College breaks ground on new admin building

NORWALK - Cerritos College officials and the Board of Trustees, elected officials, and community members celebrated a groundbreaking for the new Student Services and Administration Building on Feb. 21.

Consisting of the student services, administration, and bookstore functions, the $95-million project is funded by Measure CC Bond dollars and a state funding allocation of $16 million secured by California Assembly Speaker Emeritus Anthony Rendon in 2022.

"Funding higher education has been a top priority for me and the state for the past decade. Our focus has been on supporting community college education, in particular, to help students facing financial struggles, similar to what I experienced. I'm proud to be an active member of this community and will continue to work towards making higher education accessible to all," said Speaker Emeritus Rendon.

Following the ceremonial groundbreaking, Cerritos College President/ Superintendent Dr. Jose Fierro announced that the student services portion of the building will be named in honor of Speaker Emeritus Rendon, a distinguished Falcon alumnus who continues to show longstanding support of the college and the community it serves. The student services portion Welcome Center, Counseling, Student Life, Student Equity & Success, Financial Aid, and Records, Admissions hyflex meeting rooms, and hyflex classrooms.

The 118,000-gross-squarefoot project will provide a grand frontage to the college and a welcoming campus gateway for the community.

"We thank our community for believing in the vision of our educational master plan and for voting "yes" on our Measure CC Bond, which allows us to build this new facility," said Cerritos College Board of Trustees President Dr. Sandra Salazar. "In dedicating this ground, we re-emphasize our commitment to ensuring quality higher education for many more generations of students."

"We are committed to being responsible with taxpayer funds continuously exploring other funding sources maximize our bond dollars and resources," said Dr. Fierro.

Construction is expected to be completed in 2026.

Santa Fe High seniors earn full scholarships after being named national scholars

■ Nevaeh Esteves-Parker and Zulema Gamboa both have 4.3 GPAs and will study on the East Coast.

SANTA FE SPRINGS -Santa Fe High School seniors Zulema Gamboa and Nevaeh Esteves-Parker have much in common. Friends since middle school, they have both become top scholars at Santa Fe High and aspire to pursue their higher education in locations where their learning experiences will be embellished by seasonal weather and traditions not common in Southern California.

Gamboa and Esteves-Parker, who share identical 4.3 GPAs, will soon start packing their bags to travel to prestigious colleges across the country after being named 2024 Posse Foundation scholars, earning full-ride scholarships to attend Hobart and William Smith Colleges in upstate New York and Dickinson College in Pennsylvania, respectively.

"It was a surreal moment when I found out I won the Posse scholarship," Gamboa said. "Being a Posse scholar feels like a blessing to me. In the beginning you think the odds are too great to be named winner, so now that I have received this honor, I feel so proud and blessed to be able to live this experience. So far, the journey has been great, and the people are amazing."

The unusual recruiting of the building will house the process of the Posse Foundation centers on a series of interviews with Posse-nominated students in more than 20 cities across the country, students who are looking to secure an admission at one of more than 60 Posse Foundation partner schools, many of which are private universities with small student populations. Posse's mission is to recruit a small group of students with diverse backgrounds and train them to be the leaders of tomorrow.

of grocery giants Kroger and the only one-stop grocery Albertsons.

Calfornia Attorney General RobBontaannounced the state's involvement in the litigation during a news conference in downtown Los Angeles, later issuing a statement calling the merger "bad for workers, for agricultural producers and for California communities."

"In some markets in Southern California, Kroger-Albertsons is expected to be

Nikki Haley needs to drop out

A protracted battle against Donald Trump puts her political career in jeopardy.

By W. James Antle III

W. James Antle III is executive editor of the Washington Examiner magazine and author of "Devouring Freedom: Can Government Ever Be Stopped?"

It is the end of the road for Nikki Haley. The former South Carolina governor and US ambassador to the United Nations has been the last major GOP primary candidate standing against former President Donald Trump, but her defeat in her home state Saturday night makes clear who the Republicans' 2024 presidential choice is.

