Home prices drop in LA County

NORWALK – Home prices declined across Los Angeles County in December 2023, mirroring a statewide trend, while statewide homes sales in 2023 experienced their steepest decline since 2007, the California Association of Realtors said Wednesday.

The median price of an existing single-family home in Los Angeles County in December was $853,340, down from $897,990 in November but higher than the $799,670 in December 2022. The median price for the Los Angeles metro area in December was $760,000, down from $785,000 in November but higher than the $716,500 in December 2022.

Orange County's median price was unchanged in December at $1.3 million, up from $1,131,760 one year ago.

Statewide, the median price of an existing singlefamily home was $819,740 in December, down slightly from $822,200 in November, but above the $770,490 in December of 2022.

The state's highest median home price in December was San Mateo County's $1.8

December's sales pace was essentially unchanged from the revised 223,940 homes sold in November and was down 7.1% from a year ago, when a revised 241,070 homes were sold on an annualized basis. Sales of existing single-family homes in California have been below the 300,000 threshold since September 2022 and will likely last month. stay below that level in the first quarter of 2024, CAR said.

For the year as a whole, the state recorded an annual sales level of 257,630, a decline of 24.8% from the revised sales level of 342,530 reported in 2022.

"The housing market had a tough year in 2023 as a shortage of homes for sale and high costs of borrowing continued to have a negative impact on housing inventory and demand," CAR President Melanie Barker said. "With mortgage rates expected to come down in the next 12 months, home sales will bounce back as buyers and sellers goes, Jun is a lot more bigger," return to a more favorable said Jin. "He's more fit, more housing market. Home prices smart. He's like my big brother; should see a moderate increase I look up to him a lot.' in 2024 as well."

Sales in all major regions dipped in December on a yearover-year basis, including 6.2% in Southern California.

"Easing inflationary pressure and a soft economic outlook suggest that we will see some interest rate cuts in the upcoming year, which bode well for a housing market recovery," CAR Senior Vice President and Chief Economist Jordan Levine pounds on him." said.

"With rates declining to a 7-month low in late 2023, Americans are feeling more positive about the market, and we could begin to see some increase in market activity at the start of the year. The improvement is expected to be gradual as tight housing supply will remain the norm in 2024."

DOWNEY – No, you don't need to take a double take; two of Downey's newest officers are – in fact – twins.

There have already been some jokes shared by brothers Jun and Jin Park Yun's fellow officers about not being able to tell one from another.

Black bailiff alleges race discrimination in job denial

LOS ANGELES – A Black Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy is suing the county, alleging she was denied a transfer from her bailiff job at the Inglewood Courthouse because the head of the unit to which she sought a transfer did not want a Black woman within the ranks.

Deputy Porsche Heisser's Los Angeles Superior Court lawsuit alleges race and gender discrimination and failure to prevent discrimination. She seeks unspecified damages.

An LASD representative did not immediately reply to a request for comment on the suit brought Jan. 9.

Heisser was hired by the LASD in January 2006 and has been assigned to the Inglewood Courthouse since 2016, but in September 2021 she applied for a transfer to the Inglewood levy crew process serving unit within the Civil Management Bureau, the suit states.

The new job offered more pay, better working hours and flexibility that would have allowed Heisser more speedy promotions as well as a quicker path to retirement, the suit states. Heisser met every qualification for the position as outlined in the job bulletin and was first on the seniority list when it was published in October 2021, according to her suit.

"The problem for Heisser was that the supervisor of the Inglewood Levy Crew made it well known that he did not want a Black woman on his team," according to the complaint, which further states that the levy crew was exclusively male and predominantly Latino and white.

The unit's one Black male told Heisser that the supervisor was "openly strategizing ways to keep Heisser off the team," the suit

"Heisser was informed that the supervisor went as far as to state that over his dead body would he allow Heisser, as a Black female, onto his crew," the suit states.

