces, telephones, remote controls, etc. Note that COVID viruses are far less likely to be transmitted through surface contact.

Flu symptoms include cough, sore throat, headache, muscle aches and pain, runny and stuffy nose, fatigue, and fever. The flu typically lasts for five to seven days, but in the very young, old, or weakened, it can lead to significant complications, including pneumonia. RSV and COVID typically last longer, for up to two weeks, with similar symptoms. COVID may also lead to nausea and vomiting, diarrhea, and loss of taste or smell. The common cold, on the other hand, is typically mild, lasting under a week, with symptoms which include cough, sore throat, runny nose, fatigue, fevers, and watery eyes throat, runny nose, fatigue, fevers, and watery eyes.

A nose or throat swab can usually diagnose flu, COVID, and RSV. However, in the peak of flu season, your doctor will likely treat flu if the symptoms fit, unless there is a different diagnosis.

Treatment for the flu (and for all of these viruses) will usually involve nothing more than plenty of fluids, rest, and acetaminophen or ibuprofen. Signs of a more serious flu include difficulty breathing; persistent pain "These hospitals have or pressure in the chest; persistent dizziness, confusion, or inability to arouse; severe weakness; or a fever that does not go away. Prescription antiviral medication (like Tamiflu or Relenza) is available, and of course, a severe case requires hospitalization.

> The best approach to avoiding viruses is prevention. Vaccines are available for flu, COVID, and RSV. Clean surfaces before touching them, and carefully wash your hands before touching your face. If you are around many people, assume that some of them are carrying various viruses, and feel free to wear a mask.

At this time of the year in particular, we look forward to spending time with family and friends. However, if you demonstrate signs of contagious disease, you MUST stay home for everybody's protection, and remain home until any fever has been gone (without use of medication) for 24 hours. If you must leave home, I urge you to wear a face mask and to wash your hands often.

It's time to cancel the Jeep Cherokee

The Jeep Cherokee brand and its related marketing is tone deaf in today's context.

By Gary D. Rhodes

Gary D. Rhodes, a citizen of the Cherokee Nation, is a professor of media at Oklahoma Baptist University.

It has been nearly a half-century since the Jeep Cherokee, a military-turned-consumer vehicle, was introduced to the market, stealing my people's name. Indigenous Americans remain branded, commercially and financially, in a way no other people are. It's time for that to end.

The American Motors Corporation began manufacturing the SJ Cherokee in 1974. Even as the company itself has been repeatedly bought and sold, its owners — currently Stellantis — have held fast to the Cherokee brand, with the word brand having particularly insidious meaning in this context. Stellantis is a multinational automobile manufacturer based in the Netherlands. The Netherlands is a highly developed country, but Stellantis, apparently, is not a highly developed company, at least not when it comes to racism.

Some have claimed that the Jeep Cherokee is a tribute to my people. Quick history lesson: In the 19th century, the U.S. military forced my people onto the Trail of Tears — an involuntary displacement of Indigenous tribes from their homes in the Southeast to land in the West. Jeep began as a U.S. manufacturer of military vehicles during World War II before it started to produce consumer vehicles in the mid-1940s. One of the earlier Jeep Cherokee commercials featured military-style music. In the ad, an Army Jeep drives up beside the Cherokee, a drill sergeant's voice shouting questions at the consumer vehicle. All that's missing is the cavalry.

Sculptor James Earle Fraser's famous 1918 statue, "End of the Trail," commemorated the conclusion of forced removal. But for Jeep Cherokee, the trail continues. Television commercials for the vehicle broadcast as recently as 2011 have depicted the U.S. military. And two Jeep Cherokee commercials from 2004 proclaim the vehicle to be "trail rated." This might be because of simple incompetence, but there are times when the line between incompetence and evil is blurred, if not porous.

I asked Stellantis for an interview on these matters. They accepted my questions, but then refused to answer. Among my questions was whether Stellantis has ever donated to any Cherokee cause, after making millions of dollars by stealing our name. No answer presumably Stellantis claims to be in touch with Cherokees on this issue. But that is, at best, an overstatement. It has spoken to the Cherokee Nation's elected principal chief, but he no more speaks for all of us than President Biden speaks for all Americans. Moreover, there are three federally recognized Cherokee tribes, but there's no record of Stellantis ever speaking to the other two.