Haley had steadfastly maintained that she wouldn't budge if South Carolina Republicans opted for Trump over her. She is still raising money at a prodigious pace and buying advertising space in states that will vote in early

But Haley has won nowhere, including a Nevada primary she lost by 30 points to "none of these candidates." Trump, who didn't compete in that contest, won Nevada's separate caucuses, which actually awarded delegates. She is not favored to win anywhere in the foreseeable future. Polling in Michigan and many of the Super Tuesday states suggests the results will get increasingly worse for Haley from here.

Republicans do have a history of rewarding past runnersup with the nomination in the future. This held true for Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush, Bob Dole, John McCain and Mitt Romney. And Trump's unprecedented legal situation may require Republicans to have a backup plan.

But a protracted primary fight with Trump won't set Haley up well for an attempt at securing the GOP nomination in 2028, or even as an "in case of emergency, break glass" option later this year.

Reagan and the others preceded their nominations by finishing second in genuinely competitive primary contests, which the 2024 race is not. At her current pace, Haley will not go to the 2024 Republican National Convention with many delegates. And given the deep commitment so many delegates have to Trump, Haley stretching out a long negative primary does not make her a likely Trump emergency replacement.

In the coming days, Haley will hear from many Republicans who don't want the Republican primary to end any time soon. But past primaries have gone on longer because other candidates have kept winning; Haley has no wins on the horizon. Even 2004 Democratic presidential candidate Howard Dean, whose famous scream was filled with erroneous predictions of victory, won his home state.

If Haley keeps going, she is likely to lose by progressively bigger margins as the race simultaneously shifts to multiple states and media markets. She may also be blamed for delaying the party's consolidation around and joint fundraising with Trump while Democrats are sparing President Joe Biden from an even semi-competitive primary.

It has been difficult for Republicans to run against Trump this year without being perceived as running against the GOP base. That is the position in which Haley now finds herself. If she plans to help Trump win in November or have a personal comeback in the future, she should heed her home state's voters and pull the plug.

Nikki Haley still has a shot

Haley is the only viable Republican option other than Trump.

By Geoff Duncan

Geoff Duncan served as Georgia's lieutenant governor from 2019-2023. He is the author of "GOP 2.0: How the 2020 Election Can Lead to a Better Way Forward for America's Conservative Party."

Nikki Haley's defeat in the South Carolina primary was not the desired outcome for her or any Republican hoping for a different choice than former President Donald Trump, but it shouldn't represent the death knell for her campaign. Immediately after the polls closed on Saturday night, CNN projected that the former South Carolina governor had come up short to Trump. It was an outcome that surprised absolutely no one, as Trump had enjoyed a 30-point lead in the polls before the primary, according to the FiveThirtyEight average.

The immediate delegate math and the polls may not be on Haley's side, but believe it or not, many other numbers are. Here are just a few.

First, the money. During the fourth quarter of 2023, Haley out-raised Trump, $24 million to $19 million. The number was more than double the amount she raised in the third quarter. In January 2024, as the rest of the GOP field winnowed, Haley's fundraising again bested Trump's, $9.8 million to $8.8 million.

Sure, Trump started the year with more cash on hand than Haley — $33 million to $14.5 million — but he also shelled out $23 million dollars in the fourth quarter from his campaign account on legal fees and payment to his own properties. Since then, he has also been assessed roughly half a billion dollars in civil legal penalties ($355 million plus interest for fraudulently inflating his net worth, as well as $83.3 million in a defamation ruling involving sexual assault allegations, which he has denied but in which a jury found him liable for sexual abuse). Even though Trump plans to appeal both rulings, they create headaches for a candidate who has always refused to be forthcoming about the state of his personal finances.

The bottom line: Campaigns typically end when they run out of money, which is not a situation Haley is expected to face anytime soon, especially with at least 10 high-dollar fundraisers scheduled in the days post-South Carolina.