The position was left vacant for more than 1 1/2 years and Heisser believes it was because the LASD did not want to fill the slot knowing that she was first on the seniority list, according to the suit, which further states that the plaintiff found out that in April 2023 the union rules were changing to allow selections for such positions without a seniority preference.

In addition, the LASD enacted a requirement that candidates have three years of patrol experience, one more than Heisser had, the suit states.

Heisser filed a grievance in September 2022 for being denied a transfer and ultimately the job was given to a male Latino deputy, the suit states.

Deputy who claims he was retaliated against seeks attorney fees

■ D'Andre Lampkin reported a retired deputy for inapproriate conduct and claims that action prompted retaliation.

By City News Service

LOS ANGELES - Although a jury awarded no damages to a Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy who alleged he suffered retaliation for reporting that he saw a retired deputy involved in a sex act in a car parked on county property in 2015, he is now seeking more than $800,000 in attorneys' fees from the county as the "prevailing party" in the case.

Last Feb. 10, a jury found that while Deputy D'Andre Lampkin was subjected to an adverse employment action, the county would have taken the same measures against him anyway for independent, legitimate reasons.

Lampkin was not awarded damages and county attorneys maintained their client won and was entitled to $95,375 in legal costs. But Lampkin's lawyers maintained he was the "prevailing party" because he won the liability issue regarding the adverse employment action, despite not being given any

On Oct. 13, Judge Maureen Duffy-Lewis concurred with the plaintiff's attorneys and also said the deputy can file his own costs bill. Lampkin's lawyers, who previously filed court papers asking for $52,045 in legal costs other than attorneys' fees, on Tuesday brought additional court papers seeking $832,275 to compensate them for their representation of the deputy. # Should we send out kids outside to play even if it's unsafe?

Neighborhoods around the country are creating 'play streets' to protect their children.

By Mary Sauer

Mary Sauer is a freelance parenting and health writer living in Kansas City.

Parents like me are coming to understand what science has been saying for years: Children need more free-range outdoor playtime.

At a time when more kids are staying inside, glued to screens, a substantial body of research connects the dots between independent, outdoor play and a child's well-being. Still, we're nervous about the increasing risks associated with traffic. It would be easier to get on board if streets weren't full of dangerous distracted drivers.

So we're left at a difficult intersection. Do we send our kids out of the house to play, even if it's at their own risk? Enough standing at the curb, wringing our hands. The solution is more play streets — a time-tested, but inadequately supported, program that creates temporary car-free zones where kids can safely gather.

The idea of play streets was born in the early 20th century in New York City. Cars began to dominate the roads, resulting in tragic deaths of children who were already using streets as play places. As a result, community leaders petitioned to shut down sections of streets so their kids could move around outside without risk.

Word spread. Britain enshrined play streets into law in 1938. Australia later adopted this program, and it's still present in some American cities today. Chicago, for example, has been issuing play-street permits since 2012 and aims to sponsor 150 or more play streets each summer. In Los Angeles, residents can apply for a closure of four to six hours that repeats on a weekly or monthly basis. The city even provides a "Box of Play" to encourage fun and physical activity during the closure.

But it's not just for our biggest cities or urban cores. Play streets would be perfect for quieter suburban neighborhoods like mine, where distracted drivers are used to having the right of way. I've watched the same driver barrel down the hill we live on twice a day, cellphone held in front of their face. The same literature that documented the widespread benefits of outdoor play also noted the negative effect traffic had on children: risk of injury, exposure to emissions and higher stress. My neighborhood lacks sidewalks, something that is also associated with increased traffic-related injuries for kids.

Unfortunately, organizing a play street event isn't easy or intuitive in most cities because there isn't funding or community-wide education. In Kansas City, Mo., our civic leaders gave play streets a loose framework during the pandemic, when the city was fast-tracking outdoor block party permits. Neighborhoods could use those permits to create traffic closures, allowing kids to play freely during blocks of time throughout the summer.