As recently as 2021, Stellantis approved a particularly horrible tagline for the Jeep Cherokee: "Wildly civilized." The tone deafness of that language is staggering in today's context. It speaks clearly to the idea of the Cherokees' "salvation" at the hands of White settlers who could civilize us.

Crucially, the phrase possesses particular resonance with regard to the Cherokee, as White settlers in the 18th century designated us one of the "Five Civilized Tribes." That term became commonly used during the 19th and 20th centuries to identify those tribes that had adopted some aspects of White settler culture in lieu of warfare and clearly suggests that we were "uncivilized" before coming under the influence of Anglo-Saxons.

"Wildly civilized" — wild before contact with Whites, civilized after. Most people today believe this terminology to be outdated, even racist. Imagine replacing the second word in "Jeep Cherokee" with the name of any other ethnic group. That would be obviously racist, of course. But Stellantis apparently doesn't see it that way.

During the 20th century, Americans could use a handful of "Indian head" pennies to purchase a Big Chief writing tablet, or buffalo nickels, featuring a Native American on the obverse, to buy a pouch of Red Man tobacco. As of last year, Red Man tobacco is no more. Gone, too, is the Washington Redskins football team name. Enlightenment — with an assist from public pressure — shed its glow on the owners of those enterprises.

The darkness of the past cannot be changed, but the darkness of the present can and should be. Enlightenment has not yet come to Stellantis. But it will. We Cherokee are a patient people. And progress will win out, however slowly.

The fires of greed and wrong are extinguished eventually by the waters of all that is right.

One way we can bring gun violence under control

Researchers in Chicago have discovered an effective way to curb gun violence.

By Andrew V. Papachristos

Andrew V. Papachristos is the John G. Searle professor of sociology, director of the Institute for Policy Research and faculty director of the Center for Neighborhood Engaged Research & Science at Northwestern University.

Over the past decade, excluding accidents and suicides, more than 300,000 Americans have been shot, and nearly half of them have died. Millions more have suffered trauma, either as witnesses to shootings or as friends and family members of victims. By every measure, the physical, financial and emotional toll of gun violence in our society is staggering.

But recent research has uncovered very real hope that getting gun violence under control is not only possible but also within our reach in the next decade.

Gun violence is especially acute in cities such as Chicago, where I lead a research team that evaluates community violence intervention (CVI) programs. Over the past five years, we have evaluated a program called Chicago CRED, which serves hundreds of mostly young men on Chicago's South and West sides who are at extreme risk of being involved in gun violence. CRED provides participants with a modest stipend, a life coach, trauma treatment, education and job training. Among the metrics we track are the rate at which CRED participants are arrested for a violent crime and the rate of their getting shot, or "victimizations."

Our study, published Nov. 6 in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, shows that CRED participants who finished the two-year program experienced a 73 percent reduction in violence-related arrests compared with a similar group who did not take part in the program. Most participants stopped carrying guns, getting into fights, robbing or shooting people, etc. By any measure, the program is a success. Most important, it reduces gun crimes, saving lives.

What our research does not yet show is a decline in the number of CRED participants being shot that could be directly attributable to the program. That doesn't mean the program didn't reduce victimizations. On the contrary, earlier research on CRED suggests that participants are less likely to be shot after joining the program. But, in the technical world of social research, we cannot yet make a direct connection, although a correlation exists.

CRED participants live in neighborhoods with hundreds of armed and active street factions. In the handful of communities the program serves, it is still too small-scale to meet the level of need. By our estimate, for every CRED participant, there are at least three other young men at equally high risk. Similar ratios apply to CVI programs in many other Chicago communities suffering extreme levels of gun violence. As a result, convincing young people to put down their guns and pull their lives together is no guarantee of safety. As one CRED participant put it, "Playing defense can only go so far if the rest of the neighborhood is still playing offense."

www.TheNorwalkPatriot.com

CVI is an increasingly common approach to reducing gun violence in cities across the United States, from Boston to D.C. to New York to Los Angeles.

Chicago is rapidly becoming a leader in the field. Today, more than 20 CVI organizations serve 37 of Chicago's 77 neighborhoods. The total public and private investments from the city, county, state and private sources exceed $100 million per year.

Plans are underway to greatly expand CVI programs in Chicago over the next five to 10 years. As the work proceeds, we offer three key insights from our research.

The first is that it is critically important to keep participants in CVI programs. Rearrest and victimization are much more likely among program dropouts than among those who complete. The longer participants stay safe and avoid arrest, the more likely they are to leave street life behind.