Second, the age factor. Trump (77) and President Joe Biden (81) are a combined 158 years old. Nearly six in 10 voters (59%) believe both frontrunners are old for the job, according to an ABC News/Ipsos poll. Father Time is undefeated, and neither man is getting any younger. Meanwhile, at 52, Haley is a quarter-century younger than both, and much closer to the median American age of 38.9. She would be the first fully Generation X president, breaking Baby Boomers' stranglehold of the White House in the 21st century (except for Biden, whose 1942 birthdate falls in the Silent Generation).

Biden's verbal stumbles are well-documented (most recently his conflation of the presidents of Egypt and Mexico at a press conference meant to dispel concerns about his mental fitness), but lately Trump has been giving him a run for his money, confusing Haley for former House Speaker Nancy Pelosi in his attempt to shift blame for the events of January 6, 2021, and mixing up the leaders of Hungary and Turkey.

Third, there's Super Tuesday. Of the 16 states that vote on March 5, 11 are not limited only to registered Republicans. Put another way, of the 874 delegates up for grabs on Super Tuesday, about two-thirds are in states with at least semiopen primaries.

Trump and his allies have grumbled about independents' ability to compete in GOP primaries. In the lead-up to last month's New Hampshire primary, he complained that state law allowed "Democrats to vote in the Republican primary." The claim was false, but it offers a valuable insight into Trump's worldview: His appeal is extremely limited beyond his base. His low support among swing voters in the suburbs cost Republicans dearly in 2020. A recent NPR/PBS NewsHour/Marist poll found that almost two-thirds of Americans living in suburban areas hold an unfavorable opinion of Trump, and that Biden is leading Trump by 16 points with suburban registered voters.

Finally, and most importantly, there are world affairs. The suspicious death of Russian opposition leader Alexey Navalny has laid bare the importance of American leadership in the world. After pledging "devastating" consequences if Navalny were to die in prison, Biden's words have yet to be met by serious action. Not to be outdone, Trump likened Navalny's death to his own self-inflicted legal dilemma. Trump notably declined to condemn Russian President Vladimir Putin.

To her credit, Haley has taken dead aim at both Trump and Putin, accusing the former of emboldening the latter. She called Trump's encouragement of Russia to invade NATO countries that do not meet their defense spending obligations "bone-chilling." In words unlikely to ever come from Trump's mouth, Haley added, "Vladimir Putin is not cool. This is not someone we want to associate with. This is not someone that we want to be friends with."

There is only one viable exit ramp from the Trump-Biden sequel, and that is Haley. During the 2016 South Carolina primary, there were still six serious candidates in the GOP

There is no reason for Haley to stop now. Even if the Trump fever doesn't break in time for 2024, there's always 2028, and time for GOP voters to wake up to what might have been, and still might be.

A new tactic to end the tampon tax

Women shouldn't be punished financially for having menstrual cycles.

By Laura Strausfeld

Laura Strausfeld is the executive director of Period Law.

You might not have noticed, but last November the Streamlined Sales Tax Governing Board — the organization responsible for making sales tax collection as easy as possible for its 24 member states — voted unanimously to adopt a new term for "feminine hygiene products."

Now they will be called "menstrual discharge collection devices."

Yuck, you say?

About time, I say.

My nonprofit, Period Law, has been fighting to end the sales tax on menstrual products since 2016. We made our case to the national sales tax group that "feminine hygiene products" is vague and unhelpful. More important, it's confusing to male legislators.

A little womansplaining might be called for: These items — tampons, menstrual pads, cups and liners — are regulated by the Food and Drug Administration as medical devices and tagged by the IRS as qualified medical expenses. They are essential for health. Like the many other devices and drugs people buy tax-free across the country, they deserve to be treated as the necessities they are.