"We had 13 children learn how to ride a bike," one of our councilmen, Eric Bunch, told me of the few months of street closures they had in their neighborhood. "I talked to many parents who said, 'There's no way we would have done this without having this space for our kids to learn."

Unfortunately, the city didn't provide barriers, leaving residents to set up folding chairs or collapsible tables as makeshift barricades. Drivers weren't happy, and many of the informal blockades were vandalized and thrown away. Bunch, whose own children spent two pandemic summers playing on their street during intermittent closures, detailed these issues. He felt they could be mitigated through better awareness, official signage and real traffic barriers.

Educating and engaging citizens to organize could reduce resistance to play streets. Cities like mine could tap into existing funding through initiatives like Vision Zero, which aims for zero traffic deaths. When I asked Bunch what citizens might do to get play streets going in their community, he said contacting the local official who represents your neighborhood is a good first step. He also suggested connecting with advocacy groups that focus on walkability and safe transportation for people of all abilities. They might already be advocating play streets where you live.

For a generation of children spending much of their lives indoors and in front of screens, play-street events are a small change that could have a lasting impact on preserving childhood play.

Our fear of cancer is outdated

Nearly two-thirds of all cancers can now be treated so why do we associate a diagnosis with death?

By David Ropeik

David Ropeik, a retired instructor in the environmental management program at Harvard University's School of Continuing Education, is the author of "Curing Cancerphobia: How Risk, Fear, and Worry Mislead Us."

We need to rethink our fear of cancer. Our dread of the Emperor of All Maladies, learned decades ago, is now out of date and doing great harm on its own.

We have feared cancer more than any other disease since it became the No. 2 cause of death in the United States in the 1920s (after heart disease). Although the promise of "the cure" for cancer remains unfulfilled, we have made great progress. Cancer mortality in the United States is down 33 percent in just the past three decades. As many as twothirds of all cancers can now be treated as chronic conditions or cured outright.

Yet our deep fear of the disease stubbornly persists. And no wonder. Progress notwithstanding, a diagnosis of cancer is still thought to be a death sentence. When a national survey asked people for the first word that came to mind when they heard the word "cancer," more than half replied "death." And, indeed, this family of more than 200 types of disease continues to be a cruel killer, of roughly 600,000 Americans a year. People we know. People we care for.

But for all that harm, consider the cost of our cancerphobia, a fear that in some ways no longer matches the facts.

We now know that tens of thousands of common breast, prostate and thyroid cancers that are detected early never go on to do any harm. People "overdiagnosed" with these types of cancer are understandably frightened and usually choose more aggressive treatment than their clinical conditions require. Such "fear-ectomies" cause great harm, leading to side effects that range from moderate to severe and include death itself. We spend an estimated $5.2 billion a year on such clinically unnecessary treatment, 3 percent of the total spent on all cancer care annually.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported that in 2017, nearly 16 million people were screened for cancer even though they were younger or older than those for whom screening is recommended, based on who is more likely to be helped or harmed (by false positives, the side effects from follow-up diagnostic tests, and aggressive treatment for clinically non-threatening disease discovered in screening). We spend a minimum of $9.2 billion per year on this overscreening.

A majority of people believe that most cancer is caused by environmental carcinogens. Yet we now know that cancer is principally a natural disease of aging, which allows DNA mutations that cause uncontrolled cell growth to accumulate. More than half of those diagnosed with cancer in the United States are at least 65 years old, while 87 percent of those who die of it are 50 or older.

Yet governments spend hundreds of billions of dollars each year to reduce the risk from environmental carcinogens, vastly more than on any other environmental health threat, including fine-particulate air pollution, which kills more than 100,000 people a year. We spend billions on organic foods, vitamins and supplements, as well as many other products that promise to reduce our risk of cancer but don't. The public has voted against fluoridating the drinking water in public supply systems serving 30 percent of Americans, despite a lack of evidence to support the fear that fluoridation is a cancer risk. Fear of ionizing (nuclear) radiation, a vastly smaller cancer risk than commonly believed, has driven the cost of building nuclear power plants so high that this source of non-greenhouse-gas-emitting energy struggles to compete in the energy marketplace.