Second, CVI must be integrated into an overall strategy that includes other public safety actors, including fair and just policing. In fact, we have documented how outreach workers have worked to support and enhance larger public safety efforts in Chicago, in part by successfully mediating hundreds of disputes and negotiating dozens of non-aggression agreements and peace treaties among opposing street gangs in hot spots.

Finally, we need to recognize that CVI alone cannot resolve much larger community conditions, such as poverty, segregation and unemployment. The absence of opportunity drives crime, which drives further disinvestment. We need to break the cycle and give people who would otherwise be engaged in gun violence an opportunity to enter and thrive in the legal economy.

The body of research supporting CVI is growing every day. We know that CVI programs can change people. We don't yet know whether they can change whole communities. But it's time to find out.

The Dodgers signed Ohtani. Now they need to get greedy.

■ If the Dodgers want to solidify their push for a championship, the Dodger's can't stop at signing Ohtani.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

10-year fantasy has become reality. A season of paying less, has paid off.

Dodger fans rejoice: Shohei Ohtani is coming to Los Angeles.

There is reason to be ecstatic. Ohtani is, without a doubt, the best baseball player that we have seen in our lifetime, and now, he joins an already star-studded squad that includes the likes of Mookie Betts and Freddie Freeman.

But that's the thing: the Dodgers always have a stacked team with playoff expectations. It's always anticipated that the Dodgers will make long playoff runs, and bids for World Series Championships.

The Dodgers have played October baseball for the past 11 years, 10 of which as the National League West Division Champions. For all that success and effort, they have won one World Series (and naysayers will say it doesn't count because it was during the shortened 2020 season).

Worse, Los Angeles's World Series dreams have been dashed early by division rivals (and let's be honest, inferior teams) for two years straight.

It's time to put the pedal to the metal, especially while Betts, Freeman, and Ohtani are in their primes. Ohtani is a huge boost to the team, but he alone will not get the Dodgers over the hump in 2024.

It's time for Los Angeles to get greedy.

If there was anything that stopped the Dodgers in their tracks last year, it was the utter collapse of their starting rotation heading into October.

The Dodgers entered the post season with an injured (and consistently inconsistent in the postseason) Clayton Kershaw, a rookie in Bobby Miller, and a home-run happy Lance Lyn; a shell of what was once a formidable pitching staff that included the likes of Walker Buehler, Tony Gonsolin, Dustin May, and Julio Urias.

It's still anyone's guess whether or not Kershaw will return next season; every off-season, there are talks of him heading home to Texas (be it to play or retire). If he does come back, it won't be until much later in the season after recently having shoulder surgery.

Buehler is expected to come back from Tommy John surgery. Along with the natural question marks that come along with that, he may be put on limited innings, according to General Manager Brandon Gomes (per an X post by Bill Plunkett on Nov. 8)

Speaking of Tommy John, Gonsolin is likely out for 2024. May could return, but Athletic reporter Fabian Ardaya reported that the Dodgers "are not going to push" him.

By no one's fault other than his own, Urias is done as a Dodger.

Ohtani's signing is an amazing splash to an already potent line-up, but while his bat is a huge addition, he won't see a Dodger mound until at least 2025.

The Dodgers desperately need to fortify their starting rotation.

If you follow the rumors, it seems like the Dodgers are already looking to do that. They have been linked to possible trades for Dylan Cease of the Chicago White Sox and Tyler Glasnow of the Tampa Bay Rays, as well as to free agents Yoshinobu Yamamoto (considered to be the number two free agent this offseason) and 2023 Cy Young winner Blake Snell.

To really shore things up, the Dodgers should look to bring at least one (if not two, or three) of these pitchers on board.

If I could have it my way, I'd sign Yamamoto and trade for Cease and Glasnow. Cease is young with a little more team control, and while having been largely injured over the last three seasons, Glasnow has been solid when healthy. I think it would be worth the risk (and to a certain extent, fun) to see how both would do in a Dodger's pitching system that has revitalized more than one hurler.

And to be completely fair, Snell is admittedly probably a better pitcher than the latter two mentioned, but he still gives me a case of the "Padres ick" that I can't seem to shake. Still, if the Dodgers were to sign him and he helped us win a World Series, I'm sure I could get over it.

The Dodgers also need to add another right-handed bat, and with Betts moving to the infield full-time, an outfielder would be ideal. Isiah Kiner-Falefa and Teoscar Hernandez come to mind, thought I don't think anyone would be mad at a Kike Hernandez reunion.