Our hope is that the clarity of this unwieldy term will end the unfair, unconstitutional "tampon tax" for good. From now on, during hearings in male-dominated state legislatures, feminine hygiene will no longer be up for debate. The question in front of tax, revenue and finance committees will be whether a menstrual discharge collection device (okay, let's call them MDCDs) is a medical device that has been improperly left off the sales tax exemption list. In remarks to the Indiana Senate, bill sponsor Shelli Yoder called the taxing of MDCDs a "60-year mistake."

The name change could prevent a recurrence of what happened during a 2021 Wyoming hearing when a state senator argued before an overwhelmingly male revenue committee that removing the tax on feminine hygiene products "favors one sex over the other" and proposed including male hygiene products, too, such as "soaps and foot powder." The bill unsurprisingly died. The term "menstrual discharge collection device" effectively eliminates the argument about whether there is a comparable category of medically necessary products used only by men. (Spoiler: There isn't.)

After I presented on this issue at last summer's National Conference of State Legislatures, a male state sales tax expert pulled me aside with a tip: "The most compelling thing you said is that people will bleed through their clothes without these products. Some people may not have known that." It was news to me that all men don't know this, but upon reflection, it makes sense. We women have been very good at hiding the reality of having periods — including that they often start unexpectedly.

If we've received any pushback on menstrual discharge collection devices, it's from women. One female tax administrator called to share that her female colleagues found the term "cringy." Once she witnessed unanimous approval at the November Streamlined Sales Tax board meeting — the majority of attendees being men — she let me know she was now on board.

Already this year, Kentucky and Indiana have introduced bills using the MDCD terminology. All states but Idaho have at one point introduced a bill to end the tampon tax — and the most recent state to end its tax is Texas. The tax comptroller there described the tax as "archaic" and successfully urged the Republican state leadership to stop collecting close to $30 million a year — but less than 0.01 percent of state revenue — on purchases of these

In a year of ongoing budget surpluses, there's no reason the remaining states shouldn't follow the example of Texas and the other 19 states that have ended the tampon tax since 2016. As the new name makes clear, MDCDs are nondiscretionary purchases used monthly by women for an average of 40 years. Perhaps if we had called them menstrual discharge collection devices years ago, we wouldn't be fighting this battle today.

NLMUSD pushes to meet educational goals during mid-year update

■ NLMUSD shared an update on meeting the LCAP goals this academic year and the plan for student success.

By Vincent Medina Contributor

NORWALK Norwalk La-Mirada Unified School District received the mid-year Local Control and Accountability Plan (LCAP) during their board of education meeting on Monday.

The LCAP outlines the district's plan to improve student engagement, education, attendance, accessibility and expenditures. Through the midyear update, the community is updated on the district's progress to meet its goals this

Assistant superintendent Kristine Cvar and coordinator Michelle Centeno presented the LCAP, and began by explaining the Local Control Funding Formula (LCFF) funds and LCFF supplemental/ concentration grants. The grants are distributed depending on the needs of students, allowing the district more freedom to decide how funds are spent.

"These go to the districts with our unduplicated pupils (UDP) that are over 55%, and Norwalk La-Mirada has over 55% of UDP," Cvar explained.

An unduplicated pupil is a student who is categorized as an English learner and qualifies for free/reduced meals or is in a

During public comments Jose Manso, a dual-language kindergarten teacher at Dolland Elementary School, began by demanding the school district increase the supplemental dual stipends. He was accompanied by additional dual-language teachers in the district including Loren Aguirre, a fourth grade dual-language teacher at Edmondson Elementary School.

Dual-language teachers receive a stipend of $1,591 a year, according to Manso. He also noted the district offers a stipend of $3,182 a year to combination teachers, who teach students from two consecutive grades in one classroom.

"A combo teacher plans for two grades. We plan and translate every day for two languages," Manso said. "Our qualification is that we hold a [Bilingual, Crosscultural, Language and Academic Development] BCLAD credential while the combo Teachers demanded better teachers don't require any alongside extra qualifications.