Heart disease kills roughly 15 percent more people than cancer each year. Yet the National Cancer Institute budget is $7.3 billion, while the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute spends only about $2 billion researching and working on prevention of heart disease. There is no "war on heart disease," no "heart disease moonshot" to compare to the calls for a "cancer moonshot," a metaphor evoked since the Nixon administration and currently an initiative of the Biden administration.

Our fear of cancer resists change, in part, because of its psychological nature. We are instinctively more afraid of threats that are personified by victims we know, that cause great pain and suffering, and over which we have no control — which is why screening is so appealing, because it at least gives us something we can do to protect ourselves.

Cancer fear also resists change because our beliefs still rest on what we learned long ago. The public is mostly unaware of the quiet, incremental progress that has made so many cancers treatable or curable. Very few know that many common cancers never kill. Our deep faith in screening belies the evidence that it has only modest benefit and does great damage, something people don't realize because screening advocates have vastly oversold the benefits and practically never mention the harm.

We cannot absolutely cure cancer, nor will we ever entirely erase our cancerphobia. The disease is an intrinsic product of our biology. The fear is driven by ancient psychological instincts. But in the interest of both our individual and public health, we need to promote awareness of the progress we've made fighting cancer. We need to understand and battle both the disease and our fear, because both are doing terrible harm.

Why good people don't run for office

The hassles of running for public office aren't worth it for most people.

By Larry Elder

Larry Elder is radio talk show host and former candidate for California governor.

During a campaign stop in Iowa, a man holding an item walked up to Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis. The man sarcastically said, "Gov. DeSantis, I want to present to you this participation trophy. Now you're probably not going to win the election, right. But we're proud of you for trying."

As the DeSantis security team pulled the prankster away, he shouted, "He's special. He's unique and he's our little snowflake." It turns out the campaign crasher co-hosts a comedy show about politics. According to the show's Wikipedia page, "Their primary focus is infiltrating conservative rallies and campaign evens to interact with, interview and troll politicians and their supporters."

This sort of thing demonstrates why good people, whether conservative or liberal, Democrat or Republican, refuse to run for office. It requires no real skill to mock a political candidate. But try to become one.

It is hard. It is grueling. It is physically, emotionally and spiritually taxing. I know. With no experience running for office, I took time from my radio and TV career to run for governor of California in 2021, and then to run for president of the United States for 2024. A typical day involved several meet-and-greets; print, radio and TV interviews; a fundraiser rally or two or three; and most difficult of all, a couple of hours were set aside to ask people for money, in person or by phone.

As for the meet-and-greets, many in the same day, the supporters and prospective supporters expect a vibrant, energetic, upbeat candidate, no matter how dog-tired you are.

If you are conservative, and since only 3% of journalists are Republican, expect unfair treatment, biased coverage and to have your words taken out of context or completely distorted. The closer you get to winning, the more the media focuses on accusations against you, however baseless.

Whether running as a Democrat or Republican, some 40% of the electorate will dislike you — and not just because of your policies, which you would expect, but because they dislike you personally. Run as a conservative Republican, the personal disdain becomes more intense. A 2018 Axios poll found that 61% of Democrats see Republicans as "racist/sexist/bigoted" versus 31% of Republicans who feel the same way about Democrats. A 2019 Quinnipiac poll found that half of U.S. voters consider Donald Trump "racist." A Washington Post poll found a whopping 83% of blacks consider him "racist." CNN's then-host Don Lemon said, "And anyone who ... is supporting him is complicit in their racism, as well."

Assuming you're not financially flush, and you've put your career, job or work on hold, you lose money. Many voters think personal expenses, whether mortgage, rent, college tuition, car insurance, etc., are paid for out of campaign funds. There is a term for that — stealing.