However, in the spirit of going all out, I present a name whom I'd love to see in Dodger Blue.

Like many others, I was captivated by Randy Arozarena during the 2020 World Series. The 2021 Rookie of the year slashed .264 / .364 / .425 last season, with 23 home runs, 83 RBIs, and 22 stolen bases. Where his numbers really explode, however, is in the postseason, where he has a career .336 / .414 / .690 slash line. Arozarena brings power and speed, and shines in the bright lights where other Dodger's faltered last year.

Not to mention, he's just fun to watch and brings an exciting energy to the game, a great fit for LA. Imagine it: Arozarena slides into second for a double. He picks himself up, dusts himself off, faces the dugout and crosses his arms. Mookie, Freddie, and Ohtani stare right back at him, smiles across their faces and arms in the air, waving side to side. Tell me it wouldn't be electric at Chavez Ravine; Dodger fans would undoubtedly accept and embrace him with open arms.

The Dodgers landed the big fish, but their work isn't done; it's time to double, or even triple down.

Does it border on excessive? Yeah, probably.

But momentum is a helluva drug, especially in baseball. Right now, the Dodgers have it, and they should use every bit of it to bring a championship back

Whittier High student debuts poetry book

■ Whittier High junior Julia Rae Rodriguez read from her book of poetry, "Dried Lavender & Sage," at an oncampus event last week.

WHITTIER - On a festive afternoon that saw Whittier High School embracing the wonder of literature, Cardinal junior Julia Rae Rodriguez read selections from her recentlypublished first book of poetry to a packed library filled with friends, classmates and teachers, the feature presentation during a ribbon-cutting ceremony honoring Whittier High alumni authors on Dec. 6.

Rodriguez joined Whittier High School Alumni Association Board Member Rob West and WHS history teacher Dean Myers to officially unveil a commemorative display case containing books written by Whitter High grads, including former President Richard Nixon, best-selling thriller writer John Saul, and lawyer/author William C. Gordon, whom the library is dedicated to.

After the ribbon-cutting, Rodriguez placed her new book, "Dried Lavender & Sage: Poems as I Grow," inside the display case, joining the alumni authors. Addressing the audience, Superintendent Dr. Monica Oviedo and Principal Tim Liggett praised Rodriguez for her creativity and dedication, and for opening the door for other students to share their voices.

"This is an amazing honor for me. It's a dream come true to read in front of my friends and classmates, but I was a little scared. It's so personal," Rodriguez said. "I encourage everyone to write down everything they can. I want to see more teenagers in publishing. Thank you so much to my parents for all they've done and my English teacher, Maxine Sweeney, for all of her support and advice."

Sweeney immediately recognized Rodriguez's writing talent as a freshman and encouraged her to write with purpose and chronicle her feelings as she transitioned from adolescent to

"Julia is an amazing individual," Sweeney said. "She has really found her strong Latina voice. Julia is exploring her roots and painting a landscape of her adolescence with her words. It's been wonderful to watch her grow. I'm so proud of her."

"Dried Lavender & Sage" is published by Skillful & Soulful Press, a bilingual children's book imprint which was founded by Rodriguez's mother, Sandra Gonzalez-Mora, with the goal of fostering a love of language and literacy. Rodriguez's stepfather, Rey Mora, provided illustrations for the book. Rodriguez had previously collaborated with her mother on the book, "Mommy Tell Me Why I Am Radiant."

Rodriguez is also an actor who has already starred in two Whittier High musical productions, "Mamma Mia" and "Legally Blonde (The Musical)," and is a member of the Next Level Theater Company in Whittier.

"Julia is an exceptionally talented artist, excellent student and campus leader," Liggett said. "She is the perfect choice to lead us in the ribbon-cutting, and to promote a discussion on why literature is such an important component in education. We are indebted to the Alumni Association, the estate of Willie Gordon, and Dean Myers for their support in bringing the commemorative display case to the library. This is a great day to be a Cardinal."

Myers is helping to coordinate a series of events leading up to Whittier High School's 125th anniversary, to be celebrated during the 2024-25 school year. Myers worked with a local contractor to design and build the display case for the library.

"We put the display case together to honor the great legacy of excellence of Whittier High School authors that have traversed these halls over the decades and to honor our newest author," Myers said. "Whittier High has a long and storied history. For the anniversary, we want to highlight the many great accomplishments of our esteemed alumni."