Voters and the media expect a candidate running for a national office to be knowledgeable about a range of issues, state, national and international. This includes, but is not limited to: gas prices; inflation; the budget; taxes; spending; the borders; crime; education; health care; immigration; Ukraine; China; Taiwan; Russia; Iran; Israel; Hamas; the Houthis; race relations; abortion; trade; the Jan. 6 "insurrection"; climate change; social security; Medicare; Medicaid; homelessness; the First Amendment; the Second Amendment; the Fourth Amendment; the Fifth Amendment; the 14th Amendment; whether the 2020 election was "stolen"; whether we have a two-tiered system of justice and many others. The candidate, while campaigning, must stay on top of current events and comment on the latest news.

And in the end, one person wins. Everybody else loses.

I endorse Trump for president. But DeSantis is a former House member and a successful governor. He is decorated Navy vet who served in a war zone and, among other commendations, earned a Bronze Star. So, how about a little respect?

As for the guy who tried to hand out the participation trophy, it appears he has not run for so much as poop inspector for San Francisco and did not volunteer for military service. Perhaps Lieutenant Commander DeSantis should have accepted the trophy — and given the jerk a pacifier.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 800-280-2832 or visit this internet website www.ndscorp.com/sales, using the file number assigned to this case 23-01841-US-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT's You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are a "representative of all eligible tenant buyers" you may be able to purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First 48 hours after this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 888-264-4010, or visit this internet website www.ndscorp.com, using the file number assigned to this case 23-01841-US-CA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as a "representative of all eligible tenant buyers" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. *Pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code, the potential rights described com Connie Hernandez, Trustee Sales Representative A-4805541 01/19/2024, 01/26/2024, 02/02/2024

America's health system isn't ready for the surge of seniors with disabilities

■ An estimated 19 million senior citizens live with a disability in the U.S., and healthcare is a challenge.

By Judith Graham KFF Health News

The number of older adults with disabilities — difficulty In survey results published with walking, seeing, hearing, memory, cognition, performing daily tasks such as bathing or using the bathroom — will soar in the decades ahead, as baby boomers enter their 70s, 80s, and 90s.

But the health care system isn't ready to address their Iezzoni has experienced these issues directly. She relies on a wheelchair and can't transfer to a fixed-height exam table. She told me she hasn't been weighed in years.

Among medical the consequences: People with disabilities receive less preventive care and suffer from poorer health than other people. as well as more coexisting medical conditions. Physicians too often rely on incomplete information in making recommendations. There are more barriers to treatment and patients are less satisfied with the care they do get.

Egregiously, during the pandemic, when crisis standards of care were developed, people with disabilities and older adults were deemed low priorities. These standards were meant to ration care, when necessary, given shortages of respirators and other potentially lifesaving interventions.

There's no starker example of the deleterious confluence of bias against seniors and people with disabilities. Unfortunately, older adults with disabilities routinely encounter twinned types of discrimination when seeking medical care.

Such discrimination would proposed by HHS in September. For the first time in 50 years, it would update Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, a landmark statute that helped

And it requires that electronic medical records, medical apps, and websites be made usable for people with various impairments and prohibits treatment policies based on stereotypes about people with disabilities, such as covid-era crisis standards of care.

> "This will make a really big difference to disabled people of all ages, especially older adults," said Alison Barkoff, who heads the HHS Administration for Community Living. She expects the rule to be finalized this year, with provisions related to medical equipment going into effect in 2026. Medical providers will bear extra costs associated with compliance.

Also in September, NIH designated people disabilities as a population with health disparities that deserves further attention. This makes a new funding stream available and "should spur data collection that allows us to look with greater precision at the barriers and structural issues that have held people with disabilities she was disabled," Iezzoni said. back," said Bonnielin Swenor, director of the Johns Hopkins University Disability Health Research Center.
